THE LIFE
OF

---

THIS illustrious poet was born at London in 1688 and was descended from a good family of that name in Oxfordshire, the head of which was the Earl of Downe, whose sole heiress married the Earl of Lindsey. His father, a man of primitive simplicity and integrity of manners, was a merchant of London, who, upon the Revolution, quitted trade, and converted his effects into money, amounting to near 10,000*l.* with which he retired into the country; and died in 1717, at the age of seventy-five.

Our poet's mother, who lived to a very advanced age, being ninety-three years old when she died, in 1733, was the daughter of William Turner, Esq. of York. She had three brothers, one of whom was killed, another died in the service of King Charles; and the eldest, following his fortunes, and becoming a general officer in Spain, left her what estate remained after sequestration and forfeitures of her family. To these circumstances our poet alludes in his Epistles to Dr. Arbuthnot, in which he mentions his parents:

Of gentle blood (part shed in honour's cause,
While yet in Britain honour had applause)
Each parent sprang—What fortune, pray?—their own;
And better got than Bestia's from the throne.
Born to no pride, inheriting no strife,
Nor marrying discord in a noble wife;
Stranger to civil and religious rage,
The good man walk'd innoxious through his age:

No courts he saw, no suits would ever try;
Nor dared an oath, nor hazarded a lie;
Unlearn'd, he knew no schoolman's subtle art,
No language but the language of the heart;
By nature honest, by experience wise,
Healthy by temp'rance and by exercise,
His life, though long, to sickness pass'd unknowa;
His death was instant, and without a groan.

The education of our great author was attended with circumstances very singular, and some of them extremely unfavourable; but the amazing force of his genius fully compensated the want of any advantage in his earliest instruction. He owed the knowledge of his letters to an aunt; and having learned very early to read, took great delight in it, and taught himself to write by copying after printed books, the characters of which he would imitate to great perfection. He began to compose verses farther back than he could well remember; and at eight years of age, when he was put under one Taverner, a priest, who taught him the rudiments of the Latin and Greek tongues at the same time, he met with Ogilby's Homer, which gave him great delight; and this was increased by Sandy's Ovid. The raptures which these authors, even in the disguise of such translations, then yielded him, were so strong, that he spoke of them with pleasure ever after. From Mr. Taverner's tuition he was sent to a private school at Twyford, near Winchester, where he continued about a year, and was then removed to another near Hyde Park Corner; but was so unfortunate as to lose under his two last masters what he had acquired under the first.

While he remained at this school, being permitted to go to the playhouse with some of his school fellows of a more advanced age, he was so charmed with dramatic representations, that he formed the translation of the Iliad into a play, from several of the speeches in Ogilby's translation, connected with verses of his own; and the several parts were performed by the upper boys of the school, except that of Ajax by the master's gardener. At the age of twelve our young poet went to his father, to reside at his house at Binfield, in Windsor Forest, where he was, for a few months, under the tuition of another priest, with as little success as before; so that he resolved now to become his own master, by reading those classic writers which gave him most entertainment; and by this method, at fifteen he gained a ready habit in the learned languages, to which he soon after added the French and Italian. Upon his retreat to the forest, he became first acquainted with the writings of Waller, Spenser, and Dryden; in the last of which he immediately found what he wanted, and the poems of that excellent writer were never out of his hands; they became his model, and from them alone he learned the whole magic of his versification.

The first of our author's compositions now extant in print, is an Ode on Solitude, written before he was twelve years old; which, considered as the production of so early an age, is a perfect master-piece; nor need he be ashamed of it had it been written in the meridian of his genius; while it breathes the most delicate spirit of poetry, it at the same time demonstrates his love of solitude, and the rational pleasures which attend the retreats of a contented country life.

Two years after this he translated the First Book of Statius's Thebais, and wrote a copy of verses on Silence, in imitation of the Earl of Rochester's Poem on Nothing. Thus we find him no sooner capable of holding the pen than he employed it in writing verses:

"He lisp'd in numbers, for the numbers came."

Though we have had frequent opportunity to observe that poets have given early displays of genius yet we cannot recollect that amongst the inspired tribe one can be found who, at the age of twelve, could produce so animated an ode, or at the age of fourteen, translate from the Latin. It had been reported, indeed, concerning Mr. Dryden, that when he was at Westminster school, the master, who has assigned a poetical task to some of the boys of writing a paraphrase on our Saviour's miracle of turning water into wine, was perfectly astonished when young Dryden presented him with the following line, which he asserted was the best comment could be written upon it :

The conscious water saw its God and blush'd.

This was the only instance of an early appearance of genius in this great man, for he was turned of thirty before he acquired any reputation : an age in which Mr. Pope's was in its full distinction.

The year following that in which Mr. Pope wrote his poem on Silence, he began an epic poem, entitled Alcander, which he afterwards very judiciously committed to the flames, as he did likewise a comedy and a tragedy, the latter taken from a story in the legend of St. Genevieve, both of these being the product of those early days ; but his Pastorals, which were written in 1704, when he was only sixteen years of age, were esteemed by Sir William Trumbal, Mr. Granville, Mr. Wycherley, Mr. Walsh, and other of his friends, too valuable to be condemned to the same fate.

The three great writers of pastoral dialogue, which Mr. Pope, in some measure, seems to imitate, are Theocritus, Virgil, and Spenser ; Mr. Pope is of opinion that Theocritus excels all others in nature and simplicity.

That Virgil, who copies Theocritus, refines on his original ; and in all points in which judgment has the principal part, is much superior to his master.

That among the moderns, their success has been greatest who have most endeavoured to make these ancients their pattern. The most considerable genius appears in the famous Tasso, and our Spenser. Tasso, in his Aminta, as far excelled all pastoral writers, as in his Gierusalemme, he has outdone the epic poets of his own country. But as this piece seems to have been the original of a new sort of poem, the pastoral comedy in Italy, it cannot so well be considered as a copy of the ancients. Spenser's Calender, in Mr. Dryden's opinion, is the most complete work of this kind which any nation has produced ever since the time of Virgil; but this he said before Mr. Pope's Pastorals appeared.

Mr. Walsh pronounces on our Shepherd's boy (as Mr. Pope called himself,) the following judgment, in a letter to Mr. Wycherley:

"The verses are very tender and easy. The Author seems to have a particular genius for that kind of poetry, and a judgment that much exceeds the years you told me he was of. It is no flattery at all to say that Virgil had written nothing so good at his age. I shall take it as a favour if you will bring me acquainted with him; and if he will give himself the trouble, any morning, to call at my house, I shall be very glad to read the verses with him, and give him my opinion of the particulars more largely than I can well do in this letter."

Thus early was Mr. Pope introduced to the acquaintance of men of genius, and so improved every advantage, that he made a more rapid progress towards a consummation in fame than any of our former English poets. His Messiah, his Windsor Forest, (the first part of which was written at the same time with his pastorals) his Essay on Criticism in 1709, and his Rape of the Lock in 1712, established his poetical character in such a manner that he was called upon by the public voice to enrich our language with the translation of the Iliad, which he began at twenty-five, and executed in five years. This was published for his own benefit, by subscription, the only kind of reward which he received for his writings, which do honour to our age and country, his religion rendering him incapable of a place, which the Lord Treasurer Oxford used to express his concern for, but without offering him a pension, as the Earl of Halifax and Mr. Secretary Craggs afterwards did, though Mr. Pope declined it.

The reputation of Mr. Pope gaining every day upon the world, he was caressed, flattered, and railed at, according as he was feared or loved by different persons. Mr. Wycherley was among the first authors of established reputation who contributed to advance his fame, and with whom he for some time lived in the most unreserved intimacy. This poet in his old age, conceived a design of publishing his poems; and as he was but a very imperfect master of numbers, he intrusted his manuscripts to Mr. Pope, and submitted them to his corrections. The freedom which our young bard was under a necessity to use, in order to polish and refine what was in the original rough, unharmonious, and indelicate, proved disgustful to the old gentleman, then near seventy, who perhaps was a little ashamed that a boy at sixteen should so severely correct his works. Letters of dissatisfaction were written by Mr. Wycherley, and at last he informed him, in few words, that he was going out of town, without mentioning to what place, and did not expect to hear from him till he came back. This cold indifference extorted from Mr. Pope a protestation, that nothing should induce him ever to write to him again. Notwithstanding this peevish behaviour of Mr. Wycherley, occasioned by jealousy and infirmities, Mr. Pope preserved a constant respect and reverence for him while he lived, and after his death lamented him. In a letter to Edward Blount, Esq. written immediately upon the death of this poet, he has there related some anecdotes of Wycherley, which we shall here insert.

“ Dear Sir,

“ I know of nothing that will be so interesting to you at present as some circumstances of the last act of that eminent comic poet, and our friend, Wycherley. He had often told me, as I doubt not he did all his acquaintance, that he would marry as soon as his life was despaired of; accordingly, a few days before his death he underwent the ceremony, and joined together those two sacraments, which wise men say should be the last we receive; for, if you observe, matrimony is placed after extreme unction in our catechism, as a kind of hint as to the order of time in which they are to be taken. The old man then lay down satisfied in the conscience of having, by this one act, paid his just debts, obliged a woman who, he was told, had merit, and shown an heroic resentment of the ill usage of his next heir. Some hundred pounds which he had with the lady discharged those debts; a jointure of four hundred a year made her a recompense; and the nephew he left to comfort himself, as well as he could, with the miserable remains of a mortgaged estate. I saw our friend twice after this was done, less peevish in his sickness than he used to be in his health, neither much afraid of dying, nor (which in him had been more likely) much ashamed of marrying. The evening before he expired he called his young wife to the bed-side, and earnestly entreated her not to deny him one request, the last he should ever make: upon her assurance of consenting to it, he told her, ‘ My dear, it is only this, that you will never marry an old man again.’ I cannot help remarking, that sickness, which often destroys both wit and wisdom, yet seldom has power to remove that talent we call humour: Mr. Wycherley showed this even in this last compliment, though I think his request a little hard; for why should he bar her from doubling her jointure on the same easy terms."

One of the most affecting and tender compositions of Mr. Pope, is his Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, built on a true story. We are informed in the Life of Pope, for which Curl obtained a patent, that this young lady was a particular favourite of the poet, though it is not ascertained whether he himself was the person from whom she was removed. This young lady was of very high birth, possessed an opulent fortune, and under the tutorage of an uncle, who gave her an education suitable to her titles and pretensions. She was esteemed a match for the greatest peer in the realm, but in her early years she suffered her heart to be engaged by a young gentleman, and in consequence of this attachment, rejected offers made to her by persons of quality, seconded by the solicitations of her uncle. Her guardian, being surprised at this behaviour, set spies upon her, to find out the real cause of her indifference. Her correspondence with her lover was soon discovered, and, when urged upon that topic, she had too much truth and honour to deny it. The uncle finding that she would make no efforts to disengage her affection, after a little time forced her abroad, where she was received with a ceremony due to her quality, but restricted from the conversation of every one but the spies of this severe guardian, so that it was impossible for her lover even to have a letter delivered into her hands. She languished in this place a considerable time, bore an infinite deal of sickness, and was overwhelmed with the profoundest sorrow. Nature being wearied out with continual distress, and being driven at last to despair, the unfortunate lady, as Mr. Pope justly calls her, put an end to her own life, having bribed a maid-servant to procure her a sword. She was found upon the ground weltering in her blood. The severity of the laws of the place, where this fair unfortunate perished, denied her Christian burial, and she was interred without solemnity, or even any attendants to perform the last offices of the dead, except some young people of the neighbourhood, who saw her put into common ground, and strewed the grave with flowers.

The poet, in the Elegy, takes occasion to mingle with the tears of sorrow, just reproaches upon her cruel uncle, who drove her to this violation.

But thou, false guardian of a charge too good,
 Thou base betrayer of a brother's blood !
 See on those ruby lips the trembling breath,
 Those cheeks now fading at the blast of death :
 Lifeless the breast which warm'd the world before ;
 And those love-darting eyes must roll no more.

The conclusion of this elegy is irresistibly affecting.

So peaceful rests, without a stone, a name
 Which once had beauty, titles, wealth and fame ;
 How lov'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
 To whom related, or by whom begot ;
 A heap of dust alone remains of thee ;
 'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be !

No poem of our author's more deservedly obtained him reputation than his Essay on Criticism. Mr. Addison in his Spectator, No. 253, has celebrated it with such profuse terms of admiration, that it is really astonishing to find the same man endeavouring afterwards to diminish that fame he had contributed to raise so high.

"The Art of Criticism," says he, "which was published some months ago, is a master-piece in its kind. The observations follow one another, like those in Horace's Art of Poetry, without that methodical regularity which would have been requisite in a prose writer. They are some of them uncommon, but such as the reader must assent to when he sees them explained with that elegance and perspicuity with which they are delivered. As for those which are the most known and the most received, they are placed in so beautiful a light, and illustrated with such apt allusions, that they have in them all the graces of novelty, and make the reader, who was before acquainted with them, still more convinced of their truth and solidity. And here give me leave to mention what Monsieur Boileau has so well enlarged upon in the Preface to his Works, that wit and fine writing do not consist so much in advancing things that are new, as in giving things that are known an agreeable turn. It is impossible for us who live in the latter ages of the world, to make observations in criticism, morality, or any art and science, which have not been touched upon by others. We have little else left us but to represent the common sense of mankind in more strong, more beautiful, or more uncommon lights. If a reader examines Horace's Art of Poetry, he will find but few precepts in it which he may not meet with in Aristotle, and which were not commonly known by all the poets of the Augustan age. His way of expressing and applying them, not his invention of them, is what we are chiefly to admire.—

“Longinus, in his Reflections, has given us the same kind of sublime which he observes in the several passages which occasioned them. I cannot but take notice that our English author has, after the same manner, exemplified several of his precepts in the very precepts themselves.” He then produces some instances of a particular kind of beauty in the numbers, and concludes with saying, “That we have three poems in our tongue of the same nature, and each a master-piece in its kind; the Essay on Trans-

ated Verse, the Essay on the Art of Poetry, and the Essay on Criticism."

In the lives of Addison and Tickell, some general hints concerning the quarrel have been thrown out, which subsisted between our poet and the former of these gentlemen; here it will not be improper to give a more particular account of it.

The author of Mist's Journal positively asserts, "That Mr. Addison raised Pope from obscurity, obtained him the acquaintance and friendship of the whole body of our nobility, and transferred his powerful influence with those great men to this rising bard, who frequently levied, by that means, unusual contributions on the public. No sooner was his body lifeless, but this author, reviving his resentment, libelled the memory of his departed friend, and, what was still more heinous, made the scandal public."

When this charge of ingratitude and dishonour was published against Mr. Pope, to acquit himself of it he called upon any nobleman whose friendship, or any one gentleman whose subscription, Mr. Addison had procured to our author, to stand forth and declare it, that truth might appear. But the whole libel was proved a malicious story by many persons of distinction, who several years before Mr. Addison's decease, approved those verses denominated a libel, but which were, it is said, a friendly rebuke, sent privately, in our author's own hand, to Mr. Addison himself, and never made public till by Curll, in his Miscellanies, 12mo. 1727. The lines, indeed, are elegantly satirical, and, in the opinion of many unprejudiced judges, who had opportunities of knowing the character of Mr. Addison, are no ill representation of him. Speaking of the poetical triflers of the times, who had declared against him, he makes a sudden transition to Addison:—

Peace to all such! But were there one whose fires
 True genius kindles, and fair fame inspires;
 Blest with each talent and each art to please,
 And born to write, converse, and live with ease;
 Should such a man, too fond to rule alone,
 Bear, like the Turk, no rival near the throne,
 View him with scornful, yet with jealous eyes,
 And hate for arts that caus'd himself to rise;
 Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
 And, without sneering, others teach to sneer;
 Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
 Just hint a fault, and hesitate dislike;
 Alike reserv'd to blame or to commend,
 A tim'rous foe, and a suspicious friend;
 Dreading e'en fools; by flatterers besieg'd;
 And so obliging that he ne'er oblig'd:
 Like Cato give his little senate laws,
 And sit attentive to his own applause;
 While wits and Templars ev'ry sentence raise,
 And wonder with a foolish face of praise;
 Who but must laugh, if such a man there be!
 Who would not weep, if Atticus were he!

Some readers may think these lines severe, but the treatment he received from Mr. Addison was more than sufficient to justify them, which will appear when we particularize an interview between these two poetical antagonists, procured by the warm solicitations of Sir Richard Steele, who was present at it, as well as Mr. Gay.

Mr. Jervas being one day in company with Mr. Addison, the conversation turned upon Mr. Pope, for whom Addison, at that time, expressed the highest regard, and assured Mr. Jervas that he would make use not only of his interest, but of his art likewise, to do Mr. Pope service; he then said, he did not mean his art of poetry, but his art at court, and protested, notwithstanding many insinuations were spread, that it should not be his fault if there was not the best understanding and intelligence between them. He observed, that Dr. Swift might have carried him too far among the enemy during the animosity, but now all was safe, and Mr. Pope, in his opinion, was escaped. When Mr. Jervas communicated this conversation to Mr. Pope, he made this reply: "The friendly office you endeavour to do between Mr. Addison and me, deserves acknowledgments on my part. You thoroughly know my regard to his character, and my readiness to testify it by all ways in my power; you also thoroughly know the meanness of that proceeding of Mr. Phillips, to make a man I so highly value, suspect my disposition to wards him. But as, after all, Mr. Addison must be judge in what regards himself, and as he has seemed not to be a very just one to me, so I must own to you I expect nothing but civility from him, how much soever I wish for his friendship; and, as for any offers of real kindness or service, which it is in his power to do me, I should be ashamed to receive them from a man who has no better opinion of my morals than to think me a party man, nor of my temper than to believe me capable of maligning or envying another's reputation as a poet. In a word, Mr. Addison is sure of my respect at all times, and of my real friendship whenever he shall think fit to know me for what I am.

Some years after this conversation, at the desire of Sir Richard Steele, they met. At first, a very cold civility, and nothing else, appeared on either side: for Mr. Addison had a natural reserve and gloom at the beginning of an evening, which, by conversation and a glass, brightened into an easy cheerfulness. Sir Richard Steele, who was a most social benevolent man, begged of him to fulfil his promise in dropping all animosity against Mr. Pope. Mr. Pope then desired to be made sensible how he had offended, and observed, that the translation of Homer, if that was the great crime, was undertaken at the request, and almost at the command, of Sir Richard Steele

He entreated Mr. Addison to speak candidly and freely, though it might be with ever so much severity rather than, by keeping up forms of complaisance conceal any of his faults. This Mr. Pope spoke in such a manner as plainly indicated he thought Mr. Addison the aggressor, expected him to condescend, and own himself the cause of the breach between them. But he was disappointed; for Mr. Addison, without appearing to be angry, was quite overcome with it. He began with declaring that he always had wished him well, had often endeavoured to be his friend, and in that light advised him, if his nature was capable of it, to divest himself of part of his vanity, which was too great for his merit; that he had not arrived yet to that pitch of excellence he might imagine, or think his most partial readers imagined; that when he and Sir Richard Steele corrected his verses, they had a different air; reminding Mr. Pope of the amendment, by Sir Richard, of a line in the poem called the Messiah;

He wipes the tears for ever from our eyes.

Which is taken from the prophet Isaiah:—"The Lord God will wipe tears from off all faces;"

From every face he wipes off every tear.

And it stands so altered in the newer editions of Mr. Pope's works. He proceeded to lay before him the mistakes and inaccuracies hinted at by the writers who had attacked Mr. Pope, and added many things which he himself objected to. Speaking of his Translation in general, he said, that he was not to be blamed for endeavouring to get so large a sum of money, but that it was an ill-executed thing, and not equal to Tickell, which had all the spirit of Homer. Mr. Addison concluded, in a low hollow voice of feigned temper, that he was not solicitous about his own fame as a poet; that he had quitted the Muses to enter into the business of the public, and that all he spoke was through friendship to Mr. Pope, whom he advised to have a less exalted sense of his own merit.

Mr. Pope could not well bear such repeated reproaches, but boldly told Mr. Addison, that he appealed from his judgment to the public, and that he had long known him too well to expect any friendship from him; upbraided him with being a pensioner from his youth, sacrificing the very learning purchased by the public money to a mean thirst of power; that he was sent abroad to encourage literature, in place of which he had always endeavoured to suppress merit. At last the contest grew so warm that they parted without any ceremony, and Mr. Pope, upon this, wrote the foregoing verses, which are esteemed too true a picture of Mr. Addison.

In this account, and indeed in all other accounts which have been given concerning this quarrel, it does not appear that Mr. Pope was the aggressor. If Mr. Addison entertained suspicions of Mr. Pope's being carried too far among the enemy, the danger was certainly Mr. Pope's, and not Mr. Addison's. It was his misfortune, and not his crime. If Mr. Addison should think himself capable of becoming a rival to Mr. Pope, and, in consequence of this opinion, publish a translation of part of Homer at the same time with Mr. Pope's, and if the public should decide in favour of the latter, by reading his translation, and neglecting the other, can any fault be imputed to Mr. Pope? could he be blamed for exerting all his abilities in so arduous a province? And was it his fault that Mr. Addison (for the first Book of Homer was undoubtedly his) could not translate to please the public? Besides, was it not somewhat presumptuous to insinuate to Mr. Pope that his verses bore another face when he corrected them, while, at the same time, the translation of Homer, which he had never seen in manuscript, bore away the palm from that very translation which he himself asserted was done in the true spirit of Homer? In matters of genius the public judgment seldom errs, and in this case posterity has confirmed the sentence of that age which gave the preference to Mr. Pope; for his translation is in the hands of all readers of taste, while the other is seldom regarded but as a foil to Pope's.

It would appear as if Mr. Addison were himself so immersed in party business as to contract his benevolence to the limits of a faction, which was infinitely beneath the views of a philosopher, and the rules which that excellent writer himself established. If this was the failing of Mr. Addison, it was not the error of Pope, for he kept the strictest correspondence with some persons whose affection to the Whig interest was suspected, yet was his name never called in question. While he was in favour with the Duke of Buckingham, the Lords Bolingbroke, Oxford, and Harcourt, Dr. Swift, and Mr. Prior, he did not drop his correspondence with the Lord Halifax, Mr. Craggs, and most of those who were at the head of the Whig interest. A professed Jacobite one day remonstrated to Mr. Pope, that the people of his party took it ill that he should write with Mr. Steele upon ever so indifferent a subject; at which he could not help smiling, and observed, that he hated narrowness of soul in any party; and that if he renounced his reason in religious matters, he should hardly do it on any other; and that he could pray not only for opposite parties, but even for opposite religions. Mr. Pope considered himself as a citizen of the world, and was therefore obliged to pray for the prosperity of mankind in general. As a son of Britain, he wished those councils might be suffered by Providence to prevail which were most for the interest of his native country ; but as politics was not his study, he could not always determine, at least with any degree of certainty, whose councils were best : and had charity enough to believe that contending parties might mean well. As taste and science are confined to no country, so ought they not to be excluded from any party, and Mr. Pope had an unexceptionable right to live upon terms of the strictest friendship with every man of parts, to which party soever he might belong. Mr. Pope's uprightness in his conduct towards contending politicians, is demonstrated by his living independent of either faction : he accepted no place, and had too high a spirit to become a pensioner.

Many efforts, however, were made to proselyte him from the popish faith, which all proved ineffectual. His friends conceived hopes, from the moderation which he on all occasions expressed, that he was really a Protestant in his heart, and that upon the death of his mother he would not scruple to declare his sentiments, notwithstanding the reproaches he might incur from the popish party, and the public observation it would draw upon him. The Bishop of Rochester strongly advised him to read the controverted points between the Protestant and the Catholic church, to suffer his unprejudiced reason to determine for him, and he made no doubt but a separation from the Romish communion would soon ensue. To this Mr. Pope very candidly answered, "Whether the change would be to my spiritual advantage God only knows ; this I know, that I mean as well in the religion I now profess, as ever I can do in any other. Can a man who thinks so, justify a change, even if he thought both equally good ? to such an one the part of joining with any one body of Christians might perhaps be easy, but I think it would not be so to renounce the other.

"Your Lordship has formerly advised me to read

he best controversies between the churches. Shall I tell you a secret? I did so at fourteen years old, for I loved reading, and my father had no other books. There was a collection of all that had been written on both sides in the reign of King James II. I warmed my head with them, and the consequence was, I found myself a Papist or Protestant by turns according to the last book I read. I am afraid most seekers are in the same case, and when they stop, they are not so properly converted as outwitted. You see how little glory you would gain by my conversion; and, after all, I verily believe your Lordship and I are both of the same religion, if we were thoroughly understood by one another, and that all honest and reasonable Christians would be so, if they did but talk enough together every day, and had nothing to do together but to serve God and live in peace with their neighbours.

“As to the temporal side of the question, I can have no dispute with you; it is certain all the beneficial circumstances of life, and all the shining ones, lie on the part you would invite me to: but if I could bring myself to fancy, what I think you do but fancy, that I have any talents for active life, I want health for it; and besides it is a real truth, I have, if possible, less inclination than ability. Contemplative life is not only my scene, but is my habit too. I began my life where most people end theirs, with a disgust of all that the world calls ambition. I don't know why it is called so: for, to me, it always seemed to be rather stooping than climbing. I'll tell you my political and religious sentiments in a few words; in my politics, I think no farther than how to preserve my peace of life in any government under which I live; nor in my religion, than to preserve the peace of my conscience in any church with which I communicate. I hope all churches and all governments are so far of God as they are rightly understood and rightly ad-nunistered; and where they are or may be wrong, I leave it to God alone to mend or reform them; which, whenever he does, it must be by greater instruments than I am. I am not a Papist, for I renounce the temporal invasions of the papal power, and detest their arrogated authority over princes and states; I am a Catholic in the strictest sense of the word. If I was born under an absolute prince I would be a quiet subject; but thank God I was not. I have a due sense of the excellence of the British constitution. In a word, the things I have always wished to see are not a Roman Catholic, or a French Catholic, or a Spanish Catholic, but a true Catholic; and not a king of Whigs, or a king of Tories, but a king of England."

These are the peaceful maxims upon which we find Mr. Pope conducted his life; and if they cannot in some respects be justified, yet it must be owned that his religion and his politics were well enough adapted for a poet, which entitled him to a kind of universal patronage, and to make every good man his friend.

Dean Swift sometimes wrote to Mr. Pope on the topic of changing his religion, and once humorously offered him twenty pounds for that purpose. Mr. Pope's answer to this, Lord Orrery has obliged the world with by preserving it in the life of Swift. It is a perfect master-piece of wit and pleasantry.

We have already taken notice that Mr. Pope was called upon by the public voice to translate the Iliad, which he performed with so much applause, and, at the same time, with so much profit to himself, that he was envied by many writers, whose vanity perhaps induced them to believe themselves equal to so great a design. A combination of inferior wits were employed to write the Popiad, in which his translation is characterized as unjust to the original, without beauty of language, or variety of numbers. Instead of the justness of the original, they say there is an arduity and extravagance; instead of the beautiful language of the original, there is solecism and barbarous English. A candid reader may easily discern from this furious introduction, that the critics were actuated rather by malice than truth, and that they must judge with their eyes shut who can see no beauty of language, no harmony of numbers in this translation.

But the most formidable critic against Mr. Pope in this great undertaking, was the celebrated Madame Dacier, whom Mr. Pope treated with less ceremony in his Notes on the Iliad than, in the opinion of some people, was due to her sex. This learned lady was not without a sense of the injury, and took an opportunity of discovering her resentment.

“Upon finishing (says she) the second edition of my translation of Homer, a particular friend sent me a translation of part of Mr. Pope’s Preface to his version of the Iliad. As I do not understand English, I cannot form any judgment of his performance, though I have heard much of it. I am indeed willing to believe, that the praises it has met with are not unmerited, because whatever work is approved by the English nation cannot be bad: but yet I hope I may be permitted to judge of that part of the preface which has been transmitted to me; and I here take the liberty of giving my sentiments concerning it. I most freely acknowledge that Mr. Pope’s invention is very lively, though he seems to have been guilty of the same fault into which he owns we are often precipitated by our invention when we depend too much upon the strength of it; as magnanimity, says he, may run up to confusion and extravagance, so may great invention to redundancy and wildness.

“This has been the very case of Mr. Pope himself; nothing is more overstrained, or more false, than the images in which his fancy has represented Homer:

sometimes he tells us that the Iliad is a wild paradise where, if we cannot see all the beauties as in an ordered garden, it is only because the number of them is infinitely greater. Sometimes he compares him to a copious nursery, which contains the seeds and first productions of every kind; and, lastly, he represents him under the notion of a mighty tree, which rises from the most vigorous seed; is improved with industry, flourishes and produces the finest fruit, but bears too many branches, which might be lopped into form, to give it a more regular appearance.

“What! is Homer’s poem then, according to Mr. Pope, a confused heap of beauties, without order or symmetry, and a plot whereon nothing but seeds, nor nothing perfect or formed is to be found? and a production loaded with many unprofitable things which ought to be retrenched, and which choke and disfigure those which deserve to be preserved? Mr. Pope will pardon me if I here oppose those comparisons, which to me appear very false, and entirely contrary to what the greatest of ancient and modern critics ever thought.

“The Iliad is so far from being a wild paradise, that it is the most regular garden, and laid out with more symmetry, than any ever was. Every thing therein is not only in the place it ought to have been, but every thing is fitted for the place it hath. He presents you, at first, with that which ought to be first seen; he places in the middle what ought to be in the middle, and what would be improperly placed at the beginning or end; and he removes what ought to be at a greater distance, to create the more agreeable surprise; and to use a comparison drawn from painting, he places that in the greatest light which cannot be too visible, and sinks in the obscurity of the shade what does not require a full view; so that it may be said that Homer is the painter who best knew how to employ the shades and lights. The second compari son is equally unjust : how could Mr. Pope say, 'that one can only discover seeds, and the first productions of every kind in the Iliad ?' Every beauty is there to such an amazing perfection, that the following ages could add nothing to those of any kind ; and the ancients have always proposed Homer as the most perfect model in every kind of poetry.

"The third comparison is composed of the errors of the two former ; Homer had certainly an incomparable fertility of invention, but his fertility is always checked by that just sense which made him reject every superfluous thing which his vast imagination could offer, and to retain only what was necessary and useful. Judgment guided the hand of this admirable gardener, and was the pruning-hook he employed to lop off every useless branch."

Thus far Madam Dacier differs in her opinion from Mr. Pope concerning Homer ; but these remarks, which we have just quoted, partake not at all of the nature of criticism ; they are mere assertion. Pope had declared Homer to abound with irregular beauties. Dacier has contradicted him, and asserted, that all his beauties are regular, but no reason is assigned by either of these mighty geniuses in support of their opinions, and the reader is left in the dark as to the real truth. If he is to be guided by the authority of a name only, no doubt the argument will preponderate in favour of our countryman. The French lady then proceeds to answer some observations which Mr. Pope made upon her remarks upon the Iliad, which she performs with a warmth that generally attends writers of her sex. Mr. Pope, however, paid more regard to this fair antagonist than any other critic upon his works. He confessed that he had received great helps from her, and only thought she had (through a prodigious and almost superstitious fondness for Homer) endeavoured to make him appear without any fault or weakness, and stamp a perfection on his works which is no where to be found. He wrote her a very obliging letter, in which he confessed himself exceedingly sorry that he ever should have displeas'd so excellent a wit; and she, on the other hand, with a goodness and frankness peculiar to her protested to forgive it; so that there remained no animosities between those two great admirers and translators of Homer.

Mr. Pope, by his successful translation of the Iliad, as we have before remarked, drew upon him the envy and raillery of a whole tribe of writers. Though he did not esteem any particular man amongst his enemies of consequence enough to provoke an answer, yet, when they were considered collectively, they offered excellent materials for a general satire. This satire he planned and executed with so extraordinary a mastery, that it is by far the most complete poem of our Author's: it discovers more invention and a higher effort of genius, than any other production of his. The hint was taken from Mr. Dryden's Mac Flecknoe; but as it is more general, so it is more pleasing. The Dunciad is so universally read, that we reckon it superfluous to give any further account of it here; and it would be an displeasing task to trace all the provocations and resentments which were mutually discovered upon this occasion. Mr. Pope was of opinion that, next to praising good writers, there was a merit in exposing bad ones; though it does not hold infallibly true that each person stigmatized as a dunce was genuinely so. Something must be allowed to personal resentment: Mr. Pope was a man of keen passions; he felt an injury strongly, retained a long remembrance of it, and could very pungently repay it. Some of the gentlemen, however, who had been more severely lashed than the rest, meditated a revenge which redounds but little to their honour. They either intended to chastise him corporally, or gave it out that they had really done so, in order to bring shame upon Mr. Pope, which, if true, could only bring shame upon themselves.

While Mr. Pope enjoyed any leisure from severe applications to study, his friends were continually soliciting him to turn his thoughts towards something that might be of lasting use to the world, and engage no more in a war with dunces, who were now effectually humbled. Our great dramatic poet Shakspeare had passed through several hands, some of whom were very reasonably judged not to have understood any part of him tolerably, much less were capable to correct or revise him.

The friends of Mr. Pope, therefore, strongly importuned him to undertake the whole of Shakspeare's plays, and, if possible, by comparing all the different copies now to be procured, restore him to his ancient purity: to which our poet made this modest reply, That, not having attempted any thing in the drama, it might in him be deemed too much presumption. To which he was answered, That this did not require great knowledge of the foundation and disposition of the drama, as that must stand as it was, and Shakspeare himself had not always paid strict regard to the rules of it; but this was to clear the scenes from the rubbish with which ignorant editors had filled them.

His proper business in this work was to render the text so clear as to be generally understood, to free it from obscurities, and sometimes gross absurdities, which now seem to appear in it, and to explain doubtful and difficult passages, of which there are great numbers. This, however, was an arduous province, and how Mr. Pope has acquitted himself in it has been differently determined: it is certain he never valued himself upon that performance, nor was it a task in the least adapted to his genius: for it seldom happens that a man of lively parts can undergo the servile drudgery of collecting passages in which more industry and labour are necessary than persons of quick penetration generally have to bestow.

It has been the opinion of some critics that Mr Pope's talents were not adapted for the drama, otherwise we cannot well account for his neglecting the most gainful way of writing which poetry affords, especially as his reputation was so high that, without much ceremony or mortification, he might have had any piece of his brought upon the stage. Mr. Pope was attentive to his own interest, and if he had not either been conscious of his inability in that province, or too timid to risk the popular approbation, he would certainly have attempted the drama. Neither was he esteemed a very competent judge of what plays were proper or improper for representation. He wrote several letters to the manager of Drury-lane theatre, in favour of Thompson's Agamemnon, which, notwithstanding his approbation, Thompson's friends were obliged to mutilate and shorten; and, after all, it proved a heavy play; though it was generally allowed to have been one of the best acted plays that had appeared for some years.

He was certainly concerned in the comedy which was published in Mr. Gay's name, called Three Hours after Marriage, as well as Dr. Arbuthnot. This illustrious triumvirate, though men of the most various parts, and extensive understanding, yet were not able, it seems, to please the people, though the principal parts were supported by the best actors in that way on the stage. Dr. Arbuthnot and Mr. Pope were, no doubt, solicitous to conceal their concern in it; but by a letter which Mr. Gay wrote to Pope, published in Ayre's Memoirs, it appears evident (if Ayre's authority may be depended on) that they both assisted in the composition.

"Dear Pope.

"Too late I see and confess myself mistaken in relation to the comedy; yet I do not think had I fol lowed your advice, and only introduced the mummy that the absence of the crocodile had saved it. can't help laughing myself (though the vulgar do not consider it was designed to look ridiculous) to think how the poor monster and mummy were dashed at their reception, and, when the cry was loudest, I thought that, if the thing had been written by another, I should have deemed the town in some measure mistaken; and as to your apprehension that this may do us future injury, do not think of it; the Doctor has a more valuable name than can be hurt by any thing of this nature, and yours is doubly safe; I will, if any shame there be, take it all to myself, and indeed I ought, the motion being first mine, and never heartily approved by you."

Of all our poet's writings, none were read with more general approbation than his Ethic Epistles, or multiplied into more editions. Mr. Pope, who was a perfect economist, secured to himself the profits arising from his own works; he was never subjected to necessity, and therefore was not to be imposed upon by the art or fraud of publishers.

But now approaches the period in which, as he himself expressed it, he stood in need of the generous tear he paid;

Poets themselves must fall like those they sung,
Deaf the prais'd ear, and mute the tuneful tongue,
E'en he whose soul now melts in mournful lays,
Shall shortly want the gen'rous tear he pays.

Mr. Pope, who had been always subjected to a variety of bodily infirmities, finding his strength give way, began to think that his days, which had been prolonged past his expectation, were drawing towards a conclusion. However, he visited the Hotwells at Bristol, where for some time, there were small hopes of his recovery; but making too free with purges, he grew worse and seemed desirous to draw nearer home. A dropsy in the breast at last put a period to his life, at the age of fifty-six, on the 30th of May, 1744, at his house at Twickenham, where he was interred in the same grave with his father and mother.

Mr. Pope's behaviour in his last illness has been variously represented to the world: some have affirmed that it was timid and peevish; that having been fixed in no particular system of faith, his mind was wavering, and his temper broken and disturbed. Others have asserted that he was all cheerfulness and resignation to the Divine will: which of these opinions is true we cannot now determine; but if the former, it must be regretted that he who had taught philosophy to others, should himself be destitute of its assistance in the most critical moments of his life.

The bulk of his fortune he bequeathed to Mrs. Blount, with whom he lived in the strictest friendship, and for whom he is said to have entertained the warmest affection. His works, which are in the hands of every person of true taste, and will last as long as our language will be understood, render unnecessary all further remarks on his writings. He was equally admired for the dignity and sublimity of his moral and philosophical works, the vivacity of his satirical, the clearness and propriety of his didactic, the richness and variety of his descriptive, and the elegance of all, added to a harmony of versification and correctness of sentiment and language unknown to our former poets, and of which he has set an example, which will be an example or a reproach to his successors. His prose style is as perfect in its kind as his poetic, and has all the beauties proper for it, joined to an uncommon force and perspicuity.

Under the profession of the Roman Catholic religion, to which he adhered to the last, he maintained all the moderation and charity becoming the most thorough and consistent protestant. His conversation was natural, easy, and agreeable, without any affectation of displaying his wit, or obtruding his own judgment, even upon subjects of which he was so eminently a master.

The moral character of our author, as it did not escape the lash of his calumniators in his life, so have there been attempts since his death to diminish his reputation. Lord Bolingbroke, whom Mr. Pope esteemed to almost an enthusiastic degree of admiration, was the first to make this attack. Not many years ago the public were entertained with this controversy, immediately upon the publication of his Lordship's Letters on the Spirit of Patriotism, and the Idea of a Patriot King. Different opinions have been offered, some to extenuate the fault of Mr. Pope for printing and mutilating those letters without his Lordship's knowledge, others to blame him for it as the highest breach of friendship, and the greatest mark of dishonour; but it would exceed our proposed bounds to enter into the merits of this controversy.

This great man is allowed to have been one of the first rank amongst the poets of our nation, and to acknowledge the superiority of none but Shakspeare, Milton, and Dryden. With the two former it is unnatural to compare him, as their province in writing is so very different. Pope has never attempted the drama, nor published an epic poem, in which these two geniuses have so wonderfully succeeded. Though Pope's genius was great, it was yet of so different a cast from Shakspeare's and Milton's, that no comparison can be justly formed. But if this may be said of the former two, it will by no means hold with respect to the latter; for between him and Dryden there is a great similarity of writing, and a very striking coincidence of genius. It will not, perhaps, be displeasing to our readers if we pursue this comparison, and endeavour to discover to whom the superiority is justly to be attributed, and to which of them poetry owes the highest obligations.

When Dryden came into the world he found poetry in a very imperfect state ; its numbers were unpolished, its cadences rough, and there was nothing of harmony or melliflence to give it a graceful flow. In this harsh, unmusical situation, Dryden found it, (for the refinements of Waller were but puerile and unsubstantial ;) he polished the rough diamond, he taught it to shine, and connected beauty, elegance, and strength, in all his poetical compositions. Though Dryden thus polished our English numbers, and thus harmonized versification, it cannot be said that he carried his art to perfection. Much was yet left undone ; his lines with all their smoothness, were often ambling, and expletives were frequently introduced to complete his measures. It is apparent, therefore, that an additional harmony might still be given to our numbers, and that cadences were yet capable of more musical modulation. To effect this purpose, Mr. Pope arose, who with an ear elegantly delicate, and the advantage of the finest genius, so harmonized the English numbers, as to make them completely musical. His numbers are likewise so minutely correct, that it would be difficult to conceive how any of his lines can be altered to advantage. He has created a kind of mechanical versification ; every line is alike ; and though they are sweetly musical, they want diversity ; for he has not studied so great a variety of pauses, and where the accents may be laid gracefully. The structure of his verse is the best, and a line of his is more musical than any other line can be made by placing the accents elsewhere ; but we are not quite certain whether the ear is not apt to be soon cloyed with this uniformity of elegance, this sameness of harmony. It must be acknowledged however, that he has much improved upon Dryden in the article of versification, and in that part of poetry is greatly his superior. But though this must be acknowledged, perhaps it will not necessarily follow that his genius was therefore superior.

The grand characteristic of a poet is his invention, the surest distinction of a great genius. In Mr. Pope nothing is so truly original as his Rape of the Lock, nor discovers so much invention. In this kind of mock-heroic he is without a rival in our language, for Dryden has written nothing of the kind. His other work which discovers invention, fine designing, and admirable execution, is his Dunciad; which, though built on Dryden's Mac Flecknoe, is yet so much superior, that, in satiric writing, the palm must justly be yielded to him. In Mr. Dryden's Absalom and Ahithophel, there are indeed the most poignant strokes of satire, and characters drawn with the most masterly touches; but this poem, with all its excellences, is much inferior to the Dunciad, though Dryden had advantages which Mr. Pope had not; for Dryden's characters are men of great eminence and figure in the state, while Pope has to expose men of obscure birth and unimportant lives, only distinguished from the herd of mankind by a glimmering of genius, which rendered the greatest part of them more emphatically contemptible. Pope's was the hardest task, and he has executed it with the greatest success. As Mr. Dryden must undoubtedly have yielded to Pope in satiric writing, it is incumbent on the partisans of Dryden to name another species of composition in which the former excels so as to throw the balance again upon the side of Dryden. This species is the Lyric, in which the warmest votaries of Pope must certainly acknowledge that he is much inferior; as an irresistible proof of this, we need only compare Mr. Dryden's Ode on St. Cecilia's Day with Mr. Pope's, in which the disparity is so apparent that we know not if the most finished of Pope's compositions has discovered such a variety and command of numbers.

It hath been generally acknowledged that the Lyric is a more excellent kind of writing than the Satiric and consequently, he who excels in the most excellent species, must undoubtedly be esteemed the greatest poet. Mr. Pope has very happily succeeded in many of his occasional pieces, such as Eloisa to Abelard, his Elegy on an unfortunate young Lady, and a variety of other performances deservedly celebrated. To these may be opposed Mr. Dryden's Fables, which though written in a very advanced age, are yet the most perfect of his works. In these Fables there is, perhaps, a greater variety than in Pope's occasional pieces: many of them indeed, are translations, but such as are original show a great extent of invention, and a large compass of genius.

There are not in Pope's works such poignant discoveries of wit, or such a general knowledge of the humours and character of men, as in the Prologues and Epilogues of Dryden, which are the best records of the whims and capricious oddities of the times in which they are written.

When these two great geniuses are considered in the light of translators, it will, indeed, be difficult to determine into whose scale the balance should be thrown. That Mr. Pope had a more arduous province in doing justice to Homer, than Dryden with regard to Virgil, is certainly true; as Homer is a more various and diffuse poet than Virgil; and it is likewise true that Pope has even exceeded Dryden in the execution, and none will deny that Pope's Homer's Iliad is a finer poem than Dryden's Æneid of Virgil, making a proper allowance for the disproportion of the original authors. But then a candid critic should reflect, that as Dryden was prior in the great attempt of rendering Virgil into English, so did he perform the task under many disadvantages which Pope, by a happier situation in life, was enabled to avoid; and could not but improve upon Dryden's errors, though the authors translated were not the same: and it is much to be doubted if Dryden were to translate the Æneid now, with that attention which the correctness of the present age would force upon him, whether the preference would be due to Pope's Homer.

But supposing it to be yielded (as it certainly must) that the latter bard was the greatest translator, we are now to throw into Mr. Dryden's scale all his dramatic works; which, though not the most excellent of his writings, as yet nothing of Mr. Pope's can be opposed to them, they have an undoubted right to turn the balance greatly in favour of Mr. Dryden.—When the two poets are considered as critics, the comparison will very imperfectly hold. Dryden's Dedications and Prefaces, besides that they are more numerous, and are the best models for courtly panegyric, show, that he understood poetry as an art, beyond any man that ever lived; and he explained this art so well, that he taught his antagonist to turn the tables against himself; for he so illuminated the mind by his clear and perspicuous reasoning, that dulness itself became capable of discerning; and when at any time his performances fell short of his own ideas of excellence, his enemies tried him by rules of his own establishing; and though they owed to him the ability of judging, they seldom had candour enough to spare him.

Perhaps it may be true that Pope's works are read with more appetite, as there is a greater evenness and correctness in them; but in perusing the works of Dryden, the mind will take a wider range, and be more fraught with poetical ideas. We admire Dryden as the greater genius, and Pope as the most pleasing versifier.—Cibber's Lives.

HE comes, he comes! bid every bard prepare
The song of triumph, and attend his car.

Great Sheffield's muse the long procession leads,
 And throws a lustre o'er the pomp she leads;
 First gives the palm she fir'd him to obtain,
 Crowns his gay brow, and shows him how to reign.
 Thus young Alcides, by old Chiron taught,
 Was form'd for all the miracles he wrought:
 Thus Chiron did the youth he taught applaud,
 Pleas'd to behold the earnest of a god.

But hark! what shouts, what gath'ring crowds rejoice
 Unstain'd their praise by any venal voice,
 Such as th' ambitious vainly think their due,
 When prostitutes or needy flatterers sue.
 And see the chief! before him laurels torn;
 Trophies from undeserving temples borne,
 Here rage enchain'd; reluctant raves: and there
 Pale envy, dumb and sick'ning with despair,
 Prone to the earth she bends her loathing eye,
 Weak to support the blaze of Majesty.

But who are they that turn the sacred page?
 Three lovely virgins, and of equal age;
 Intent they read, and all enamour'd seem,
 As he that met his likeness in the stream:
 The graces these; and see how they contend,
 Who most shall praise, who best shall recommend.

The chariot now the painful steep ascends,
 The pæans cease, the glorious labour ends.
 Here fix'd, the bright eternal temple stands,
 Its prospect an unbounded view commands:
 Say, wondrous youth, what column wilt thou choose,
 What laurell'd arch for thy triumphant muse?
 Though each great ancient court thee to his shrine,
 Though ev'ry laurel through the dome be thine,
 (From the proud epic down to those that shade
 The gentler brow of the soft Lesbian maid,
 Go to the good and just, and awful train,
 Thy soul's delight, and glory of the fane;
 While thro' the earth thy dear remembrance flies,
 "Sweet to the world and grateful to the skies."

SPRING.

THE FIRST PASTORAL; OR, DAMON

To Sir William Trumbal.

FIRST in these fields I try the sylvan strains,
Nor blush to sport on Windsor's blissful plains :
Fair Thames, flow gently from thy sacred spring
While on thy banks Sicilian muses sing ;
Let vernal airs through trembling osiers play,
And Albion's cliffs resound the rural lay.

You that, too wise for pride, too good for power
Enjoy the glory to be great no more,
And, carrying with you all the world can boast,
To all the world illustriously are lost ;
O let my muse her slender reed inspire,
Till in your native shades you tune the lyre.
So when the nightingale to rest removes,
The thrush may chant to the forsaken groves,
But charm'd to silence, listens while she sings,
And all the ærial audience clap their wings.

Soon as the flocks shook off the nightly dews,
Two swains, whom love kept wakeful, and the muse,
Pour'd o'er the whitening vale their fleecy care,
Fresh as the morn, and as the season fair :

40 POPE'S POETICAL WORKS

The dawn now blushing on the mountain's side,
Thus Daphnis spoke, and Strephon thus replied

DAPHNIS.

Hear how the birds, on every bloomy spray,
With joyous music wake the dawning day!
Why sit we mute, when carly linnets sing,
When warbling Philomel salutes the spring?
Why sit we sad, when Phosphor shines so clear,
And lavish Nature paints the purple year?

STREPHON.

Sing then, and Damon shall attend the strain,
While yon slow oxen turn the furrow'd plain.
Here the bright crocus and blue violet glow,
Here western winds on breathing roses blow.
I'll stake yon lamb, that near the fountain plays,
And from the brink his dancing shade surveys.

DAPHNIS.

And I this bowl, where wanton ivy twines,
And swelling clusters bend the curling vines:
Four figures rising from the work appear,
The various seasons of the rolling year;
And what is that which binds the radiant sky,
Where twelve fair signs in beauteous order lie?

DAMON.

Then sing by turns, by turns the muses sing:
Now hawthorn blossom, now the daisies spring
Now leaves the trees, and flowers adorn the ground
Begin, the vales shall every note resound.

STREPHON.

Inspire me, Phœbus, in my Delia's praise,
With Waller's strains, or Granville's moving lays,
A milk-white bull shall at your altar stand,
That threatens a fight, and spurns the rising sand.

DAPHNIS.

O Love! for Sylvia let me gain the prize,
And make my tongue victorious as her eyes,
No lambs or sheep for victims I'll impart,
Thy victim, Love, shall be the shepherd's heart

STREPHON.

Me gentle Delia beckons from the plain,
Then, hid in shades, eludes her eager swain;
But feigns a laugh, to see me search around,
And by that laugh the willing fair is found.

DAPHNIS.

The sprightly Sylvia trips along the green;
She runs, but hopes she does not run unseen:
While a kind glance at her pursuer flies,
How much at variance are her feet and eyes!

STREPHON.

O'er golden sands let rich Pactolus flow,
And trees weep amber on the banks of Po;
Blest Thames's shores the brightest beauties yield.
Feed here, my lambs, I'll seek no distant field

DAPHNIS.

Celestial Venus haunts Idalia's groves;
Diana Cynthus, Ceres Hybla loves;
If Windsor shades delight the matchless maid,
Cynthus and Hybla yield to Windsor-shade.

STREPHON.

All Nature mourns, the skies relent in showers,
Hush'd are the birds, and closed the drooping flowers;
If Delia smile, the flowers begin to spring,
The skies to brighten, and the birds to sing.

DAPHNIS.

All Nature laughs, the groves are fresh and fair
The sun's mild lustre warms the vital air;
't Sylvia smile, new glories gild the shore,
And vanquish'd Nature seems to charm no more

STREPHON.

In spring the fields, in autumn hills I love,
At morn the plains, at noon the shady grove,
But Delia always; absent from her sight,
Nor plains at morn, nor groves at noon delight

DAPHNIS.

Sylvia's like autumn ripe, yet mild as May
More bright than noon, yet fresh as early day:

E'en spring displeases when she shines not here;
But, bless'd with her, 'tis spring throughout the year

STREPHON.

Say, Daphnis, say, in what glad soil appears,
A wondrous tree that sacred monarchs bears :
Tell me but this, and I'll disclaim the prize,
And give the conquest to thy Sylvia's eyes.—

DAPHNIS.

Nay, tell me first, in what more happy fields
The thistle springs, to which the lily yields :
And then a nobler prize I will resign,
For Sylvia, charming Sylvia, shall be thine.

DAMON.

Cease to contend ; for, Daphnis, I decree,
The bowl to Strephon, and the lamb to thee.
Blest swains, whose nymphs in every grace excel ;
Blest nymphs, whose swains those graces sing so well
Now rise and haste to yonder woodbine bowers,
A soft retreat from sudden vernal showers :
The turf with rural dainties shall be crown'd,
While opening blooms diffuse their sweets around.
For see ! the gathering flocks to shelter tend,
And from the Pleiads fruitful showers descend.

SUMMER.

THE SECOND PASTORAL; OR, ALEXIS

To Dr. Garth.

A SHEPHERD's boy (he seeks no better name)
Led forth his flocks along the silver Thame,
Where dancing sun-beams on the waters play'd,
And verdant alders form'd a quivering shade
Soft as he mourn'd, the streams forgot to flow,
The flocks around a dumb compassion show
The Naiads wept in every watery bower,
And Jove consented in a silent shower.

Accept, O Garth, the muse's early lays,
That adds this wreath of ivy to thy bays ;
Hear what from love unpractised hearts endure,
From love, the sole disease thou canst not cure.

Ye shady beeches, and ye cooling streams,
Defence from Phœbus', not from Cupid's beams,
To you I mourn; nor to the deaf I sing ;
The woods shall answer, and their echo ring.
The hills and rocks attend my doleful lay :
Why art thou prouder and more hard than they ?
The bleating sheep with my complaints agree,
They parch'd with heat, and I inflam'd by thee.
The sultry Sirius burns the thirsty plains,
While in thy heart eternal winter reigns.

Where stray ye, muses, in what lawn or grove,
While your Alexis pines in hopeless love ?
In those fair fields where sacred Isis glides,
Or else where Cam his winding vales divides ?
As in the chrystal spring-I view my face,
Fresh rising blushes paint the watery glass ;
But since those graces please thine eyes no more,
I shun the fountains which I sought before.
Once I was skill'd in every herb that grew,
And every plant that drinks the morning dew
Ah, wretched shepherd! what avails thy art,
To cure thy lambs, but not to heal thy heart!

Let other swains attend the rural care,
Feed fairer flocks, or richer fleeces shear :
But nigh yon mountain let me tune my lays,
Embrace my love, and bind my brows with bays
That flute is mine which Colin's tuneful breath
Inspired when living, and bequeathed in death :
He said: ' Alexis, take this pipe, the same
That taught the groves my Rosalinda's name.'
But now the reed shall hang on yonder tree,
For ever silent, since despis'd by thee.
O! were I made by some transforming power,
The captive bird that sings within thy bower!

Then might my voice thy listening ears employ,
And I those kisses he receives enjoy.

And yet my numbers please the rural throng,
Rough satyrs dance, and Pan applauds the song.
The nymphs forsaking every cave and spring,
Their early fruit and milk-white turtles bring;
Each amorous nymph prefers her gifts in vain,
On you their gifts are all bestow'd again:
For you the swains the fairest flowers design,
And in one garland all their beauties join;
Accept the wreath which you deserve alone,
In whom all beauties are comprised in one.

See what delights in sylvan scenes appear!
Descending gods have found Elysium here.
In woods bright Venus with Adonis stray'd,
And chaste Diana haunts the forest shade.
Come, lovely nymph, and bless the silent hours,
When swains from shearing seek their nightly bowers,
When weary reapers quit the sultry field,
And crown'd with corn their thanks to Ceres yield.
This harmless grove no lurking viper hides,
But in my breast the serpent Love abides.
Here bees from blossoms sip the rosy dew,
But your Alexis knows no sweets but you.
O deign to visit our forsaken seats,
The mossy fountains, and the green retreats!
Where'er you walk, cool gales shall fan the glade;
Trees, where you sit, shall crowd into a shade;
Where'er you tread, the blushing flowers shall rise,
And all things flourish where you turn your eyes.
O! how I long with you to pass my days,
Invoke the Muses, and resound your praise!
Your praise the birds shall chant in every grove,
And winds shall waft it to the powers above.
But would you sing, and rival Orpheus' strain,
The wondering forests soon should dance again,
The moving mountains hear the powerful call,
And headlong streams hang listening in their fall!

But see, the shepherds shun the noon-day heat,
 The lowing herds to murmuring brooks retreat,
 To closer shades the panting flocks remove.
 Ye gods ! and is there no relief for love ?
 But soon the sun with milder rays descends
 To the cool ocean, where his journey ends :
 On me Love's fiercer flames for ever prey,
 By night he scorches, as he burns by day.

 AUTUMN.

THE THIRD PASTORAL; OR, HYLAS AND ÆGON.

To Mr. Wycherley.

BENEATH the shade a spreading beech displays,
 Hylas and Ægon sang their rural lays :
 This mourn'd a faithless, that an absent love ;
 And Delia's name and Doris' fill'd the grove.
 Ye Mantuan nymphs, your sacred succours bring ;
 Hylas' and Ægon's rural lays I sing.
 Thou, whom the Nine with Plautus' wit inspire,
 The art of Terence and Menander's fire ;
 Whose sense instructs us, and whose humour charms
 Whose judgment sways us, and whose spirit warms
 Oh ! skill'd in nature ! see the hearts of swains
 Their artless passions, and their tender pains.
 Now setting Phœbus shone serenely bright,
 And fleecy clouds were streak'd with purple light ;
 When tuneful Hylas, with melodious moan,
 Taught rocks to weep, and made the mountains groan
 Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs away
 To Delia's ear the tender notes convey.
 As some sad turtle his lost love deploras,
 And with deep murmurs fills the sounding shores ;
 Thus, far from Delia, to the winds I mourn,
 Alike unheard, unpitied, and forlorn.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs along !
 For her, the feather'd quires neglect their song :
 For her, the limes their pleasing shades deny :
 For her the lilies hang their heads and die.
 Ye flowers that droop, forsaken by the spring,
 Ye birds, that left by summer cease to sing,
 Ye trees that fade when autumn heats remove,
 Say, is not absence death to those who love ?

Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs away !
 Cursed be the fields that cause my Delia's stay ;
 Fade every blossom, wither every tree,
 Die every flower, and perish all, but she ;
 What have I said ? Where'er my Delia flies,
 Let spring attend, and sudden flowers arise !
 Let opening roses knotted oaks adorn,
 And liquid amber drop from every thorn.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs along !
 The birds shall cease to tune their evening song,
 The winds to breathe, the waving woods to move,
 And streams to murmur, ere I cease to love.
 Not bubbling fountains to the thirsty swain,
 Not balmy sleep to labourers faint with pain,
 Not showers to larks, or sunshine to the bee,
 Are half so charming as thy sight to me.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs away !
 Come, Delia, come ; ah, why this long delay ?
 Through rocks and caves the name of Delia sounds
 Delia, each cave and echoing rock rebounds.
 Ye powers, what pleasing frenzy soothes my mind
 Do lovers dream, or is my Delia kind ?
 She comes, my Delia comes ! Now cease my lay,
 And cease, ye gales, to bear my sighs away !

Next Ægon sang, while Windsor groves admired
 Rehearse, ye muses, what yourselves inspired.

Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful strain !
 Of perjured Doris, dying I complain :
 Here where the mountains, lessening as they rise,
 Lose the low vales, and steal into the skies ;

While labouring oxen, spent with toil and heat,
 In their loose traces from the field retreat ;
 While curling smokes from village tops are seen,
 And the fleet shades glido o'er the dusky green.

Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful lay !
 Beneath yon poplar oft we pass'd the day :
 Oft on the rind I carved her amorous vows,
 While she with garlands hung the bending boughs ;
 The garlands fade, the vows are worn away :
 So dies my love, and so my hopes decay.

Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful strain !
 Now bright Arcturus glads the teeming grain ;
 Now golden fruits on loaded branches shine,
 And grateful clusters swell with floods of wine ;
 Now blushing berries paint the yellow grove.
 Just gods ! shall all things yield returns but love ?

Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful lay ;
 The shepherds cry, ' Thy flocks are left a prey.'
 Ah ! what avails it me the flocks to keep,
 Who lost my heart while I preserved my sheep ?
 Pan came, and ask'd, what magic caused my smart,
 Or what ill eyes malignant glances dart ?
 What eyes but hers, alas, have power to move ?
 And is there magic but what dwells in love ?

Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful strains !
 I'll fly from shepherds, flocks, and flowery plains.
 From shepherds, flocks, and plains, I may remove,
 Forsake mankind, and all the world but love ;
 I know thee, Love ! on foreign mountains bred ;
 Wolves gave thee suck, and savage tigers fed :
 Thou wert from Etna's burning entrails torn,
 Not by fierce whirlwinds, and in thunder born.

Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful lay !
 Farewell, ye woods ; adieu, the light of day ;
 One leap from yonder cliff shall end my pains.
 No more, ye hills, no more resound my strains.

Thus sang the shepherds till the approach of night
 The skies yet blushing with departed light,

When falling dews with spangles deck the glade,
And the low sun had lengthen'd every shade.

WINTER.

THE FOURTH PASTORAL; OR, DAPHNE

To the Memory of Mrs. Tempest

LYCIDAS.

THYRSIS, the music of that murmuring spring
Is not so mournful as the strains you sing:
Nor rivers winding through the vales below,
So sweetly warble, or so smoothly flow.
Now sleeping flocks on their soft fleeces lie,
The moon, serene in glory, mounts the sky,
While silent birds forget their tuneful lays,
O sing of Daphne's fate, and Daphne's praise!

THYRSIS.

Behold the groves that shine with silver frost,
Their beauty wither'd, and their verdure lost:
Here shall I try the sweet Alexis' strain,
That call'd the listening Dryads to the plain:
Thames heard the numbers as he flow'd along,
And bade his willows learn the moving song.

LYCIDAS.

So may kind rains their vital moisture yield,
And swell the future harvest of the field.
Begin; this charge the dying Daphne gave,
And said, 'Ye shepherds, sing around my grave:
Sing, while beside the shaded tomb I mourn
And with fresh bays her rural shrine adorn.

THYRSIS.

Ye gentle muses, leave your chrystal spring,
Let nymphs and sylvans cypress garlands bring.
Ye weeping Loves, the stream with myrtles hide,
And break your bows as when Adonis died;

And with your golden darts, now useless grown,
 Inscribe a verse on this relenting stone ;
 ' Let Nature change, let heaven and earth deplore ;
 Fair Daphne's dead, and love is now no more !'

'Tis done, and Nature's various charms decay :
 See gloomy clouds obscure the cheerful day :
 Now hung with pearls the dropping trees appear,
 Their faded honours scatter'd on her bier.
 See where, on earth, the flowery glories lie ;
 With her they flourish'd, and with her they die.
 Ah! what avail the beauties nature wore ;
 Fair Daphne's dead, and beauty is no more !

For her the flocks refuse their verdant food ;
 The thirsty heifers shun the gliding flood :
 The silver swans her hapless fate bemoan,
 In notes more sad than when they sing their own :
 In hollow caves sweet Echo silent lies,
 Silent, or only to her name replies :
 Her name with pleasure once she taught the shore :
 Now Daphne's dead, and pleasure is no more !

No grateful dews descend from evening skies,
 Nor morning odours from the flowers arise ;
 No rich perfumes refresh the fruitful field,
 Nor fragrant herbs their native incense yield.
 The balmy Zephyrs, silent since her death,
 Lament the ceasing of a sweeter breath ;
 The industrious bees neglect their golden store :
 Fair Daphne's dead, and sweetness is no more !

No more the mounting larks, while Daphne sings,
 Shall, listening in mid air, suspend their wings ;
 No more the birds shall imitate her lays,
 Or, hush'd with wonder, hearken from the sprays :
 No more the streams their murmurs shall forbear.
 A sweeter music than their own to hear ;
 But tell the reeds, and tell the vocal shore,
 Fair Daphne's dead, and music is no more !

Her fate is whisper'd by the gentle breeze,
 And told in sighs to all the trembling trees :

The trembling trees, in every plain and wood,
 Her fate remurmur to the silver flood;
 The silver flood, so lately calm, appears
 Swell'd with new passion, and o'erflows with tears;
 The winds, and trees, and floods, her death deplore.
 Daphne our grief, our glory now no more!

But see! where Daphne wondering mounts on high
 Above the clouds, above the starry sky!
 Eternal beauties grace the shining scene,
 Fields ever fresh, and groves for ever green!
 There, while you rest in amaranthine bowers,
 Or from those meads select unfading flowers,
 Behold us kindly, who your name implore,
 Daphne, our goddess, and our grief no more!

LYCIDAS.

How all things listen, while thy muse complains!
 Such silence waits on Philomela's strains,
 In some still evening, when the whispering breeze
 Pants on the leaves, and dies upon the trees.
 To thee, bright goddess, oft a lamb shall bleed,
 If teeming ewes increase my fleecy breed.
 While plants their shade, or flowers their odours give,
 Thy name, thy honour, and thy praise, shall live!

THYRSIS.

But see! Orion sheds unwholesome dews;
 Arise, the pines a noxious shade diffuse;
 Sharp Boreas blows, and Nature feels decay;
 Time conquers all, and we must Time obey.
 Adieu, ye vales, ye mountains, streams, and groves;
 Adieu, ye shepherd's rural lays and loves;
 Adieu, my flocks; farewell, ye sylvan crew:
 Daphne, farewell! and all the world, adieu!

MESSIAH.A sacred Eclogue in Imitation of Virgil's Pollio.ADVERTISEMENT.

In reading several passages of the prophet Isaiah, which foretell the coming of Christ, and the felicities attending it, I could not but observe a remarkable parity between many of the thoughts, and those in the Pollio of Virgil. This will not seem surprising when we reflect, that the eclogue was taken from a Sibylline prophecy on the same subject. One may judge that Virgil did not copy it line for line; but selected such ideas as best agreed with the nature of pastoral poetry, and disposed them in that manner which served most to beautify his piece. I have endeavoured the same in this imitation of him, though without admitting any thing of my own; since it was written with this particular view, that the reader by comparing the several thoughts, might see how far the images and descriptions of the prophet are superior to those of the poet.

YE nymphs of Solyma! begin the song:
To heavenly themes sublimer strains belong.
The mossy fountains and the sylvan shades,
The dreams of Pindus and the Aonian maids,
Delight no more—O Thou my voice inspire,
Who touch'd Isaiah's hallow'd lips with fire!
Rapt into future times, the bard begun:
A Virgin shall conceive, a Virgin bear a Son!
From Jesse's<sup>1</sup> root behold a branch arise,
Whose sacred flower with fragrance fills the skies: 10
The ethereal spirit o'er its leaves shall move,
And on its top descends the mystic dove.
Ye heavens!<sup>2</sup> from high the dewy nectar pour,
And in soft silence shed the kindly shower!
The sick<sup>3</sup> and weak the healing plant shall aid, 15
From storm a shelter, and from heat a shade.

(1) Isa. xi. ver. 1. (2) Ch. xlv. ver. 8. (3) Ch. xiv ver. 4.

All crimes shall cease, and ancient frauds shall fail;
 Returning Justice<sup>1</sup> lift aloft her scale;
 Peace o'er the world her olive wand, extend,
 And white-robed Innocence from heaven descend. 20
 Swift fly the years, and rise the expected morn!
 Oh spring to light, auspicious Babe, be born!
 See, Nature hastes her earliest wreaths to bring,
 With all the incense of the breathing spring:
 See lofty Lebanon<sup>2</sup> his head advance, 25
 See nodding forests on the mountains dance:
 See spicy clouds from lowly Saron rise,
 And Carmel's flowery top perfume the skies
 Hark! a glad voice the lonely desert cheers;
 Prepare the way!<sup>3</sup> A God, a God appears! 30
 A God, a God! the vocal hills reply;
 The rocks proclaim the approaching Deity.
 Lo, earth receives him from the bending skies!
 Sink down, ye mountains; and ye valleys, rise!
 With heads declined, ye cedars, homage pay; 35
 Be smooth, ye rocks! ye rapid floods, give way!
 The Saviour comes! by ancient bards foretold:
 Hear him, ye deaf! and all ye blind, behold!
 He from thick films shall purge the visual ray,
 And on the sightless eye-ball pour the day. 40
 'Tis he the obstructed paths of sound shall clear,
 And bid new music charm the unfolding ear:
 The dumb<sup>4</sup> shall sing, the lame his crutch forego,
 And leap exulting, like the bounding roe.
 No sigh, no murmur, the wide world shall hear; 45
 From every face he wipes off every tear.
 In adamantin<sup>5</sup> chains shall death be bound,
 And hell's grim tyrant feel the eternal wound.
 As the good shepherd<sup>6</sup> tends his fleecy care,
 Seeks freshest pasture, and the purest air; 50
 Explores the lost, the wandering sheep directs,
 By day o'ersees them, and by night protects;

The tender lambs he raises in his arms,
 Feeds from his hand, and in his bosom warms :
 Thus shall mankind his guardian care engage, 55
 The promised father<sup>1</sup> of the future age.
 No more shall nation<sup>2</sup> against nation rise,
 Nor ardent warriors meet with hateful eyes,
 Nor fields with gleaming steel be cover'd o'er,
 The brazen trumpets kindle rage no more ; 60
 But useless lances into scythes shall bend,
 And the broad falchion in a plough-share end.
 Then palaces shall rise ; the joyful son<sup>3</sup>
 Shall finish what his short-lived sire begun ;
 Their vines a shadow to their race shall yield, 65
 And the same hand that sow'd, shall reap the field.
 The swain in barren deserts<sup>4</sup> with surprise
 Sees lilies spring, and sudden verdure rise ;
 And starts, amidst the thirsty wilds to hear
 New falls of water murmuring in his ear. 70
 On rifted rocks, the dragon's late abodes,
 The green reed trembles, and the bulrush nods.
 Waste sandy valleys,<sup>5</sup> once perplex'd with thorn,
 The spiry fir and shapely box adorn :
 To leafless shrubs the flowery palms succeed, 75
 And odorous myrtle to the noisome weed.
 The lambs<sup>6</sup> with wolves shall graze the verdant mead,
 And boys in flowery bands the tiger lead.
 The steer and lion at one crib shall meet,
 And harmless serpents<sup>7</sup> lick the pilgrim's feet. 80
 The smiling infant in his hand shall take
 The crested basilisk and speckled snake,
 Pleased, the green lustre of the scales survey,
 And with their forky tongue shall innocently play.
 Rise, crown'd with light, imperial Salem,<sup>8</sup> rise ! 85
 Exalt thy towery head, and lift thy eyes !

See a long race<sup>1</sup> thy spacious courts adorn ;
 See future sons, and daughters yet unborn,
 In crowding ranks on every side arise,
 Demanding life, impatient for the skies ! 90
 See barbarous nations<sup>2</sup> at thy gates attend,
 Walk in thy light, and in thy temple bend ;
 See thy bright altars throng'd with prostrate kings,
 And heap'd with products of Sabea<sup>3</sup> springs !
 For thee Idume's spicy forests blow, 95
 And seeds of gold in Ophir's mountains glow :
 See heaven its sparkling portals wide display,
 And break upon them in a flood of day !
 No more the rising sun<sup>4</sup> shall gild the morn,
 Nor evening Cynthia fill her silver horn ; 100
 But lost, dissolved in thy superior rays,
 One tide of glory, one unclouded blaze,
 O'erflow thy courts: the Light himself shall shine
 Reveal'd, and God's eternal day be thine !
 The seas<sup>5</sup> shall waste, the skies in smoke decay, 105
 Rocks fall to dust, and mountains melt away ;
 But fix'd his word, his saving power remains ;
 Thy realm for ever lasts, thy own Messiah reigns !

WINDSOR FOREST.

To the Right Honourable George Lord Lansdowne

Non injussa cano: te nostræ, Vare, myricæ.
 Te nemo omne canet; nec Phæbo gratior ulla est,
 Quam sibi quæ Vari præscripsit pagina nomen.

VIRGIL.

THY forest, Windsor! and thy green retreats,
 At once the Monarch's and the Muses' seats,
 Invite my lays. Be present, sylvan maids !
 Unlock your springs, and open all your shades.

(1) Ch. ix. ver. 4. (2) Ch. ix. ver. 3. (3) Ch. ix. ver. 6
 (4) Ch. ix. ver. 19, 20. (5) Ch. li. ver. 6, and ch. lii
 ver. 10.

Granville commands ; your aid, O muses, bring
What muse for Granville can refuse to sing ?
The groves of Eden, vanish'd now so long,
Live in description, and look green in song ;
These, were my breast inspired with equal flame,
Like them in beauty, should be like in fame.
Here hills and vales, the woodland and the plain,
Here earth and water seem to strive again ;
Not chaos-like together crush'd and bruised,
But, as the world, harmoniously confused ;
Where order in variety we see,
And where, though all things differ, all agree.
Here waving groves a chequer'd scene display
And part admit, and part exclude the day ;
As some coy nymph her lover's warm address,
Nor quite indulges, nor can quite repress.
There, interspersed in lawns and opening glades,
Thin trees arise that sun each other's shades.
Here in full light the russet plains extend ;
There, wrapt in clouds, the blueish hills ascend.
E'en the wild heath displays her purple dyes,
And 'midst the desert, fruitful fields arise,
That, crown'd with tufted trees and springing corn,
Like verdant isles the sable waste adorn.
Let India boast her plants, nor envy we
The weeping amber, or the balmy tree,
While by our oaks the precious loads are borne,
And realms commanded which those trees adorn.
Not proud Olympus yields a nobler sight,
Though gods assembled grace his towering height,
Than what more humble mountains offer here,
Where, in their blessings, all those gods appear.
See Pan with flocks, with fruits Pomona crown'd,
Here blushing Flora paints the enamell'd ground,
Here Ceres' gifts in waving prospect stand,
And nodding tempt the joyful reaper's hand ;
Rich industry sits smiling on the plains,
And peace and plenty tell, a Stuart reigns.

Not thus the land appear'd in ages past,
A dreary desert, and a gloomy waste,
To savage beasts and savage laws a prey,
And kings more furious and severe than they;
Who claim'd the skies, dispeopled air and floods,
The lonely lords of empty wilds and woods:
Cities laid waste, they storm'd the dens and caves
(For wiser brutes were backward to be slaves.)
What could be free, when lawless beasts obey'd,
And e'en the elements a tyrant sway'd?
In vain kind seasons swell'd the teeming grain;
Soft showers distill'd, and suns grew warm in vain
The swain with tears his frustrate labour yields,
And, famish'd, dies amidst his ripen'd fields.
What wonder then, a beast or subject slain
Were equal crimes in a despotic reign?
Both, doom'd alike, for sportive tyrants bled,
But, while the subject starved, the beast was fed.
Proud Nimrod first the bloody chase began,
A mighty hunter, and his prey was man.
Our haughty Norman boasts that barbarous name,
And makes his trembling slaves the royal game.
The fields are ravish'd from the industrious swains,
From men their cities, and from gods their fanes:
The levell'd towns with weeds lie cover'd o'er;
The hollow winds through naked temples roar;
Round broken columns clasping ivy twined;
O'er heaps of ruins stalk'd the stately hind;
The fox obscene to gaping tombs retires,
And savage howlings fill the sacred quires.
Awed by his nobles, by his commons curst,
The oppressor ruled tyrannic where he durst,
Stretch'd o'er the poor and church his iron rod,
And serv'd alike his vassals and his God.
Whom e'en the Saxon spared, and bloody Dane,
The wanton victims of his sport remain.
But see, the man who spacious regions gave
A waste for beasts, himself denied a grave:

Stretch'd on the lawn his second hope survey,
At once the chaser, and at once the prey :
Lo Rufus, tugging at the deadly dart,
Bleeds in the forest like a wounded hart.
Succeeding monarchs heard the subjects' cries,
Nor saw displeas'd the peaceful cottage rise.
Then gathering flocks on unknown mountains fed,
O'er sandy wilds where yellow harvests spread,
The forests wonder'd at the unusual grain,
And secret transports touch'd the conscious swain
Fair Liberty, Britannia's goddess, rears
Her cheerful head, and leads the golden years.

Ye vigorous swains! while youth ferments your blood,
And purer spirits swell the sprightly flood,
Now range the hills, the gameful woods beset,
Wind the shrill horn, or spread the waving net.
When milder autumn summer's heat succeeds,
And in the new-shorn field the partridge feeds ;
Before his lord the ready spaniel bounds,
Panting with hope, he tries the furrow'd grounds ;
But when the tainted gales the game betray,
Couch'd close he lies, and meditates the prey :
Secure they trust the unfaithful field beset,
Till hovering o'er them sweeps the swelling net.
Thus (if small things we may with great compare)
When Albion sends her eager sons to war,
Some thoughtless town, with ease and plenty bless'd
Near and more near, the closing lines invest ;
Sudden they seize the amazed, defenceless prize,
And high in air Britannia's standard flies.

See! from the brake the whirring pheasant springs,
And mounts exulting on triumphant wings :
Short is his joy, he feels the fiery wound,
Flutters in blood, and panting beats the ground.
Ah ! what avails his glossy, varying dyes,
His purple crest, and scarlet circled eyes,
The vivid green his shining plumes unfold
His painted wings, and breast that flames with gold !

Nor yet, when moist Arcturus clouds the sky,
 The woods and fields their pleasing toils deny.
 To plains with well-breathed beagles we repair,
 And trace the mazes of the circling hare:
 (Beasts, urged by us, their fellow-beasts pursue,
 And learn of man each other to undo :)
 With slaughtering guns the unwearied fowler roves
 When frosts have whiten'd all the naked groves ;
 Where doves in flocks the leafless trees o'ershade,
 And lonely woodcocks haunt the watery glade
 He lifts the tube, and levels with his eye :
 Straight a short thunder breaks the frozen sky :
 Oft, as in airy rings they skim the heath,
 The clamorous lapwings feel the leaden death ;
 Oft, as the mounting larks their notes prepare,
 They fall, and leave their little lives in air.

In genial spring, beneath the quivering shade,
 Where cooling vapours breathe along the mead,
 The patient fisher takes his silent stand,
 Intent, his angle trembling in his hand ;
 With looks unmoved, he hopes the scaly breed,
 And eyes the dancing cork and bending reed.
 Our plenteous streams a various race supply,
 The bright-eyed perch with fins of Tyrian dye,
 The silver eel, in shining volumes roll'd,
 The yellow carp, in scales bedropp'd with gold,
 Swift trouts, diversifi'd with crimson stains,
 And pikes, the tyrants of the watery plains.

Now Cancer glows with Phæbus' fiery car
 The youth rush eager to the sylvan war,
 Swarm o'er the lawns, the forest walks surround,
 Rouse the fleet hart, and cheer the opening hound
 The impatient courser pants in every vein,
 And, pawing, seems to beat the distant plain :
 Hills, vales, and floods appear already cross'd,
 And, ere he starts, a thousand steps are lost.
 See the bold youth strain up the threatening steep,
 Rush through the thickets, down the valleys sweep,

Hang o'er their coursers' heads with eager speed,
 And earth rolls back beneath the flying steed.
 Let old Arcadia boast her ample plain,
 The immortal huntress, and her virgin train,
 Nor envy, Windsor! since thy shades have seen
 As bright a goddess, and as chaste a queen;
 Whose care, like hers, protects the sylvan reign,
 The earth's fair light, and empress of the main.

Here, too, 'tis sung, of old, Diana stray'd,
 And Cynthus' top forsook for Windsor shade
 Here was she seen o'er airy wastes to rove,
 Seek the clear spring, or haunt the pathless grove;
 Here, arm'd with silver bows, in early dawn,
 Her buskin'd virgins traced the dewy lawn.

Above the rest a rural nymph was famed,
 Thy offspring, Thames! the fair Lodona named:
 (Lodona's fate, in long oblivion cast,
 The muse shall sing, and what she sings shall last.)
 Scarce could the goddess from her nymph be known,
 But by the crescent, and the golden zone.
 She scorn'd the praise of beauty, and the care;
 A belt her waist, a fillet binds her hair;
 A painted quiver on her shoulder sounds,
 And with her dart the flying deer she wounds.
 It chanced, as eager of the chase, the maid
 Beyond the forest's verdant limits stray'd,
 Pan saw and loved, and burning with desire
 Pursued her flight; her flight increased his fire.
 Not half so swift the trembling doves can fly,
 When the fierce eagle cleaves the liquid sky;
 Not half so swiftly the fierce eagle moves,
 When thro' the clouds he drives the trembling doves,
 As from the god she flew with furious pace,
 Or as the god, more furious, urged the chace.
 Now fainting, sinking, pale, the nymph appears;
 Now close behind, his sounding steps she hears;
 And now his shadow reach'd her as she run,
 His shadow lengthen'd by the setting sun;

And now his shorter breath, with sultry air,
Pants on her neck, and fans her parting hair
In vain on father Thames she calls for aid,
Nor could Diana help her injured maid.
Faint, breathless, thus she pray'd, nor pray'd in vain
' Ah, Cynthia! ah—though banish'd from thy train,
Let me, O let me, to the shades repair,
My native shades! there weep, and murmur there!
She said, and, melting as in tears she lay,
In a soft silver stream dissolved away.
The silver stream her virgin coldness keeps,
For ever murmurs, and for ever weeps;
Still bears the name the helpless virgin bore,
And bathes the forest where she ranged before.
In her chaste current oft the goddess laves,
And with celestial tears augments the waves.
Oft in her glass the musing shepherd spies
The headlong mountains and the downward skies,
The watery landscape of the pendant woods,
And absent trees that tremble in the floods;
In the clear azure gleam the flocks are seen,
And floating forests paint the waves with green;
Through the fair scene roll slow the lingering streams,
Then foaming pour along, and rush into the Thames.

Thou, too, great father of the British floods!
With joyful pride survey'st our lofty woods;
Where towering oaks their growing honours rear,
And future navies on thy shores appear.
Not Neptune's self from all her streams receives
A wealthier tribute than to thine he gives.
No seas so rich, so gay no banks appear,
No lake so gentle, and no spring so clear.
Nor Po so swells the fabling poet's lays,
While led along the skies his current strays,
As thine, which visits Windsor's famed abodes,
To grace the mansion of our earthly gods,
Nor all his stars above a lustre show,
Like the bright beauties on thy banks below:

Where Jove, subdued by mortal passion still,
Might change Olympus for a nobler hill.

Happy the man whom this bright court approves,
His sovereign favours, and his country loves :
Happy next him, who to these shades retires,
Whom nature charms, and whom the muse inspires,
Whom humbler joys of home-felt quiet please,
Successive study, exercise and ease.

He gathers health from herbs the forest yields,
And of their fragrant physic spoils the fields ;
With chemic art exalts the mineral powers,
And draws the aromatic souls of flowers :
Now marks the course of rolling orbs on high ;
O'er figured worlds now travels with his eye ;
Of ancient writ unlocks the learned store,
Consults the dead, and lives past ages o'er :
Or wandering thoughtful in the silent wood,
Attends the duties of the wise and good,
'T' observe a mean, be to himself a friend,
To follow Nature, and regard his end ;
Or looks on Heaven with more than mortal eyes,
Bids his free soul expatiate in the skies,
Amid her kindred stars familiar roam,
Survey the region, and confess her home !
Such was the life great Scipio once admired,
Thus Atticus, and Trumbal thus retired.

Ye sacred Nine ! that all my soul possess,
Whose raptures fire me, and whose visions bless,
Bear me, O bear me to sequester'd scenes,
The bowery mazes, and surrounding greens ;
To Thames's banks which fragrant breezes fill
Or where ye, Muses, sport on Cooper's Hill ;
(On Cooper's Hill eternal wreaths shall grow,
While lasts the mountain, or while Thames shall flow ;
I seem through consecrated walks to rove,
I hear soft music die along the grove :
Led by the sound I roam from shade to shade
By godlike poets venerable made :

Here his first lays majestic Denham sung :
 There the last numbers flow'd from Cowley's tongue
 O early lost ! what tears the river shed,
 When the sad pomp along his banks was led !
 His drooping swans on every note expire,
 And on his willows hung each muse's lyre.

Since fate relentless stopp'd their heavenly voice,
 No more the forests ring, or groves rejoice ;
 Who now shall charm the shades where Cowley strung
 His living harp, and lofty Denham sung ?
 But hark ! the groves rejoice, the forest rings !
 Are these revived ? or is it Granville sings ?
 'Tis yours, my lord, to bless our soft retreats,
 And call the muses to their ancient seats ;
 To paint anew the flowery sylvan scenes,
 To crown the forest with immortal greens,
 Make Windsor hills in lofty numbers rise,
 And lift her turrets nearer to the skies ;
 To sing those honours you deserve to wear,
 And add new lustre to her silver star.

Here noble Surrey felt the sacred rage,
 Surrey, the Granville of a former age :
 Matchless his pen, victorious was his lance,
 Bold in the lists, and graceful in the dance ;
 In the same shades the Cupids tuned his lyre,
 To the same notes of love and soft desire :
 Fair Geraldine, bright object of his vow,
 Then fill'd the groves, as heavenly Mira now.

Oh, wouldst thou sing what heroes Windsor bore,
 What kings first breathed upon her winding shore !
 Or raise old warriors, whose adored remains
 In weeping vaults her hallow'd earth contains !
 With Edward's acts adorn the shining page,
 Stretch his long triumphs down through every age ;
 Draw monarchs chain'd, and Cressi's glorious field,
 The lilies blazing on the regal shield !
 Then, from her roofs when Verrio's colours fall,
 And leave inanimate the naked wall.

Still in thy song should vanquish'd France appear,
 And bleed for ever under Britain's spear.
 Let softer strains ill-fated Henry mourn,
 And palms eternal flourish round his urn :
 Here o'er the martyr-king the marble weeps,
 And, fast beside him, once-fear'd Edward sleeps
 Whom not the extended Albion could contain,
 From old Belerium to the northern main,
 The grave unites ; where e'en the great find rest,
 And blended lie the oppressor and the oppress'd !

Make sacred Charles's tomb for ever known
 (Obscure the place, and unscripted the stone:)
 Oh fact accursed ! what tears has Albion shed ?
 Heavens, what new wounds ! and how her old have bled
 She saw her sons with purple deaths expire,
 Her sacred domes involved in rolling fire,
 A dreadful series of intestine wars,
 Inglorious triumphs, and dishonest scars.
 At length great Anna said, ' Let discord cease !'
 She said, the world obey'd, and all was peace.

In that blest moment from his oozy bed
 Old father Thames advanced his reverend head ;
 His tresses dropp'd with dews, and o'er the stream
 His shining horns diffused a golden gleam :
 Grav'd on his urn appear'd the moon, that guides
 His swelling waters and alternate tides ;
 The figured streams in waves of silver roll'd,
 And on their banks Augusta rose in gold :
 Around his throne the sea-born brothers stood,
 Who swell with tributary urns his flood.
 First the famed authors of his ancient name,
 The winding Isis, and the fruitful Thame :
 The Kennet swift, for silver cels renown'd ;
 The Loddon slow, with verdant alders crown'd :
 Cole, whose dark streams his flowery islands lave ;
 And chalky Wey, that rolls a milky wave :
 The blue, transparent Vandalis appears ;
 The gulfy Lee his sedgy tresses rears ;

And sullen Mole, that hides his diving flood ;
 And silent Darent stain'd with Danish blood.
 High in the midst, upon his urn reclined,
 (His sea-green mantle waving with the wind,)
 The god appear'd : he turn'd his azure eyes
 Where Windsor-domes and pompous turrets rise ,
 Then bow'd, and spoke ; the winds forget to roar,
 And the hush'd waves glide softly to the shore :
 ' Hail, sacred peace ! hail, long expected days,
 That Thames's glory to the stars shall raise ;
 Though Tiber's streams immortal Rome behold,
 Though foaming Hermus swells with tides of gold,
 From heaven itself though sevenfold Nilus flows,
 And harvests on a hundred realms bestows ;
 These now no more shall be the muses' themes,
 Lost in my fame, as in the sea their streams.
 Let Volga's banks with iron squadrons shine,
 And groves of lances glitter on the Rhine ;
 Let barbarous Ganges arm a servile train,
 Be mine the blessings of a peaceful reign
 No more my sons shall dye with British blood
 Red Iber's sands, or Ister's foaming flood :
 Safe on my shore each unmolested swain
 Shall tend the flocks, or reap the bearded grain :
 The shady empire shall retain no trace
 Of war or blood, but in the sylvan chace :
 The trumpet sleep, while cheerful horns are blown
 And arms employ'd on birds and beasts alone.
 Behold ! the ascending villas on my side,
 Project long shadows o'er the crystal tide.
 Behold ! Augusta's glittering spires increase,
 And temples rise, the beauteous works of peace.
 I see, I see, where two fair cities bend
 Their ample bow, a new Whitehall ascend !
 There mighty nations shall inquire their doom,
 The world's great oracle in times to come ;
 There kings shall sue, and suppliant states be scen
 Once more to bend before a British queen.

'Thy trees, fair Windsor! now shall leave their woods,
And half thy forests rush into the floods ;
Bear Britain's thunder, and her cross display,
To the bright regions of the rising day ;
Tempt icy seas, where scarce the waters roll,
Where clearer flames glow round the frozen pole ;
Or under southern skies exalt their sails,
Led by new stars, and borne by spicy gales !
For me the balm shall bleed, and amber flow,
The coral redden, and the ruby glow,
The pearly shell its lucid globe unfold,
And Phœbus warm the ripening ore to gold.
The time shall come, when free as seas or wind,
Unbounded Thames shall flow for all mankind,
Whole nations enter with each swelling tide,
And seas but join the regions they divide ;
Earth's distant ends our glory shall behold,
And the new world launch forth to seek the old.
Then ships of uncouth form shall stem the tide,
And feather'd people crowd my wealthy side,
And naked youths and painted chiefs admire
Our speech, our colour, and our strange attire !
Oh, stretch thy reign, fair peace! from shore to shore,
Till conquest cease, and slavery be no more ;
Till the freed Indians in their native groves
Reap their own fruits, and woo their sable loves ;
Peru once more a race of kings behold,
And other Mexicos be roof'd with gold.
Exiled by thee from earth to deepest hell,
In brazen bonds shall barbarous discord dwell :
Gigantic pride, pale terror, gloomy care,
And mad ambition shall attend her there :
There purple vengeance bathed in gore retires,
Her weapons blunted, and extinct her fires :
There hateful envy her own snakes shall feel,
And persecution mourn her broken wheel :

There faction roar, rebellion bite her chain,
And aspiring furies thirst for blood in vain.'

Here cease thy flight, nor with unhallow'd lays Touch the fair fame of Albion's golden days ;
The thoughts of gods let Granville's verse recite,
And bring the scenes of opening fate to light ;
My humble muse, in unambitious strains,
Paints the green forests and the flowery plains,
Where peace descending, bids her olive spring,
And scatters blessings from her dove-like wing.
E'en I more sweetly pass my careless days,
Pleased in the silent shade with empty praise
Enough for me, that to the listening swains
First in these fields I sang the sylvan strains

ODE

ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY

MDCCVIII.

And other Pieces for Music.

DESCEND, ye Nine: descend and sing:
The breathing instruments inspire ;
Wake into voice each silent string,
And sweep the sounding lyre !
In a sadly-pleasing strain
Let the warbling lute complain
Let the loud trumpet sound,
Till the roofs all around
The shrill echoes rebound :
While, in more lengthen'd notes and slow
The deep, majestic, solemn organs blow.
Hark ! the numbers soft and clear
Gently steal upon the ear ;
Now louder, and yet louder rise,
And fill with spreading sounds the skies ;
Exulting in triumph now swell the bold notes
In broken air trembling, the wild music floats,

Till, by degrees, remote and small,
 The strains decay,
 And melt away,
 In a dying, dying fall.

By music, minds an equal temper know,
 Nor swell too high, nor sink too low.
 If in the breast tumultuous joys arise,
 Music her soft, assuasive voice applies ;
 Or, when the soul is press'd with cares,
 Exalts her in enlivening airs.
 Warriors she fires with animated sounds ;
 Pours balm into the bleeding lover's wounds ;
 Melancholy lifts her head,
 Morpheus rouses from his bed,
 Sloth unfolds her arms and wakes,
 Listening envy drops her snakes ;
 Intestine war no more our passions wage,
 And giddy factions bear away their rage.

But when our country's cause provokes to arms,
 How martial music every bosom warms !
 So when the first bold vessel dared the seas,
 High on the stern the Thracian raised his strain,
 While Argo saw her kindred trees
 Descend from Pelion to the main.
 Transported demi-gods stood round,
 And men grew heroes at the sound,
 Inflamed with glory's charms :
 Each chief his sevenfold shield display'd,
 And half unsheathed the shining blade :
 And seas, and rocks, and skies rebound
 To arms, to arms, to arms !

But when through all the infernal bounds,
 Which flaming Phlegethon surrounds,
 Love, strong as death, the poet led
 To the pale nations of the dead,
 What sounds were heard,
 What scenes appear'd,

O'er all the dreary coasts !

Dreadful gleams,
Dismal screams,
Fires that glow,
Shrieks of woe,
Sullen moans,
Hollow groans,

And cries of tortured ghosts :

But, hark ! he strikes the golden lyre :

And see ! the tortured ghosts respire.

See, shady forms advance !

Thy stone, O Sisyphus, stands still,

Ixion rests upon his wheel,

And the pale spectres dance !

The Furies sink upon their iron beds,

And snakes incur'd hang listening round their heads

By the streams that ever flow,
By the fragrant winds that blow

O'er the Elysian flowers ;

By those happy souls, who dwell
In yellow meads of asphodel,

Or amaranthine bowers !

By the hero's armed shades,
Glittering through the gloomy glades ;

By the youths that died for love,

Wandering in the myrtle grove,

Restore, restore Eurydice to life :

Oh take the husband, or return the wife !

He sung, and hell consented

To hear the poet's prayer,

Stern Proserpine relented,

And gave him back the fair.

Thus song could prevail

O'er death and o'er hell ;

A conquest how hard and how glorious !

Though fate had fast bound her

With Styx nine times round her,

Yet music and love were victorious.

But soon, too soon the lover turns his eyes .
 Again she falls, again she dies, she dies !
 How wilt thou now the fatal sisters move ?
 No crime was thine, if 'tis no crime to love.

Now under hanging mountains,
 Beside the falls of fountains,
 Or where Hebrus wanders,
 Rolling in meanders,

All alone,
 Unheard, unknown,
 He makes his moan,
 And calls her ghost,

For ever, ever, ever, lost !
 Now with furies surrounded,
 Despairing, confounded,
 He trembles, he glows,

Amidst Rhodope's snows :

See, wild as the winds, o'er the desert he flies ;
 Hark ! Hæmus resounds with the Bacchanals' cry
 Ah see, he dies !

Yet e'en in death Eurydice he sung :
 Eurydice still trembled on his tongue :

Eurydice the woods,
 Eurydice the floods,

Eurydice the rocks and hollow mountains rung.

Music the fiercest grief can charm,
 And Fate's severest rage disarm ;
 Music can soften pain to ease,
 And make despair and madness please :
 Our joys below it can improve,
 And antedate the bliss above.

This the divine Cecilia found,
 And to her Maker's praise confined the sound,
 When the full organ joins the tuneful quire,

The immortal powers incline their ear :
 Borne on the swelling notes our souls aspire,
 While solemn airs improve the sacred fire ;
 And angels lean from heaven to hear.

Of Orpheus now no more let poets tell;
 To bright Cecilia greater power is given:
 His numbers raised a shade from hell,
 Hers lift the soul to heaven.

TWO CHORUSSES
 TO THE TRAGEDY OF BRUTUS,

*Altered from Shakspeare by the Duke of Buckingham:
 at whose desire these two Chorusses were composed, to supply as many wanting in his Play. They were set many years afterwards by the famous Bononcini,
 and performed at Buckingham-house.*

CHORUS OF ATHENIANS.

Strophe 1.

YE shades, where sacred truth is sought;
 Groves, where immortal sages taught;
 Where heavenly visions Plato fired,
 And Epicurus lay inspired!
 In vain your guiltless laurels stood
 Unspotted long with human blood.
 War, horrid war, your thoughtful walks invades,
 And steel now glitters in the muses' shades.

Antistrophe 1.

Oh heaven-born sisters! source of art!
 Who charm the sense, or mend the heart;
 Who lead fair virtue's train along,
 Moral truth and mystic song!
 To what new clime, what distant sky,
 Forsaken, friendless, shall ye fly?
 Say, will ye bless the bleak Atlantic shore?
 Or bid the furious Gaul be rude no more?

Strophe 2.

When Athens sinks by fates unjust,
 When wild barbarians spurn her dust!

Perhaps e'en Britain's utmost shore
 Shall cease to blush with stranger's gore:
 See arts her savage sons controul,
 And Athens rising near the pole!
 Till some new tyrant lifts his purple hand,
 And civil madness tears them from the land.

Antistrophe 2.

Ye gods! what justice rules the ball?
 Freedom and arts together fall;
 Fools grant whate'er ambition craves,
 And men once ignorant are slaves.
 O cursed effects of civil hate,
 In every age, in every state!
 Still, when the lust of tyrant power succeeds,
 Some Athens perishes, some Tully bleeds.

CHORUS OF YOUTHS AND VIRGINS

Semichorus.

OH tyrant Love! hast thou possess'd
 The prudent, learn'd, and virtuous breast?
 Wisdom and wit in vain reclaim,
 And arts but soften us to feel thy flame.
 Love, soft intruder, enters here,
 But entering learns to be sincere.
 Marcus, with blushes owns he loves,
 And Brutus tenderly reproveth.
 Why, virtue, dost thou blame desire,
 Which nature hath impress'd?
 Why, nature, dost thou soonest fire
 The mild and generous breast?

Chorus.

Love's purer flames the gods approve;
 The gods and Brutus bend to love:
 Brutus for absent Porcia sighs,
 And sterner Cassius melts at Junia's eyes
 What is loose love? a transient gust,
 Spent in a sudden storm of lust;

A vapour fed from wild desire ;
 A wandering, self-consuming fire.
 But Hymen's kinder flames unite,
 And burn for ever one ;
 Chaste as cold Cynthia's virgin light,
 Productive as the sun.

Semichorus.

Oh source of every social tie,
 United wish, and mutual joy !
 What various joys on one attend,
 As son, as father, brother, husband, friend.
 Whether his hoary sire he spies,
 While thousand grateful thoughts arise ;
 Or meets his spouse's fonder eye ;
 Or views his smiling progeny ;
 What tender passions take their turns,
 What home-felt raptures move !
 His heart now melts, now leaps, now burns,
 With reverence, hope, and love.

Chorus.

Hence, guilty joys, distastes, surmises ;
 Hence, false tears, deceits, disguises,
 Dangers, doubts, delays, surprises,
 Fires that scorch, yet dare not shine :
 Purest Love's unwasting treasure,
 Constant faith, fair hope, long leisure ;
 Day of ease, and nights of pleasure,
 Sacred Hymen ! these are thine.

 ODE ON SOLITUDE.

Written when the Author was about twelve Years old

HAPPY the man whose wish and care
 A few paternal acres bound,
 Content to breathe his native air
 In his own groun

Whose herds with milk, whose fields with bread,
Whose flocks supply him with attire ;
Whose trees in summer yield him shade,
In winter fire.

Bless'd, who can unconcernedly find
Hours, days, and years, slide soft away,
In health of body, peace of mind,
Quiet by day.

Sound sleep by night : study and ease,
Together mix'd ; sweet recreation,
And innocence, which most does please
With meditation.

Thus let me live, unseen, unknown ;
Thus unlamented, let me die,
Steal from the world, and not a stone
Tell where I lie.

ODE.

The dying Christian to his Soul.

VITAL spark of heavenly flame !
Quit, oh quit this mortal frame :
Trembling, hoping, lingering, flying—
Oh the pain, the bliss of dying !
Cease, fond Nature, cease thy strife,
And let me languish into life.

Hark ! they whisper : angels say,
Sister spirit, come away.
What is this absorbs me quite,
Steals my senses, shuts my sight,
Drowns my spirits, draws my breath ?
Tell me, my soul, can this be death ?

The world recedes ; it disappears !
Heaven opens on my eyes ! my ears
With sounds seraphic ring :

Lend, lend your wings ! I mount ! I fly .
 Oh grave ! where is thy victory ?
 Oh death ! where is thy sting ?

AN ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

Written in the Year 1709.

PART I.

Introduction. That it is as great a fault to judge ill, as to write ill, and a more dangerous one to the public, ver. 1. That a true taste is as rare to be found as a true genius, ver. 9 to 18. That most men are born with some taste, but spoiled by false education, ver. 19 to 25. The multitude of critics, and causes of them, ver. 26 to 45. That we are to study our own taste, and know the limits of it, ver. 46 to 67. Nature the best guide of judgment, ver. 68 to 87. Improved by art and rules, which are but methodized nature, ver. 88. Rules derived from the practice of ancient poets, ver. 88 to 110. That therefore the ancients are necessary to be studied by a critic, particularly Homer and Virgil, ver. 120 to 138. Of licenses, and the use of them by the ancients, ver. 140 to 180. Reverence due to the ancients, and praise of them, ver. 181. &c.

'Tis hard to say, if greater want of skill
 Appear in writing, or in judging ill ;
 But of the two, less dangerous is the offence
 To tire our patience, than mislead our sense.
 Some few in that, but numbers err in this ;
 Ten censure wrong for one who writes amiss
 A fool might once himself alone expose ;
 Now one in verse makes many more in prose.
 'Tis with our judgments as our watches ; none
 Go just alike, yet each believes his own. 10
 In poets as true genius is but rare,
 True taste as seldom is the critic's share "

Both must alike from Heaven derive their light,
 These born to judge, as well as those to write.
 Let such teach others who themselves excel,
 And censure freely, who have written well :
 Authors are partial to their wit, 'tis true ;
 But are not critics to their judgment too ?
 Yet, if we look more closely, we shall find
 Most have the seeds of judgment in their mind : 20
 Nature affords at least a glimmering light ;
 The lines, though touch'd but faintly, are drawn right.
 But as the slightest sketch, if justly traced,
 Is by ill-colouring but the more disgraced,
 So by false learning is good sense defaced :
 Some are bewilder'd in the maze of schools,
 And some made coxcombs nature meant but fools :
 In search of wit these lose their common sense,
 And then turn critics in their own defence :
 Each burns alike, who can, or cannot write, 30
 Or with a rival's or an eunuch's spite.
 All fools have still an itching to deride,
 And fain would be upon the laughing side
 If Mævius scribble in Apollo's spite,
 There are who judge still worse than he can write.
 Some have at first for wits, then poets pass'd ;
 Turn'd critics next, and proved plain fools at last.
 Some neither can for wits nor critics pass,
 As heavy mules are neither horse nor 'ass.
 Those half-learn'd witlings, numerous in our isle, 40
 As half-form'd insects on the banks of Nile ;
 Unfinish'd things, one knows not what to call,
 Their generation's so equivocal :
 To tell them would a hundred tongues require,
 Or one vain wit's, that might a hundred tire.
 But you, who seek to give and merit fame,
 And justly bear a critic's noble name,
 Be sure yourself and your own reach to know,
 How far your genius, taste, and learning, go ;

Launch not beyond your depth, but be discreet, 50
 And mark that point where sense and dulness meet
     Nature to all things fix'd the limits fit,
 And wisely curb'd proud man's pretending wit :
 As on the land while here the ocean gains,
 In other parts it leaves wide sandy plains ;
 Thus in the soul while memory prevails,
 The solid power of understanding fails ;
 Where beams of warm imagination play,
 The memory's soft figures melt away.
 One science only will one genius fit ; 60
 So vast is art, so narrow human wit :
 Not only bounded to peculiar arts,
 But oft in those confined to single parts.
 Like kings, we lose the conquests gain'd before,
 By vain ambition still to make them more :
 Each might his several province well command,
 Would all but stoop to what they understand.
     First follow nature, and your judgment frame
 By her just standard, which is still the same :
 Unerring nature, still divinely bright, 70
 One clear, unchanged, and universal light,
 Life, force, and beauty, must to all impart,
 At once the source, and end, and test of art ;
 Art from that fund each just supply provides ;
 Works without show, and without pomp presides :
 In some fair body thus the informing soul
 With spirits feeds, with vigour fills the whole,
 Each motion guides, and every nerve sustains ;
 Itself unseen, but in the effects remains.
 Some, to whom Heaven in wit has been profuse, 80
 Want as much more, to turn it to its use ;
 For wit and judgment often are at strife,
 Though meant each other's aid, like man and wife.
 'Tis more to guide, than spur the muse's steed ;
 Restrain his fury, than provoke his speed :
 The winged courser, like a generous horse,
 Shows most true mettle when you check his course

AN ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

77

Those rules of old discover'd, not devised,
 Are nature still, but nature methodized :
 Nature, like liberty, is but restrain'd 90
 By the same laws which first herself ordain'd.

Hear how learn'd Greece her useful rules indites,
 When to repress, and when indulge our flights :
 High on Parnassus' top her sons she show'd,
 And pointed out those arduous paths they trod ;
 Held from afar, aloft, the immortal prize,
 And urged the rest by equal steps to rise.
 Just precepts thus from great examples given,
 She drew from them what they derived from Heaven.

The generous critic fann'd the poet's fire, 100

And taught the world with reason to admire.
 Then criticism the muse's handmaid proved,
 To dress her charms, and make her more beloved :
 But following wits from that intention stray'd ;
 Who could not win the mistress, woo'd the maid ;
 Against the poets their own arms they turn'd,
 Sure to hate most the men from whom they learn'd.

So modern 'pothecaries, taught the art
 By doctor's bills to play the doctor's part,
 Bold in the practice of mistaken rules, 110

Prescribe, apply, and call their masters fools.
 Some on the leaves of ancient authors prey,
 Nor time nor moths e'er spoil'd so much as they :
 Some drily plain, without invention's aid,
 Write dull receipts how poems may be made.
 These leave the sense, their learning to display,
 And those explain the meaning quite away.

You then, whose judgment the right course would steer,

Know well each ancient's proper character :
 His fable, subject, scope in every page : 120

Religion, country, genius of his age :
 Without all these at once before your eyes,
 Cavil you may, but never criticise.

Be Homer's works your study and delight,
 Read them by day, and meditate by night :
 Thence form your judgment, thence your maxima bring,

And trace the muses upward to their spring.
 Still with itself compared, his text peruse ;
 And let your comment be the Mantuan Muse.

When first young Maro, in his boundless mind 138
 A work t'outlast immortal Rome design'd,
 Perhaps he seem'd above the critic's law,
 And but from nature's fountains scorn'd to draw :
 But when to examine every part he came,
 Nature and Homer were, he found, the same.
 Convinced, amazed, he checks the bold design,
 And rules as strict his labour'd work confine,
 As if the Stagyrite o'erlooked each line.
 Learn hence for ancient rules a just esteem,
 To copy nature, is to copy them. 140

Some beauties yet no precepts can declare,
 For there's a happiness as well as care.
 Music resembles poetry ; in each
 Are nameless graces which no methods teach,
 And which a master-hand alone can reach.
 If, where the rules not far enough extend (Since rules were made but to promote their end,)
 Some lucky license answer to the full
 The intent proposed, that license is a rule.
 Thus Pegasus, a nearer way to take, 150
 May boldly deviate from the common track ;
 From vulgar bounds with brave disorder part,
 And snatch a grace beyond the reach of art,
 Which, without passing through the judgment, gains
 The heart, and all its ends at once attains.
 In prospects thus, some objects please our eyes,
 Which out of nature's common order rise,
 The shapeless rock, or hanging precipice.
 Great wits sometimes may gloriously offend,
 And rise to faults true critics dare not mend. 160

But though the ancients thus their rules invade
 'As kings dispense with laws themselves have made,'
 Moderns, beware! or, if you must offend
 Against the precept, ne'er transgress its end:
 Let it be seldom, and compell'd by need;
 And have, at least, their precedent to plead.
 The critic else proceeds without remorse,
 Seizes your fame, and puts his laws in force.

I know there are, to whose presumptuous thoughts
 Those freer beauties, e'en in them, seem faults. 170
 Some figures monstrous and mis-shaped appear,
 Consider'd singly, or beheld too near,
 Which, but proportion'd to their light or place,
 Due distance reconciles to form and grace.
 A prudent chief not always must display
 His powers in equal ranks, and fair array,
 But with the occasion, and the place comply,
 Conceal his force, nay seem sometimes to fly.
 Those oft are stratagems which errors seem,
 Nor is it Homer nods, but we that dream. 180

Still green with bays each ancient altar stands,
 Above the reach of sacrilegious hands;
 Secure from flames, from envy's fiercer rage,
 Destructive war, and all-involving age.
 See from each clime the learn'd their incense bring!
 Hear, in all tongues consenting Pæans ring!
 In praise so just let every voice be join'd,
 And fill the general chorus of mankind.
 Hail! bards triumphant! born in happier days;
 Immortal heirs of universal praise! 190
 Whose honours with increase of ages grow,
 As streams roll down, enlarging as they flow;
 Nations unborn your mighty names shall sound,
 And worlds applaud that must not yet be found!
 O may some spark of your celestial fire,
 The last, the meanest of your sons inspire,
 (That, on weak wings, from far pursues your flights Glows while he reads, but trembles as he writes,)

To teach vain wits a science little known,
 -To admire superior sense, and doubt their own ! 200

 PART II.

Causes hindering a true judgment. 1. Pride, ver. 201.
 2. Imperfect learning, ver. 215. 3. Judging by parts, and not by the whole, ver. 233 to 288. Critics in wit, language, versification, only, 288, 305, 339, &c. 4.
 Being too hard to please, or too apt to admire, ver. 334.
 5. Partiality—too much love to a sect—to the ancients or moderns, ver. 394. 6. Prejudice or prevention, ver.
 408. 7. Singularity, ver. 424. 8. Inconstancy ver
 430. 9. Party spirit, ver. 452, &c. 10. Envy, ver. 466
 Against envy, and in praise of good-nature, ver. 508,
 &c. When severity is chiefly to be used by the critics,
 ver. 526, &c.

Of all the causes which conspire to blind
 Man's erring judgment, and misguide the mind,
 What the weak head with strongest bias rules,
 Is pride ; the never-failing vice of fools.
 Whatever nature has in worth denied,
 She gives in large recruits of needful pride !
 For as in bodies, thus in souls, we find
 What wants in blood and spirits, swell'd with wind :
 Pride, where wit fails, steps in to our defence,
 And fills up all the mighty void of sense. 210
 If once right reason drives that cloud away,
 Truth breaks upon us with resistless day.
 Trust not yourself ; but, your defects to know
 Make use of every friend—and every foe.
 A little learning is a dangerous thing !
 Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring ;
 There shallow draughts intoxicate the brain,
 And drinking largely sobers us again.
 Fired at first sight with what the muse imparts,
 In fearless youth we tempt the height of arts, 220
 While from the bounded level of our mind,
 Short views we take, nor see the lengths behind ;

But more advanced, behold with strange surprise
 New distant scenes of endless science rise !
 So, pleased at first, the towering Alps we try,
 Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky !
 The eternal snows appear already pass'd,
 And the first clouds and mountains seem the last :
 But, those attain'd, we tremble to survey
 The growing labours of the lengthen'd way : 236
 The increasing prospect tires our wandering eyes,
 Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise !

A perfect judge will read each work of wit
 With the same spirit that its author writ :
 Survey the whole, nor seek slight faults to find
 Where nature moves, and rapture warms the mind ,
 Nor lose, for that malignant dull delight,
 The generous pleasure to be charm'd with wit.
 But, in such lays as neither ebb nor flow,
 Correctly cold, and regularly low, 240
 That, shunning faults, one quiet tenor keep ;
 We cannot blame indeed—but we may sleep.
 In wit, as nature, what affects our hearts
 Is not the exactness of peculiar parts ;
 'Tis not a lip, or eye, we beauty call,
 But the joint force and full result of all.
 Thus when we view some well-proportion'd dome,
 (The world's just wonder, and e'en thine, oh Rome !
 No single parts unequally surprise ;
 All comes united to the admiring eyes : 250
 No monstrous height, or breadth, or length appear :
 The whole at once is bold, and regular.

Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see,
 Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall be.
 In every work regard the writer's end,
 Since none can compass more than they intend ;
 And if the means be just, the conduct true,
 Applause, in spite of trivial faults, is due.
 As men of breeding, sometimes men of wit,
 To avoid great errors, must the less commit ;

Neglect the rule each verbal critic lays ;
 For not to know some trifles, is a praise.
 Most critics, fond of some subservient art,
 Still make the whole depend upon a part :
 They talk of principles, but notions prize,
 And all to one loved folly sacrifice.

Once on a time, La Mancha's knight, they say,
 A certain bard encountering on the way,
 Discours'd in terms as just, with looks as sage,
 As e'er could Dennis, of the Grecian stage ; 270
 Concluding all were desperate sots and fools,
 Who durst depart from Aristotle's rules.
 Our author, happy in a judge so nice,
 Produced his play, and begg'd the knight's advice ;
 Made him observe the subject, and the plot,
 The manners, passions, unities ; what not ?
 All which, exact to rule, were brought about,
 Were but a combat in the lists left out.

What ! leave the combat out ?' exclaims the knight.
 Yes, or we must renounce the Stagyrite.'— 280
 'Not so, by heaven ! (he answers in a rage)
 'Knights, squires, and steeds, must enter on the stage.'
 'So vast a throng the stage can ne'er contain.'—
 'Then build a new, or act it on a plain.'

Thus critics of less judgment than caprice,
 Curious, not knowing, not exact, but nice,
 Form short ideas ; and offend in arts
 (As most in manners) by a love to parts.

Some to conceit alone their taste confine,
 And glittering thoughts struck out at every line ; 290
 Pleased with a work where nothing's just or fit ;
 One glaring chaos and wild heap of wit.
 Poets, like painters, thus unskill'd to trace
 The naked nature and the living grace,
 With gold and jewels cover every part,
 And hide with ornaments their want of art.
 True wit is nature to advantage dress'd,
 What oft was thought, but ne'er so well express'd

Something, whose truth convinced at sight we find ;
That gives us back the image of our mind. 300

As shades more sweetly recommend the light,
So modest plainness sets off sprightly wit ;
For works may have more wit than does them good,
As bodies perish through excess of blood.

Others for language all their care express,
And value books, as women men, for dress :
Their praise is still,—the style is excellent ;
The sense, they humbly take upon content.
Words are like leaves ; and where they most abound,
Much fruit of sense beneath is rarely found. 310

False eloquence, like the prismatic glass,
Its gaudy colours spreads on every place ;
The face of nature we no more survey,
All glares alike, without distinction gay :
But true expression, like the unchanging sun,
Clears and improves whate'er it shines upon :
It gilds all objects, but it alters none.

Expression is the dress of thought, and still Appears more decent as more suitable :
A vile conceit in pompous words express'd, 320
Is like a clown in regal purple dress'd ;

For different styles with different subjects sort,
As several garbs, with country, town, and court.
Some by old words to fame have made pretence,
Ancients in phrase, mere moderns in their sense ;
Such labour'd nothings, in so strange a style,
Amaze the unlearn'd, and make the learned smile.

Unlucky, as Fungosa in the play,
These sparks with awkward vanity display
What the fine gentleman wore yesterday ; 330

And but so mimic ancient wits at best,
As apes our grandsires in their doublets dress'd.
In words, as fashions, the same rule will hold ;
Alike fantastic, if too new or old :
Be not the first by whom the new are tried,
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.

But most by numbers judge a poet's song ;
 And smooth or rough, with them, is right or wrong :
 In the bright muse though thousand charms conspire,
 Her voice is all these tuneful fools admire ;      340
 Who haunt Parnassus but to please their ear,
 Not mend their minds ; as some to church repair,
 Not for the doctrine, but the music there.
 These equal syllables alone require,
 Though oft the ear the open vowels tire ;
 While expletives their feeble aid do join,
 And ten low words oft creep in one dull line :
 While they ring round the same unvaried chimes,
 With sure returns of still expected rhymes ;
 Where'er you find 'the cooling western breeze,' 350
 In the next line it 'whispers through the trees :'
 If crystal streams 'with pleasing murmurs creep,'
 The reader's threatened (not in vain) with 'sleep ;'
 Then at the last, and only couplet fraught
 With some unmeaning thing they call a thought,
 A needless Alexandrine ends the song,
 That, like a wounded snake, drags its slow length along.

Leave such to tune their own dull rhymes, and know
 What's roundly smooth, or languishingly slow ;
 And praise the easy vigour of a line,      360
 Where Denham's strength and Waller's sweetness join

True ease in writing comes from art, not chance,
 As those move easiest who have learn'd to dance.
 'Tis not enough no harshness gives offence,
 The sound must seem an echo to the sense :
 Soft is the strain when Zephyr gently blows,
 And the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows ;
 But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
 The hoarse, rough verse should like the torrent roar.
 When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw
 The line too labours, and the words move slow : 370

Not so, when swift Camilla scours the plain,
 Flies o'er the unbending corn, and skims along the main
 Hear how Timotheus' varied lays surprise,
 And bid alternate passions fall and rise!
 While, at each change, the son of Libyan Jove
 Now burns with glory, and then melts with love:
 Now his fierce eyes with sparkling fury glow,
 Now sighs steal out, and tears begin to flow :
 Persians and Greeks like turns of nature found, 380
 And the world's victor stood subdued by sound !
 The power of music all our hearts allow,
 And what Timotheus was, is Dryden now.

Avoid extremes ; and shun the fault of such
 Who still are pleased too little or too much.
 At every trifle scorn to take offence,
 That always shows great pride, or little sense :
 Those heads, as stomachs, are not sure the best,
 Which nauseate all, and nothing can digest.
 Yet let not each gay turn thy rapture move : 390
 For fools admire, but men of sense approve :
 As things seem large which we through mists descry,
 Dulness is ever apt to magnify.

Some foreign writers, some our own despise ;
 The ancients only, or the moderns prize :
 Thus wit, like faith, by each man is applied
 To one small sect, and all are damn'd beside.
 Meanly they seek the blessing to confine,
 And force that sun but on a part to shine,
 Which not alone the southern wit sublimes, 400
 But ripens spirits in cold northern climes ;
 Which from the first has shone on ages past,
 Enlights the present, and shall warm the last ;
 Though each may feel increases and decays,
 And see now clearer and now darker days.
 Regard not then if wit be old or new,
 But blame the false, and value still the true.

Some ne'er advance a judgment of their own,
 But catch the spreading notion of the town ;

They reason and conclude by precedent, 410
 And own stale nonsense which they ne'er invent.
 Some judge of authors' names, not works, and then
 Nor praise nor blame the writings, but the men.
 Of all this servile herd, the worst is he
 That in proud dulness joins with quality;
 A constant critic at the great man's board
 To fetch and carry nonsense for my lord.
 What woeful stuff this madrigal would be,
 In some starved hackney'd sonneteer, or me!
 But let a lord once own the happy lines, 420
 How the wit brightens! how the style refines!
 Before his sacred name flies every fault,
 And each exalted stanza teems with thought!
 The vulgar thus through imitation err;
 As oft the learn'd by being singular;
 So much they scorn the crowd, that if the throng
 By chance go right they purposely go wrong:
 So schismatics the plain believers quit,
 And are but damn'd for having too much wit.
 Some praise at morning what they blame at night,
 But always think the last opinion right. 431
 A muse by these is like a mistress used,
 This hour she's idolized, the next abused;
 While their weak heads, like towns unfortified,
 'Twixt sense and nonsense daily change their side.
 Ask them the cause; they're wiser still they say;
 And still to-morrow's wiser than to-day.
 We think our fathers fools, so wise we grow;
 Our wiser sons, no doubt, will think us so.
 Once school-divines this zealous isle o'erspread; 440
 Who knew most sentences was deepest read:
 Faith, Gospel, all, seem'd made to be disputed,
 And none had sense enough to be confuted:
 Scotists and Thomists, now in peace remain,
 Amidst their kindred cobwebs in Duck-lane.
 If faith itself has different dresses worn,
 What wonder modes in wit should take their turn?

Of, leaving what is natural and fit,
 The current folly proves the ready wit ;
 And authors think their reputation safe, 450
 Which lives as long as fools are pleased to laugh.

Some, valuing those of their own side or mind,
 Still make themselves the measure of mankind :
 Fondly we think we honour merit then,
 When we but praise ourselves in other men.
 Parties in wit attend on those of state,
 And public faction doubles private hate.
 Pride, malice, folly, against Dryden rose,
 In various shapes of parsons, critics, beaux :
 But sense survived, when merry jests were past ; 460
 For rising merit will buoy up at last.

Might he return and bless once more our eyes,
 New Blackmores and new Milbourns must arise ;
 Nay, should great Homer lift his awful head,
 Zoilus again would start up from the dead.
 Envy will merit, as its shade, pursue ;
 But, like a shadow, proves the substance true :
 For envied wit, like Sol eclipsed, makes known
 The opposing body's grossness, not its own.
 When first that sun too powerful beams displays, 470
 It draws up vapours which obscure its rays ;
 But e'en those clouds at last adorn its way,
 Reflect new glories, and augment the day.

Be thou the first true merit to befriend ;
 His praise is lost who stays till all commend.
 Short is the date, alas ! of modern rhymes,
 And 'tis but just to let them live betimes.
 No longer now that golden age appears,
 When patriarch-wits survived a thousand years :
 Now length of fame (our second life) is lost, 480
 And bare threescore is all e'en that can boast
 Our sons their fathers' failing language see,
 And such as Chaucer is, shall Dryden be.
 So when the faithful pencil has design'd
 Some bright idea of the master's mind,

Where a new world leaps out at his command,
 And ready nature waits upon his hand ;
 When the ripe colours soften and unite,
 And sweetly melt into just shade and light ;
 When mellowing years their full perfection give, 490
 And each bold figure just begins to live ;
 The treacherous colours the fair art betray
 And all the bright creation fades away !

Unhappy wit, like most mistaken things,
 Atones not for that envy which it brings ;
 In youth alone its empty praise we boast,
 But soon the short-lived vanity is lost ;
 Like some fair flower the early spring supplies,
 That gaily blooms, but e'en in blooming dies.
 What is this wit, which must our cares employ ? 500
 The owner's wife that other men enjoy ;
 Then most our trouble still when most admired,
 And still the more we give, the more required
 Whose fame with pains we guard, but lose with ease,
 Sure some to vex, but never all to please ;
 'Tis what the vicious fear, the virtuous shun ;
 By fools 'tis hated, and by knaves undone !

If wit so much from ignorance undergo,
 Ah, let not learning too commence its foe !
 Of old, those met rewards who could excel, 510
 And such were praised who but endeavour'd well ;
 Though triumphs were to generals only due,
 Crowns were reserved to grace the soldiers too.
 Now they who reach Parnassus' lofty crown,
 Employ their pains to spurn some others down ;
 And while self-love each jealous writer rules,
 Contending wits become the sport of fools :
 But still the worst with most regret commend,
 For each ill author is as bad a friend.
 To what base ends, and by what abject ways, 520
 Are mortals urged through sacred lust of praise !
 Ah, ne'er so dire a thirst of glory boast,
 Nor in the critic let the man be lost

Good nature and good sense must ever join ;
To err, is human ; to forgive, divine.

But if in noble minds some dregs remain,
Not yet purged off, of spleen and sour disdain ;
Discharge that rage on more provoking crimes,
Nor fear a dearth in these flagitious times.
No pardon vile obscenity should find, 530
Though wit and art conspire to move your mind ;
But dulness with obscenity must prove
As shameful sure as impotence in love.

In the fat age of pleasure, wealth, and ease,
Sprang the rank weed, and thrived with large increase :
When love was all an easy monarch's care ;
Seldom at council, never in a war ;
Jilts rul'd the state, and statesmen farces writ :
Nay, wits had pensions, and young lords had wit :
The fair sat panting at a courtier's play, 540
And not a mask went unimproved away ;
The modest fan was lifted up no more,
And virgins smiled at what they blush'd before.
The following licence of a foreign reign,
Did all the dregs of bold Socinus drain ;
Then unbelieving priests reform'd the nation,
And taught more pleasant methods of salvation ;
Where Heaven's free subjects might their rights dispute,

Lest God himself should seem too absolute ;
Pulpits their sacred satire learn'd to spare, 550
And vice admired to find a flatterer there !
Encouraged thus, wit's Titans braved the skies,
And the press groan'd with licensed blasphemies.
These monsters, critics ! with your darts engage,
Here point your thunder, and exhaust your rage !
Yet shun their fault, who scandalously nice
Will needs mistake an author into vice ;
All seems infected, that the infected spy,
As all looks yellow to the jaundiced eye.

LEARN then what moral critics ought to show, 560
For 'tis but half a judge's task to know.

'Tis not enough, taste, judgment, learning join;
In all you speak, let truth and candour shine;
That not alone what to your sense is due
All may allow, but seek your friendship too.

Be silent always, when you doubt your sense,
And speak, though sure, with seeming diffidence:
Some positive, persisting fops we know,
Who, if once wrong, will needs be always so:
But you, with pleasure, own your errors past, 570
And make each day a critique on the last.

'Tis not enough your counsel still be true:
Blunt truths more mischief than nice falsehoods do;
Men must be taught, as if you taught them not,
And things unknown proposed as things forgot.
Without good breeding truth is disapproved:
That only makes superior sense beloved.

Be niggards of advice on no pretence;
For the worst avarice is that of sense.
With mean complacence, ne'er betray your trust, 580
Nor be so civil as to prove unjust.
Fear not the anger of the wise to raise;
Those best can bear reproof, who merit praise

'Twere well might critics still this freedom take :
 But Appius reddens at each word you speak,
 And stares tremendous, with a threatening eye,
 Like some fierce tyrant in old tapestry.
 Fear most to tax an honourable fool,
 Whose right it is, uncensured, to be dull :
 Such, without wit, are poets when they please, 590
 As without learning they can take degrees.
 Leave dangerous truths to unsuccessful satires,
 And flattery to fulsome dedicators,
 Whom, when they praise, the world believes no more
 Than when they promise to give scribbling o'er.
 'Tis best sometimes your censure to restrain,
 And charitably let the dull be vain ;
 Your silence there is better than your spite :
 For who can rail so long as they can write ?
 Still humming on, their drowsy course they keep, 600
 And lash'd so long, like tops, are lash'd asleep.
 False steps but help them to renew the race,
 As, after stumbling, jades will mend their pace.
 What crowds of these, impenitently bold,
 In sounds and jingling syllables grown old,
 Still run on poets, in a raging vein,
 E'en to the dregs, and squeezings of the brain ;
 Strain out the last dull droppings of their sense,
 And rhyme with all the rage of impotence !
 Such shameless bards we have: and yet 'tis true, 610
 There are as mad, abandon'd critics too.
 The bookful blockhead, ignorantly read,
 With loads of learned lumber in his head,
 With his own tongue still edifies his ears,
 And always listening to himself appears.
 All books he reads, and all he reads assails,
 From Dryden's Fables down to Durfey's Tales :
 With him most authors steal their works, or buy ;
 Garth did not write his own Dispensary.
 Name a new play, and he's the poet's friend, 620
 Nay, show'd his faults—but when would poets mend ?

No place so sacred from such fops is barr'd,
 Nor is Paul's church more safe than Paul's church-yard;
 Nay, fly to altars, there they'll talk you dead;
 For fools rush in where angels fear to tread.
 Distrustful sense with modest caution speaks,
 It still looks home, and short excursions makes;
 But rattling nonsense in full volleys breaks,
 And, never shock'd, and never turn'd aside,
 Bursts out, resistless, with a thundering tide. 630

But where's the man who counsel can bestow,
 Still pleas'd to teach, and yet not proud to know?
 Unbiass'd, or by favour, or by spite;
 Not dully prepossess'd, nor blindly right;
 'Though learn'd, well-bred; and, though well-bred,
 sincere;

Modestly bold and humanly severe:
 Who to a friend his faults can freely show,
 And gladly praise the merit of a foe;
 Bless'd with a taste exact, yet unconfined;
 A knowledge both of books and human kind; 640
 Generous converse; a soul exempt from pride;
 And love to praise, with reason on his side?

Such once were critics; such the happy few
 Athens and Rome in better ages knew:
 The mighty Stagyrite first left the shore,
 Spread all his sails, and durst the deeps explore:
 He steer'd securely, and discover'd far,
 Led by the light of the Mæonian star.
 Poets, a race long unconfin'd and free,
 Still fond and proud of savage liberty, 650
 Received his laws, and stood convinc'd 'twas fit,
 Who conquer'd nature, should preside o'er wit.

Horace still charms with graceful negligence,
 And without method talks us into sense:
 Will, like a friend, familiarly convey
 The truest notions in the easiest way.
 He who, supreme in judgment as in wit,
 Might boldly censure, as he boldly writ;

Yet judged with coolness, though he sung with fire
 His precepts teach but what his works inspire. 660
 Our critics take a contrary extreme,
 They judge with fury, but they write with phlegm :
 Nor suffers Horace more in wrong translations
 By wits, than critics in as wrong quotations.

See Dionysius Homer's thoughts refine,
 And call new beauties forth from every line!
 Fancy and art in gay Petronius please,
 The scholar's learning with the courtier's ease.

In grave Quintilian's copious work we find
 The justest rules and clearest method join'd : 670
 Thus useful arms in magazines we place,
 All ranged in order, and dispos'd with grace,
 But less to please the eye than arm the hand,
 Still fit for use, and ready at command.

Thee, bold Longinus ! all the Nine inspire,
 And bless their critic with a poet's fire :
 An ardent judge, who, zealous in his trust,
 With warmth gives sentence, yet is always just,
 Whose own example strengthens all his laws,
 And is himself that great sublime he draws. 680

Thus long succeeding critics justly reign'd,
 Licence repress'd and useful laws ordain'd :
 Learning and Rome alike in empire grew,
 And arts still follow'd where her eagles flew ;
 From the same foes, at last, both felt their doom,
 And the same age saw learning fall, and Rome.
 With tyranny then superstition join'd,
 As that the body, this enslaved the mind ;
 Much was believed but little understood,
 And to be dull was construed to be good : 690
 A second deluge learning thus o'erran,
 And the monks finish'd what the Goths began.

At length Erasmus, that great injured name,
 (The glory of the priesthood, and the shame !)
 Stemm'd the wild torrent of a barbarous age,
 And drove those holy Vandals off the stage.

But see! each muse, in Leo's golden days,
 Starts from her trance, and trims her wither'd bays;
 Rome's ancient genius, o'er its ruins spread,
 Shakes off the dust, and rears his reverend head. 700
 Then sculpture and her sister-arts revive;
 Stones leap'd to form, and rocks began to live;
 With sweeter notes each rising temple rung;
 A Raphael painted, and a Vida sung.
 Immortal Vida! on whose honour'd brow
 The poet's bays and critic's ivy grow:
 Cremona now shall ever boast thy name,
 As next in place to Mantua, next in fame!

But soon by impious arms from Latium chased,
 Their ancient bounds the banish'd muses pass'd: 710
 Thence arts o'er all the northern world advance,
 But critic-learning flourish'd most in France:
 The rules a nation born to serve obeys,
 And Boileau still in right of Horace sways.
 But we, brave Britons, foreign laws despis'd,
 And kept unconquer'd and unciviliz'd;
 Fierce for the liberties of wit, and bold,
 We still defied the Romans, as of old.
 Yet some there were among the sounder few
 Of those who less presum'd, and better knew, 720
 Who durst assert the juster ancient cause,
 And here restor'd wit's fundamental laws.
 Such was the muse, whose rule and practice tell,
 'Nature's chief master-piece is writing well.'
 Such was Roscommon, not more learn'd than good,
 With manners generous as his noble blood;
 To him the wit of Greece and Rome was known,
 And every author's merit but his own.
 Such late was Walsh, the muse's judge and friend,
 Who justly knew to blame or to commend; 730
 To failings mild, but zealous for desert;
 The clearest head, and the sincerest heart.
 'This humble praise, lamented shade! receive,
 This praise at least a grateful muse may give:

The muse, whose early voice you taught to sing,
 Prescrib'd her heights, and prun'd her tender wing,
 (Her guide now lost,) no more attempts to rise,
 But in low numbers short excursions tries ;
 Content, if hence th' unlearn'd their wants may view,
 The learn'd reflect on what before they knew : 740
 Careless of censure, nor too fond of fame ;
 Still pleas'd to praise, yet not afraid to blame :
 Averse alike to flatter or offend ;
 Not free from faults, nor yet too vain to mend.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK

A HEROI-COMICAL POEM.

Written in the Year 1712.

---

TO MRS. ARABELLA FERMOR.

MADAM,

IT will be in vain to deny that I have some regard for this piece, since I dedicate it to you ; yet you may bear me witness, it was intended only to divert a few young ladies, who have good sense and good humour enough to laugh not only at their sex's little unguarded follies, but at their own. But as it was communicated with the air of a secret, it soon found its way into the world. An imperfect copy having been offered to a bookseller, you had the good nature for my sake to consent to the publication of one more correct. This I was forced to, before I had executed half my design ; for the machinery was entirely wanting to complete it.

The machinery, madam, is a term invented by the critics, to signify that part which the deities, angels, or demons, are made to act in a poem : for the ancient poets are, in one respect, like many modern ladies : let an action be never so trivial in itself they always make it appear of the utmost importance. These machines I determined to raise on a very new and odd foundation, the Rosicrucian doctrine of spirits.

I know how disagreeable it is to make use of hard words before a lady; but it is so much the concern of a poet to have his works understood, and particularly by your sex, that you must give me leave to explain two or three difficult terms.

The Rosicrucians are a people I must bring you acquainted with. The best account I know of them is in a French book called Le Compte de Gabalis, which, both in its title and size, is so like a novel, that many of the fair sex have read it for one by mistake. According to these gentlemen, the four elements are inhabited by spirits, which they call Sylphs, Gnomes, Nymphs, and Salamanders. The Gnomes, or demons of earth, delight in mischief; but the Sylphs, whose habitation is in the air, are the best conditioned creatures imaginable; for they say, any mortal may enjoy the most intimate familiarities with these gentle spirits, upon a condition very easy to all true adepts—an inviolate preservation of chastity.

As to the following cantos, all the passages of them are as fabulous as the vision at the beginning, or the transformation at the end (except the loss of your hair, which I always mention with reverence.) The human persons are as fictitious as the airy ones; and the character of Belinda, as it is now managed, resembles you in nothing but in beauty.

If this poem had as many graces as there are in your person or in your mind, yet I could never hope it should pass through the world half so uncensured as you have done. But let its fortune be what it will mine is happy enough to have given me this occasion of assuring you that I am, with the truest esteem,

Madam,

Your most obedient humble servant,
A POPE

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

Nolueram, Belinda, tuos violare capillos;
Sed juvat, hoc precibus me tribuisse tuis. MART.

CANTO I.

WHAT dire offence from amorous causes springs,
What mighty contests rise from trivial things,
I sing;—this verse to Caryl, Muse! is due:
This e'en Belinda may vouchsafe to view:
Slight is the subject, but not so the praise,
If she inspire, and he approve my lays.
Say what strange motive, goddess! could compel
A well-bred lord to assault a gentle belle?
O say what stranger cause, yet unexplored,
Could make a gentle belle reject a lord?
In tasks so bold, can little men engage?
And in soft bosoms dwells such mighty rage?
Sol through white curtains shot a timorous ray
And oped those eyes that must eclipse the day:
Now lap-dogs give themselves the rousing shake,
And sleepless lovers, just at twelve, awake:
Thrice rung the bell, the slipper knock'd the ground,
And the press'd watch return'd a silver sound.
Belinda still her downy pillow press'd,
Her guardian Sylph prolong'd the balmy rest:
'Twas he had summon'd to her silent bed
The morning dream that hover'd o'er her head.
A youth more glittering than a birth-night beau
(That e'en in slumber caused her cheek to glow)
Seem'd to her ear his winning lips to lay,
And thus in whispers said, or seem'd to say:
'Fairest of mortals, thou distinguish'd care
Of thousand bright inhabitants of air!
If e'er one vision touch'd thy infant thought,
Of all the nurse and all the priest have taught:
Of airy elves by moonlight shadows seen,
The silver token, and the circled green,

Or virgins visited by angel-powers,
 With golden crowns and wreaths of heavenly flowers
 Hear, and believe ! thy own importance know,
 Nor bound thy narrow views to things below.
 Some secret truths, from learned pride conceal'd,
 To maids alone and children are reveal'd.
 What, though no credit doubting wits may give,
 The fair and innocent shall still believe.
 Know then, unnumber'd spirits round thee fly,
 The light militia of the lower sky :
 These, though unseen, are ever on the wing,
 Hang o'er the box, and hover round the ring.
 Think what an equipage thou hast in air,
 And view with scorn two pages and a chair.
 As now your own, our beings were of old,
 And once enclosed in woman's beauteous mould ;
 Thence, by a soft transition we repair,
 From earthly vehicles to those of air.
 Think not, when woman's transient breath is fled,
 That all her vanities at once are dead :
 Succeeding vanities she still regards,
 And though she plays no more, o'erlooks the cards
 Her joy in gilded chariots, when alive,
 And love of ombre, after death survive.
 For when the fair in all their pride expire,
 To their first elements their souls retire :
 The sprites of fiery termagants in flame
 Mount up, and take a Salamander's name.
 Soft yielding minds to water glide away,
 And sip, with nymphs, their elemental tea.
 The graver prude sinks downward to a Gnome,
 In search of mischief still on earth to roam.
 The light coquettes in Sylphs aloft repair,
 And sport and flutter in the fields of air.
 ' Know farther yet ; whoever, fair and chaste,
 Rejects mankind, is by some Sylph embraced :
 For spirits, freed from mortal laws, with ease
 Assume what sexes and what shapes they please

What guards the purity of melting maids,
 In courtly balls, and midnight masquerades,
 Safe from the treacherous friend, the daring spark,
 The glance by day, the whisper in the dark,
 When kind occasion prompts their warm desires,
 When music softens, and when dancing fires?
 'Tis but their Sylph, the wise celestials know,
 Though honour is the word with men below.

'Some nymphs there are, too conscious of their face,

For life predestined to the Gnomes' embrace,
 These swell their prospects, and exalt their pride,
 When offers are disdain'd, and love denied:
 Then gay ideas crowd the vacant brain,
 While peers, and dukes, and all their sweeping train,
 And garters, stars, and coronets appear,
 And in soft sounds, ' your grace' salutes their ear.
 'Tis these that early taint the female soul,
 Instruct the eyes of young coquettes to roll,
 Teach infant cheeks a hidden blush to know,
 And little hearts to flutter at a beau.

'Oft when the world imagine women stray,
 The Sylphs through mystic mazes guide their way,
 Through all the giddy circle they pursue,
 And old impertinence expel by new;
 What tender maid but must a victim fall
 To one man's treat, but for another's ball?
 When Florio speaks, what virgin could withstand,
 If gentle Damon did not squeeze her hand?
 With varying vanities, from every part,
 They shift the moving toy-shop of their heart;
 Where wigs with wigs, with sword-knots sword-knots strive,

Beaux banish beaux, and coaches coaches drive.
 This erring mortals levity may call;
 Oh, blind to truth! the Sylphs contrive it all.

'Of these am I, who thy protection claim,
 A watchful sprite, and Ariel is my name.

Late, as I ranged the crystal wilds of air,
 In the clear mirror of thy ruling star,
 I saw, alas ! some dread event impend,
 Ere to the main this morning sun descend ;
 But Heaven reveals not what, or how, or where :
 Warn'd by thy Sylph, oh pious maid, beware !
 This to disclose is all thy guardian can :
 Beware of all, but most beware of man !'

He said; when Shock, who thought she slept too long
 Leap'd up, and waked his mistress with his tongue.
 'Twas then, Belinda, if report say true,
 Thy eyes first open'd on a billet-doux ;
 Wounds, charms, and ardour, were no sooner read,
 But all the vision vanish'd from thy head.

And now unveil'd the toilet stands display'd,
 Each silver vase in mystic order laid.
 First robed in white, the nymph intent adores,
 With head uncover'd, the cosmetic powers.
 A heavenly image in the glass appears,
 To that she bends, to that her eyes she rears ;
 The inferior priestess, at her altar's side,
 Trembling, begins the sacred rites of pride.
 Unnumber'd treasures ope at once, and here
 The various offerings of the world appear ;
 From each she nicely culls with curious toil,
 And decks the goddess with the glittering spoil.
 This casket India's glowing gems unlocks,
 And all Arabia breathes from yonder box.
 The tortoise here and elephant unite,
 Transform'd to combs, the speckled and the white
 Here files of pins extend their shining rows,
 Puffs, powders, patches, Bibles, billet-doux.
 Now awful Beauty puts on all its arms ;
 The fair each moment rises in her charms,
 Repairs her smiles, awakens every grace,
 And calls forth all the wonders of her face :
 Sees by degrees a purer blush arise,
 And keener lightnings quicken in her eyes.

The busy sylphs surround their darling care,
 These set the head, and those divide the hair,
 Some fold the sleeve, while others plait the gown;
 And Betty's praised for labours not her own.

---

 CANTO II.

Nor with more glories, in the ethereal plain,
 The sun first rises o'er the purpled main,
 Than, issuing forth, the rival of his beams
 Launch'd on the bosom of the silver'd Thames.
 Fair nymphs and well-dress'd youths around hershone,
 But every eye was fix'd on her alone.
 On her white breast a sparkling cross she wore,
 Which Jews might kiss, and infidels adore.
 Her lively looks a sprightly mind disclose,
 Quick as her eyes, and as unfix'd as those:
 Favours to none, to all she smiles extends;
 Oft she rejects, but never once offends.
 Bright as the sun, her eyes the gazers strike,
 And, like the sun, they shine on all alike.
 Yet graceful ease, and sweetness void of pride,
 Might hide her faults, if belles had faults to hide.
 If to her share some female errors fall,
 Look on her face, and you'll forget them all.

This nymph, to the destruction of mankind,
 Nourish'd two locks, which graceful hung behind
 In equal curls, and well conspired to deck
 With shining ringlets the smooth ivory neck.
 Love in these labyrinths his slaves detains,
 And mighty hearts are held in slender chains.
 With hairy springes we the birds betray;
 Slight lines of hair surprise the finny prey;
 Fair tresses man's imperial race ensnare,
 And beauty draws us with a single hair.

The adventurous baron the bright locks admired
 He saw, he wish'd, and to the prize aspired.

Resolv'd to win, he meditates the way,
 By force to ravish, or by fraud betray ;
 For when success a lover's toil attends,
 Few ask if fraud or force attain'd his ends.

For this, ere Phœbus rose, he had implored
 Propitious Heaven, and every power adored ;
 But chiefly Love ; to Love an altar built,
 Of twelve vast French romances neatly gilt.
 There lay three garters, half a pair of gloves,
 And all the trophies of his former loves.
 With tender billet-doux he lights the pyre,
 And breathes three amorous sighs to raise the fire.
 Then prostrate falls, and begs with ardent eyes
 Soon to obtain, and long possess the prize :
 The powers gave ear, and granted half his prayer
 The rest the winds dispersed in empty air.

But now secure the painted vessel glides,
 The sun-beams trembling on the floating tides :
 While melting music steals upon the sky,
 And soften'd sounds along the water die ;
 Smooth flow the waves, the zephyrs gently play,
 Belinda smiled, and all the world was gay ;
 All but the Sylph : with careful thoughts oppress'd,
 The impending woe sat heavy on his breast :
 He summons straight his denizens of air ;
 The lucid squadrons round the sails repair :
 Soft o'er the shrouds aerial whispers breathe,
 That seem'd but zephyrs to the train beneath.
 Some to the sun their insect wings unfold,
 Waft on the breeze, or sink in clouds of gold ;
 Transparent forms too fine for mortal sight,
 Their fluid bodies half dissolved in light.
 Loose to the wind their airy garments flew,
 Thin glittering textures of the filmy dew,
 Dipp'd in the richest tinctures of the skies,
 Where light disports in ever-mingling dyes,
 Where every beam new transient colours flings,
 Colours that change whene'er they wave their wings

Amid the circle on the gilded mast
 Superior by the head, was Ariel placed ;
 His purple pinions opening to the sun,
 He raised his azure wand, and thus begun :
 'Ye Sylphs and Sylphids, to your chief give ear ·
 Fays, Fairies, Genii, Elves, and Demons, hear ;
 Ye know the spheres, and various tasks assign'd
 By laws eternal to the aërial kind.
 Some in the fields of purest ether play,
 And bask and whiten in the blaze of day ;
 Some guide the course of wandering orbs on high,
 Or roll the planets through the boundless sky ;
 Some, less refined, beneath the moon's pale light
 Pursue the stars that shoot athwart the night,
 Or suck the mists in grosser air below,
 Or dip their pinions in the painted bow,
 Or brew fierce tempests on the wintry main,
 Or o'er the glebe distil the kindly rain.
 Others on earth, o'er human race preside,
 Watch all their ways, and all their actions guide :
 Of these the chief the care of nations own,
 And guard with arms divine the British throne.
 'Our humbler province is to tend the fair,
 Not a less pleasing, though less glorious care ;
 To save the powder from too rude a gale,
 Nor let the imprison'd essences exhale ;
 To draw fresh colours from the vernal flowers ,
 To steal from rainbows, ere they drop in showers
 A brighter wash ; to curl their waving hairs,
 Assist their blushes, and inspire their airs :
 Nay, oft in dreams, invention we bestow,
 To change a slounce or add a furbelow.
 'This day, black omens threat the brightest fair
 That e'er deserved a watchful spirit's care :
 Some dire disaster, or by force, or slight ;
 But what, or where, the Fates have wrapp'd in night
 Whether the nymph shall break Diana's law,
 Or some frail china jar receive a flaw ;

Or stain her honour, or her new brocade ;
 Forget her prayers, or miss a masquerade ,
 Or lose her heart or necklace at a ball ;
 Or whether Heaven has doom'd that Shock must fall.
 Haste then, ye spirits ! to your charge repair ;
 The fluttering fan be Zephyretta's care ;
 The drops to thee, Brillante, we consign ;
 And, Momentilla, let the watch be thine ;
 Do thou, Crispissa, tend her favourite lock ;
 Ariel himself shall be the guard of Shock.

'To fifty chosen Sylphs, of special note,
 We trust the important charge, the petticoat :
 Oft have we known that sevenfold fence to fail,
 Though stiff with hoops, and arm'd with ribs of wuale
 Form a strong line about the silver bound,
 And guard the wide circumference around.

'Whatever spirit, careless of his charge,
 His post neglects, or leaves the fair at large,
 Shall feel sharp vengeance soon o'ertake his sins ;
 Be stopp'd in vials, or transfix'd with pins ;
 Or plunged in lakes of bitter washes lie,
 Or wedged whole ages in a bodkin's eye ;
 Gums and pomatuns shall his flight restrain,
 While clogg'd he beats his silken wings in vain ;
 Or alum styptics, with contracting power,
 Shrink his thin essence like a shrivel'd flower :
 Or, as Ixion fix'd, the wretch shall feel
 The giddy motion of the whirling mill,
 In fumes of burning chocolate shall glow,
 And tremble at the sea that froths below !'

He spoke ; the spirits from the sails descend ;
 Some, orb in orb, around the nymph extend ;
 Some thrid the mazy ringlets of her hair ;
 Some hang upon the pendants of her ear ;
 With beating hearts the dire event they wait,
 Anxious and trembling for the birth of fate.

CANTO III.

CLOSE by those meads, for ever crown'd with flowers,
Where Thames with pride surveys his rising towers,
There stands a structure of majestic frame,
Which from the neighbouring Hampton takes its name;
Here Britain's statesmen oft the fall foredoom
Of foreign tyrants, and of nymphs at home ;
Here thou, great Anna ! whom three realms obey,
Dost sometimes counsel take—and sometimes tea.

Hither the heroes and the nymphs resort,
To taste awhile the pleasures of a court ;
In various talk the instructive hours they pass'd,
Who gave the ball, or paid the visit last ;
One speaks the glory of a British queen,
And one describes a charming Indian screen ;
A third interprets motions, looks, and eyes ;
At every word a reputation dies.
Snuff, or the fan, supply each pause of chat,
With singing, laughing, ogling, and all that.

Meanwhile, declining from the noon of day,
The sun obliquely shoots his burning ray :
The hungry judges soon the sentence sign,
And wretches hang that jurymen may dine ;
The merchant from the Exchange returns in peace,
And the long labours of the toilet cease.
Belinda now, whom thirst of fame invites,
Burns to encounter two adventurous knights,
At Ombre singly to decide their doom ;
And swells her breast with conquests yet to come
Straight the three bands prepare in arms to join,
Each band the number of the sacred nine.
Soon as she spreads her hand, the aerial guard
Descend, and sit on each important card :
First Ariel perch'd upon a Matadore,
Then each according to the rank they bore :
For Sylphs, yet mindful of their ancient race,
Are, as when women, wondrous fond of place.

Behold, four kings in majesty revered,
 With hoary whiskers, and a forky beard;
 And four fair queens, whose hands sustain a flower,
 The expressive emblem of their softer power;
 Four knaves in garbs succinct, a trusty band:
 Caps on their heads, and halberts in their hand;
 And party-colour'd troops, a shining train,
 Drawn forth to combat on the velvet plain.

The skilful nymph reviews her force with care:
 'Let spades be trumps!' she said, and trumps they were

Now move to war her sable Matadores,
 In show like leaders of the swarthy Moors.
 Spadillo first, unconquerable lord,

- Led off two captive trumps, and swept the board

As many more Manillio forced to yield,
 And march'd a victor from the verdant field.

Him Basto follow'd, but his fate more hard,
 Gain'd but one trump, and one plebeian card.

With his broad sabre next, a chief in years,
 The hoary majesty of Spades appears,

Puts forth one manly leg, to sight reveal'd,
 The rest his many-colour'd robe conceal'd.

The rebel knave, who dares his prince engage,
 Proves the just victim of his royal rage.

E'en mighty Pam, that kings and queens o'erthrew

And mow'd down armies in the fights of Loo,

Sad chance of war! now destitute of aid,

Falls undistinguish'd by the victor Spade!

Thus far both armies to Belinda yield;

Now to the baron Fate inclines the field.

His warlike amazon her host invades,

The imperial consort of the crown of Spades.

The Club's black tyrant first her victim died,

Spite of his haughty mien, and barbarous pride:

What boots the regal circle on his head,

His giant limbs in state unwieldy spread;

That long behind he trails his pompous robe,

And, of all monarchs only grasps the globe?

The baron now his Diamonds pours apace ;
The embroider'd king who shows but half his face,
And his refulgent queen with powers combined,
Of broken troops an easy conquest find.
Clubs, Diamonds, Hearts, in wild disorder seen,
With throngs promiscuous strew the level green.
Thus when dispersed a routed army runs,
Of Asia's troops, and Afric's sable sons,
With like confusion different nations fly,
Of various habit, and of various dye.
The pierced battalions disunited fall,
In heaps on heaps ; one fate o'erwhelms them all.

The knave of Diamonds tries his wily arts,
And wins (oh shameful chance!) the queen of Hearts
At this, the blood the virgin's cheek forsook,
A livid paleness spreads o'er all her look ;
She sees, and trembles at the approaching ill,
Just in the jaws of ruin and Codille.
And now, (as oft in some distemper'd state)
On one nice trick depends the general fate,
An ace of Hearts steps forth : the king unseen
Lurk'd in her hand, and mourn'd his captive queen :
He springs to vengeance with an eager pace,
And falls like thunder on the prostrate ace.
The nymph exulting fills with shouts the sky ;
The walls, the woods, and long canals reply.

O thoughtless mortals ! ever blind to fate ;
Too soon dejected, and too soon elate.
Sudden, these honours shall be snatch'd away,
And cursed for ever this victorious day.

For lo ! the board with cups and spoons is crown'd,
The berries crackle, and the mill turns round :
On shining altars of Japan they raise
The silver lamp ; the fiery spirits blaze :
From silver spouts the grateful liquors glide,
While China's earth receives the smoking tide ;
At once they gratify their scent and taste,
And frequent cups prolong the rich repast.

Straight hover round the fair her airy band :
 Some, as she sipp'd, the fuming liquor fann'd ;
 Some o'er her lap their careful plumes display'd,
 Trembling and conscious of the rich brocade.
 Coffee (which makes the politician wise,
 And see through all things with his half-shut eyes
 Sent up in vapours to the baron's brain
 New stratagems the radiant lock to gain.
 Ah cease, rash youth ; desist ere 'tis too late,
 Fear the just gods, and think of Scylla's fate !
 Changed to a bird, and sent to flit in air,
 She dearly paid for Nisus' injured hair !

But when to mischief mortals bend their will
 How soon they find fit instruments of ill !
 Just then, Clarissa drew, with tempting grace,
 A two-edged weapon from her shining case ;
 So ladies, in romance, assist their knight,
 Present the spear, and arm him for the fight.
 He takes the gift with reverence, and extends
 The little engine on his fingers' ends ;
 This just behind Belinda's neck he spread,
 As o'er the fragrant steams she bent her head.
 Swift to the lock a thousand sprites repair,
 A thousand wings, by turns, blow back the hair !
 And thrice they twitch'd the diamond in her ear ;
 Thrice she look'd back, and thrice the foe drew near
 Just in that instant, anxious Ariel sought
 The close recesses of the virgin's thought ;
 As on the nosegay in her breast reclined,
 He watch'd the ideas rising in her mind,
 Sudden he view'd in spite of all her art,
 An earthly lover lurking at her heart.
 Amazed, confused, he found his power expired,
 Resign'd to fate, and with a sigh retired.

The peer now spreads the glittering forfex wide,
 To enclose the lock ; now joins it, to divide.
 E'en then, before the fatal engine closed,
 A wretched Sylph too fondly interposed ;

Fate urged the shears, and cut the Sylph in twain ;
 (But airy substance soon unites again ;)
 The meeting points the sacred hair dis sever,
 From the fair head, for ever, and for ever !

Then flash'd the livid lightning from her eyes,
 And streams of horror rend the affrighted skies.
 Not louder shrieks to pitying Heaven are cast,
 When husbands, or when lap-dogs, breathe their last.
 Or when rich china vessels, fallen from high,
 In glittering dust, and painted fragments lie.

' Let wreaths of triumph now my temples twine !
 (The victor cried ;) the glorious prize is mine !
 While fish in streams, or birds delight in air,
 Or in a coach and six the British fair ;
 As long as Atalantis shall be read,
 Or the small pillow grace a lady's bed ;
 While visits shall be paid on solemn days,
 When numerous wax-lights in bright order blaze :
 While nymphs take treats, or assignations give,
 So long my honour, name, and praise shall live !
 What time would spare from steel receives its date,
 And monuments, like men, submit to fate :
 Steel could the labour of the gods destroy,
 And strike to dust the imperial towers of Troy ;
 Steel could the works of mortal pride confound,
 And hew triumphal arches to the ground.
 What wonder then, fair nymph ! thy hairs should fee
 The conquering force of unresisted steel ?'

CANTO IV.

BUT anxious cares the pensive nymph oppress'd,
 And secret passions labour'd in her breast.
 Not youthful kings in battle seized alive,
 Not scornful virgins who their charms survive,
 Not ardent lovers robb'd of all their bliss,
 Not ancient ladies when refused a kiss,

110 POPE'S POETICAL WORKS.

Not tyrants fierce that unrepenting die,
 Not Cynthia when her mantua's pinn'd awry,
 E'er felt such rage, resentment, and despair,
 As thou, sad virgin! for thy ravish'd hair.

For, that sad moment, when the Sylphs withdrew
 And Ariel weeping from Belinda flew,
 Umbriel, a dusky, melancholy sprite,
 As ever sullied the fair face of light,
 Down to the central earth, his proper scene,
 Repair'd to search the gloomy cave of Spleen.

Swift on his sooty pinions flits the Gnome,
 And in a vapour reach'd the dismal dome.
 No cheerful breeze this sullen region knows,
 The dreadful east is all the wind that blows.
 Here in a grotto, shelter'd close from air,
 And screen'd in shades from day's detested glare,
 She sighs for ever on her pensive bed,
 Pain at her side, and Megrim at her head.

Two handmaids wait the throne: alike in place,
 But differing far in figure and in face.
 Here stood Ill-nature like an ancient maid,
 Her wrinkled form in black and white array'd;
 With store of prayers, for mornings, nights, and noons,
 Her hand is fill'd: her bosom with lampoons.
 There Affectation, with a sickly mien,
 Shows in her cheek the roses of eighteen,
 Practised to lisp, and hang the head aside,
 Faints into airs, and languishes with pride,
 On the rich quilt sinks with becoming woe,
 Wrapp'd in a gown, for sickness and for show.
 The fair ones feel such maladies as these,
 When each new night-dress gives a new disease.

A constant vapour o'er the palace flies;
 Strange phantoms rising as the mists arise;
 Dreadful, as hermits' dreams in haunted shades
 Or bright, as visions of expiring maids;
 Now glaring fiends, and snakes on rolling spires,
 Pale spectres, gaping tombs, and purple fires:

Now lakes of liquid gold, Elysian scenes,
And crystal domes, and angels in machines.

Unnumber'd throngs on every side are seen,
Of bodies changed to various forms by Spleen.
Here living tea-pots stand, one arm held out,
One bent; the handle this, and that the spout;
A pipkin there, like Homer's tripod walks;
Here sighs a jar, and there a goose-pie talks;
Men prove with child, as powerful fancy works,
And maids, turn'd bottles, call aloud for corks.

Safe pass'd the Gnome through this fantastic band,
A branch of healing spleen-wort in his hand.

'Then thus address'd the power; 'Hail, wayward queen,
Who rule the sex from fifty to fifteen:

Parent of vapours, and of female wit,
Who give the hysteric, or poetic fit,
On various tempers act by various ways,
Make some take physic, others scribble plays:
Who cause the proud their visits to delay,
And send the godly in a pet to pray.

A nymph there is, that all thy power disdains,
And thousands more in equal mirth maintains.
But oh! if e'er thy Gnome could spoil a grace,

Or raise a pimple in a beauteous face,
Like citron-waters, matrons' cheeks inflame,
Or change complexions at a losing game;

If e'er with airy horns I planted heads,
Or rumpled petticoats, or tumbled beds,
Or caused suspicion when no soul was rude,

Or discomposed the head-dress of a prude,
Or e'er to costive lap-dogs gave disease,
Which not the tears of brightest eyes could ease:

Hear me, and touch Belinda with chagrin:
That single act gives half the world the spleen.'

The goddess with a discontented air
Seems to reject him, though she grants his prayer
A wondrous bag with both her hands she binds,
Like that where once Ulysses held the winds;

There she collects the force of female lungs,
 Sighs, sobs, and passions, and the war of tongues
 A vial next she fills with fainting fears,
 Soft sorrows, melting griefs, and flowing tears.
 The Gnome rejoicing bears her gifts away,
 Spreads his black wings, and slowly mounts to day
 Sunk in Thalestris' arms the nymph he found,
 Her eyes dejected and her hair unbound.
 Full o'er their heads the swelling bag he rent,
 And all the furies issued at the vent.
 Belinda burns with more than mortal ire,
 And fierce Thalestris fans the rising fire.
 'O wretched maid!' she spread her hands, and cried.
 (While Hampton's echoes, 'wretched maid!' replied,
 'Was it for this you took such constant care
 The bodkin, comb, and essence to prepare?
 For this your locks in paper durance bound?
 For this with torturing irons wreathed around?
 For this with fillets strain'd your tender head,
 And bravely bore the double loads of lead?
 Gods! shall the ravisher display your hair,
 While the fops envy, and the ladies stare?
 Honour forbid! at whose unrivall'd shrine
 Ease, pleasure, virtue, all our sex resign.
 Methinks already I your tears survey,
 Already hear the horrid things they say,
 Already see you a degraded toast,
 And all your honour in a whisper lost!
 How shall I, then, your hapless fame defend?
 Twill then be infamy to seem your friend!
 And shall this prize, the inestimable prize,
 Exposed through crystal to the gazing eyes,
 And heighten'd by the diamond's circling rays,
 On that rapacious hand for ever blaze?
 Sooner shall grass in Hyde-park circus grow,
 And wits take lodgings in the sound of Bow!
 Sooner let air, earth, sea, to chaos fall,
 Men, monkeys, lap-dogs, parrots, perish all!'

She said ; then raging to sir Plume repairs,
 And bids her beau demand the precious hairs :
 (Sir Plume of amber snuff-box justly vain,
 And the nice conduct of a clouded cane :)
 With earnest eyes, and round unthinking face,
 He first the snuff-box open'd, then the case,
 And thus broke out :—' My Lord, why, what the devil?
 Z——ds ! damn the lock : 'fore Gad, you must be civil !
 Plague on't, 'tis past a jest—nay pr'ythee, pox !
 Give her the hair.'—He spoke, and rapp'd his box.

'It grieves me much (replied the peer again)
 Who speaks so well should ever speak in vain ;
 But by this lock, this sacred lock, I swear,
 (Which never more shall join its parted hair ;
 Which never more its honours shall renew,
 Clipp'd from the lovely head where late it grew)
 That while my nostrils draw the vital air,
 This hand, which won it, shall for ever wear.'
 He spoke, and speaking, in proud triumph spread
 The long-contented honours of her head.

But Umbriel, hateful Gnome ! forbears not so ;
 He breaks the vial whence the sorrows flow.
 Then see ! the nymph in beauteous grief appears,
 Her eyes half-languishing, half-drown'd in tears ;
 On her heaved bosom hung her drooping head,
 Which, with a sigh, she raised ; and thus she said :

'For ever cursed be this detested day,
 Which snatch'd my best, my favourite curl away.
 Happy ! ah, ten times happy had I been,
 If Hampton-Court these eyes had never seen !
 Yet am not I the first mistaken maid
 By love of courts to numerous ills betray'd.
 Oh had I rather unadmired remain'd
 In some lone isle, or distant northern land ;
 Where the gilt chariot never marks the way,
 Where none learn ombre, none ere taste bohea !
 There kept my charms conceal'd from mortal eye,
 Like roses, that in deserts bloom and die.

What moved my mind with youthful lords to roam
 Oh had I staid, and said my prayers at home !
 'Twas this, the morning omens seem'd to tell ;
 Thrice from my trembling hand the patch-box fell .
 The tottering china shook without a wind,
 Nay, Poll sat mute, and Shock was most unkind !
 A Sylph too warn'd me of the threats of fate,
 In mystic visions, now believed too late !
 See the poor remnant of these slighted hairs :
 My hand shall rend what e'en thy rapine spares :
 These in two sable ringlets taught to break,
 Once gave new beauties to the snowy neck :
 The sister-lock now sits uncouth, alone,
 And in its fellow's fate foresees its own ;
 Uncurl'd it hangs, the fatal shears demands,
 And tempts once more thy sacrilegious hands,
 Oh, hadst thou, cruel ! been content to seize Hairs less in sight, or any hairs but these !'

---

 CANTO V.

SHE said ; the pitying audience melt in tears ;
 But fate and Jove had stopp'd the baron's ears .
 In vain Thalestris with reproach assails,
 For who can move when fair Belinda fails ?
 Not half so fix'd the Trojan could remain,
 While Anna begg'd, and Dido raged in vain .
 Then grave Clarissa graceful waved her fan ;
 Silence ensued, and thus the nymph began :
 ' Say, why are beauties praised and honour'd most,
 The wise man's passion, and the vain man's toast ?
 Why deck'd with all that land and sea afford ?
 Why angels call'd, and angel-like adored ?
 Why round our coaches crowd the white-gloved beaux ?
 Why bows the side-box from its inmost rows ?
 How vain are all these glories, all our pains,
 Unless good sense preserve what beauty gains :

That men may say, when we the front box grace,
 Behold the first in virtue as in face !
 Oh ! if to dance all night and dress all day,
 Charm'd the small-pox, or chased old age away,
 Who would not scorn what housewife's cares produce,
 Or who would learn one earthly thing of use ?
 To patch, nay ogle, may become a saint ;
 Nor could it sure be such a sin to paint.
 But since, alas ! frail beauty must decay ;
 Curl'd or uncurl'd, since locks will turn to gray ;
 Since painted, or not painted, all shall fade, -
 And she who scorns a man must die a maid ;
 What then remains but well our power to use,
 And keep good-humour still, whate'er we lose ?
 And trust me, dear ! good-humour can prevail,
 When airs, and flights, and screams, and scolding fail.
 Beauties in vain their pretty eyes may toll ;
 Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.'

So spoke the dame, but no applause ensued :
 Belinda frown'd, Thalestris call'd her prude.
 'To arms, to arms !' the fierce virago cries,
 And swift as lightning to the combat flies :
 All side in parties, and begin the attack ;
 Fans clap, silks rustle, and tough whalebones crack
 Heroes' and heroines' shouts confusedly rise,
 And base and treble voices strike the skies.
 No common weapons in their hands are found ;
 Like gods they fight, nor dread a mortal wound.

So when bold Homer makes the gods engage,
 And heavenly breasts with human passions rage ;
 'Gainst Pallas, Mars ; Latona, Hermes arms ;
 And all Olympus rings with loud alarms ;
 Jove's thunder roars, heaven trembles all around,
 Blue Neptune storms, the bellowing deeps resound,
 Earth shakes her nodding towers, the ground gives way
 And the pale ghosts start at the flash of day !
 Triumphant Umbriel, on a sconce's height,
 Clapp'd his glad wings, and sat to view the fight :

Propp'd on their bodkin-spears, the sprites survey
The growing combat, or assist the fray.

While through the press enraged Thalestris flies,
And scatters death around from both her eyes,
A beau and wiling perish'd in the throng
One died in metaphor, and one in song.

'O cruel nymph! a living death I bear,'
Cried Dapperwit, and sunk beside his chair.
A mournful glance sir Fopling upwards cast:
'Those eyes are made so killing—' was his last.
Thus on Meander's flowery margin lies
The expiring swan, and as he sings he dies.

When bold sir Plume had drawn Clarissa down,
Chloe stepp'd in, and kill'd him with a frown;
She smiled to see the doughty hero slain,
But, at her smile, the beau revived again.

Now Jove suspends his golden scales in air,
Weighs the men's wits against the lady's hair;
The doubtful beam long nods from side to side;
At length the wits mount up, the hairs subside.

See fierce Belinda on the baron flies,
With more than usual lightning in her eyes:
Nor fear'd the chief the unequal fight to try,
Who sought no more than on his foe to die.
But this bold lord, with manly strength endued,
She with one finger and a thumb subdued:
Just where the breath of life his nostrils drew,
A charge of snuff the wily virgin threw;
The Gnomes direct, to every atom just,
The pungent grains of titillating dust.
Sudden with starting tears each eye o'erflows,
And the high dome re-echoes to his nose.

'Now meet thy fate,' incensed Belinda cried,
And drew a deadly bodkin from her side;
(The same, his ancient personage to deck,
Her great-great-grandsire wore about his neck,
In three seal-rings; which after, melted down,
Form'd a vast buckle for his widow's gown:

Her infant grandame's whistle next it grew,
 The bells she jingled, and the whistle blew ;
 Then in a bodkin graced her mother's hairs,
 Which long she wore, and now Belinda wears.)

'Boast not my fall,' he cried, 'insulting foe !
 Thou by some other shall be laid as low.
 Nor think, to die dejects my lofty mind :
 All that I dread is leaving you behind !
 Rather than so, ah let me still survive,
 And burn in Cupid's flames—but burn alive.'

'Restore the lock,' she cries ; and all around
 'Restore the lock !' the vaulted roofs rebound.
 Not fierce Othello in so loud a strain
 Roar'd for the handkerchief that caused his pain
 But see how oft ambitious aims are cross'd,
 And chiefs contend till all the prize is lost !
 The lock, obtain'd with guilt, and kept with pain,
 In every place is sought, but sought in vain :
 With such a prize no mortal must be bless'd :
 So Heaven decrees ! with Heaven who can contest ?

Some thought it mounted to the lunar sphere,
 Since all things lost on earth are treasured there :
 There heroes' wits are kept in ponderous vases,
 And beaus' in snuff-boxes and tweezer cases :
 There broken vows and death-bed alms are found,
 And lovers' hearts with ends of riband bound ;
 The courtier's promises, and sick man's prayers,
 The smiles of harlots, and the tears of heirs,
 Cages for gnats, and chains to yoke a flea,
 Dried butterflies, and tomes of casuistry.

But trust the muse—she saw it upward rise,
 Though mark'd by none but quick poetic eyes ;
 (So Rome's great founder to the heavens withdrew
 To Proculus alone confess'd in view :)
 A sudden star it shot through liquid air,
 And drew behind a radiant trail of hair.
 Not Berenice's locks first rose so bright,
 The heavens bespangling with dishevell'd light.

The Sylphs behold it kindling as it flies,
And pleased pursue its progress through the skies.

This the beau-monde shall from the Mall survey,
And hail with music its propitious ray.

This the bless'd lover shall for Venus take,
And send up vows from Rosamonda's lake.
This Partridge soon shall view in cloudless skies,
When next he looks through Galileo's eyes ;
And hence the egregious wizard shall foredoom
The fate of Louis, and the fall of Rome.

Then cease, bright nymph! to mourn thy ravish'd hair
Which adds new glory to the shining sphere!
Not all the tresses that fair head can boast,
Shall draw such envy as the lock you lost.
For, after all the murders of your eye,
When, after millions slain, yourself shall die ;
When those fair suns shall set, as set they must,
And all those tresses shall be laid in dust,
This lock the muse shall consecrate to fame,
And 'midst the stars inscribe Belinda's name.

ELEGY

TO THE

MEMORY OF AN UNFORTUNATE LADY.

WHAT beckoning ghost, along the moonlight shade,
Invites my steps, and points to yonder glade?
'Tis she!—but why that bleeding bosom gored?
Why dimly gleams the visionary sword?
Oh ever beauteous, ever friendly! tell,
Is it, in heaven, a crime to love too well?
To bear too tender, or too firm a heart?
To act a lover's or a Roman's part?
Is there no bright reversion in the sky,
For those who greatly think, or bravely die?

Why bade ye else, ye powers! her soul aspire
Above the vulgar flight of low desire?

Ambition first sprung from your bless'd abodes,
 The glorious fault of angels and of gods:
 Thence to their images on earth it flows,
 And in the breasts of kings and heroes glows.
 Most souls, 'tis true, but peep out once an age;
 Dull sullen prisoners in the body's cage;
 Dim lights of life, that burn a length of years,
 Useless, unseen, as lamps in sepulchres;
 Like eastern kings, a lazy state they keep,
 And, close confined to their own palace, sleep.

From these perhaps (ere nature bade her die)
 Fate snatch'd her early to the pitying sky.
 As into air the purer spirits flow,
 And separate from their kindred dregs below:
 So flew the soul to its congenial place,
 Nor left one virtue to redeem her race.

But thou, false guardian of a charge too good,
 Thou mean deserter of thy brother's blood!
 See on these ruby lips the trembling breath,
 These cheeks now fading at the blast of death!
 Cold is that breast which warm'd the world before,
 And those love-darting eyes must roll no more.
 Thus, if eternal justice rules the ball,
 Thus shall your wives, and thus your children fall:
 On all the line a sudden vengeance waits,
 And frequent hearses shall besiege your gates:
 There passengers shall stand, and pointing, say,
 (While the long funerals blacken all the way,)
 'Lo! these were they, whose souls the furies steel'd,
 And cursed with hearts unknowing how to yield.'
 Thus unlamented pass the proud away,
 The gaze of fools, and pageant of a day!
 So perish all whose breast ne'er learn'd to glow
 For others' good, or melt at others' woe.

What can atone (oh ever injured shade!)
 Thy fate unpitied, and thy rites unpaid?
 No friend's complaint, no kind domestic tear
 Pleas'd thy pale ghost, or graced thy mournful bier

By foreign hands thy dying eyes were closed,
 By foreign hands thy decent limbs composed,
 By foreign hands thy humble grave adorn'd,
 By strangers honour'd and by strangers mourn'd.
 What though no friends in sable weeds appear,
 Grieve for an hour, perhaps, then mourn a year,
 And bear about the mockery of woe
 To midnight dances, and the public show ?
 What though no weeping loves thy ashes grace,
 Nor polish'd marble emulate thy face ?
 What though no sacred earth allow thee room,
 Nor hallow'd dirge be mutter'd o'er thy tomb ?
 Yet shall thy grave with rising flowers be dress'd,
 And the green turf lie lightly on thy breast :
 There shall the morn her earliest tears bestow,
 There the first roses of the year shall blow ;
 While angels with their silver wings o'ershade
 The ground now sacred by thy reliques made.
 So, peaceful rests, without a stone, a name,
 What once had beauty, titles, wealth, and fame.
 How loved, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
 To whom related, or by whom begot ;
 A heap of dust alone remains of thee :
 'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be !

Poets themselves must fall, like those they sung :
 Deaf the praised ear, and mute the tuneful tongue :
 E'en he whose soul now melts in mournful lays,
 Shall shortly want the generous tear he pays ;
 Then from his closing eyes thy form shall part,
 And the last pang shall tear thee from his heart !
 Life's idle business at one gasp be o'er,
 The muse forgot, and thou beloved no more !

PROLOGUE

To Mr. Addison's Tragedy of Cato.

To wake the soul by tender strokes of art,
 To raise the genius, and to mend the heart ;

To make mankind in conscious virtue bold,
 Live o'er each scene, and be what they behold :
 For this the Tragic Muse first trod the stage,
 Commanding tears to stream through every age ;
 Tyrants no more their savage nature kept,
 And foes to virtue wonder'd how they wept.

Our author shuns by vulgar springs to move
 The hero's glory, or the virgin's love ;
 In pitying love, we but our weakness show,
 And wild ambition well deserves its woe.
 Here tears shall flow from a more generous cause,
 Such tears as patriots shed for dying laws ;
 He bids your breasts with ancient ardour rise,
 And calls forth Roman drops from British eyes.
 Virtue confess'd in human shape he draws,
 What Plato thought, and godlike Cato was :
 No common object to your sight displays,
 But what with pleasure Heaven itself surveys,
 A brave man struggling in the storms of fate,
 And greatly falling with a falling state.
 While Cato gives his little senate laws,
 What bosom beats not in his country's cause ?
 Who sees him act, but envies every deed ?
 Who hears him groan, and does not wish to bleed ?
 E'en when proud Cæsar, 'midst triumphal cars,
 The spoils of nations, and the pomp of wars,
 Ignobly vain, and impotently great,
 Show'd Rome her Cato's figure drawn in state ;
 As her dead father's reverend image pass'd,
 The pomp was darken'd, and the day o'ercast ;
 The triumph ceased, tears gush'd from every eye ;
 The world's great victor pass'd unheeded by :
 Her last good man dejected Rome adored,
 And honour'd Cæsar's less than Cato's sword.
 Britons, attend : be worth like this approved,
 And show, you have the virtue to be moved.
 With honest scorn the first famed Cato view'd
 Rome learning arts from Greece, whom she subdued

Your scene precariously subsists too long
 On French translation and Italian song :
 Dare to have sense yourselves ; assert the stage,
 Be justly warm'd with your own native rage :
 Such plays alone should win a British ear,
 As Cato's self had not disdain'd to hear.

EPILOGUE

TO MR. ROWE'S JANE SHORE.

Designed for Mrs. Oldfield.

PRODIGIOUS this! the frail-one of our play
 From her own sex should mercy find to-day !
 You might have held the pretty head aside,
 Peep'd in your fans, been serious, thus, and cried,
 'The play may pass—but that strange creature Shore
 I can't—indeed now—I so hate a whore!'—
 Just as a blockhead rubs his thoughtless skull,
 And thanks his stars he was not born a fool ;
 So from a sister sinner you shall hear,
 'How strangely you expose yourself my dear !'
 But let me die, all raillery apart,
 Our sex are still forgiving at their heart ;
 And did not wicked custom so contrive,
 We'd be the best, good-natured things alive.

There are, 'tis true, who tell another tale,
 That virtuous ladies envy while they rail ;
 Such rage without betrays the fire within ;
 In some close corner of the soul, they sin ;
 Still hoarding up, most scandalously nice,
 Amidst their virtues a reserve of vice.
 The godly dame, who fleshly failings damns,
 Scolds with her maid, or with her chaplain crams :
 Would you enjoy soft nights and solid dinners ?
 Faith, gallants, board with saints, and bed with sinners

Well, if our author in the wife offends,
 He has a husband that will make amends :

He draws him gentle, tender, and forgiving,
 And sure such kind good creatures may be living
 In days of old they pardon'd breach of vows;
 Stern Cato's self was no relentless spouse:
 Plu—Plutarch, what's his name, that writes his life?
 Tells us, that Cato dearly loved his wife:
 Yet if a friend, a night or so, should need her,
 He'd recommend her as a special breeder.
 To lend a wife, few here would scruple make;
 But, pray, which of you all would take her back?
 Though with the stoic chief our stage may ring,
 The stoic husband was the glorious thing.
 The man had courage, was a sage, 'tis true,
 And loved his country—but what's that to you?
 Those strange examples ne'er were made to fit ye,
 But the kind cuckold might instruct the city.
 There many an honest man may copy Cato,
 Who ne'er saw naked sword, or look'd in Plato.
 If, after all, you think it a disgrace,
 That Edward's miss thus perks it in your face;
 To see a piece of failing flesh and blood;
 In all the rest so impudently good;
 Faith, let the modest matrons of the town
 Come here in crowds, and stare the strumpet down.

 SAPPHO TO PHAON.

From the fifteenth of Ovid's Epistles.

ARGUMENT.

Phaon, a youth of exquisite beauty, was deeply enamoured of Sappho, a lady of Lesbos, from whom he met with the tenderest returns of passion: but his affection afterwards decaying, he left her and sailed for Sicily. She, unable to bear the loss of her lover, hearkened to all the mad suggestions of despair; and seeing no other remedy for her present miseries, resolved to throw herself into the sea, from Leucate, a promontory of Epirus, which was thought a cure in cases of obstinate love, and therefore had obtained the name of the Lover's Leap. But before she ventured upon this last step, entertaining still some fond hopes that she might reclaim her inconstant, she wrote him this epistle, in which she gives him a strong picture of her distress and misery, occasioned by his absence: and endeavours by all the artful insinuations and moving expressions she is mistress of, to sooth him to softness and mutual feeling. (ANON.)

SAY, lovely youth, that dost my heart command,
 Can Phaon's eyes forget his Sappho's hand?
 Must then her name the wretched writer prove,
 'To thy remembrance lost, as to thy love?
 Ask not the cause that I new numbers choose,
 The lute neglected, and the Lyric Muse.
 Love taught my tears in sadder notes to flow,
 And tuned my heart to elegies of woe.
 I burn, I burn, as when through ripen'd corn
 By driving winds the spreading flames are borne.
 Phaon to Etna's scorching fields retires,
 While I consume with more than Etna's fires!
 No more my soul a charm in music finds,
 Music has charms alone for peaceful minds:
 Soft scenes of solitude no more can please,
 Love enters there, and I'm my own disease.
 No more the Lesbian dames my passion move,
 Once the dear objects of my guilty love;
 All other loves are lost in only thine,
 Ah, youth ungrateful to a flame like mine!
 Whom would not all those blooming charms surprise,
 Those heavenly looks, and dear deluding eyes?
 The harp and bow would you like Phœbus bear,
 A brighter Phœbus Phaon might appear;
 Would you with ivy wreath your flowing hair,
 Not Bacchus' self with Phaon could compare:
 Yet Phœbus loved, and Bacchus felt the flame,
 One Daphne warm'd, and one the Cretan dame;
 Nymphs that in verse no more could rival me,
 Than e'en those gods contend in charms with thee.

The muses teach me all their softest lays,
And the wide world resounds with Sappho's praise
Though great Alcæus more sublimely sings,
And strikes with bolder rage the sounding strings,
No less renown attends the moving lyre,
Which Venus tunes, and all her loves inspire ;
To me what nature has in charms denied,
Is well by wit's more lasting flames supplied.
Though short my stature, yet my name extends
To heaven itself, and earth's remotest ends.
Brown as I am, an Ethiopian dame
Inspired young Perseus with a generous flame ;
Turtles and doves of different hues unite,
And glossy jet is pair'd with shining white.
If to no charms thou wilt thy heart resign,
But such as merit, such as equal thine,
By none, alas ! by none thou canst be moved :
Phaon alone by Phaon must be loved !
Yet once thy Sappho could thy cares employ ;
Once in her arms you centred all your joy :
No time the dear remembrance can remove,
For, oh ! how vast a memory has love !
My music, then you could for ever hear,
And all my words were music to your ear
You stopp'd with kisses my enchanting tongue,
And found my kisses sweeter than my song.
In all I pleased, but most in what was best ;
And the last joy was dearer than the rest.
Then with each word, each glance, each motion fired,
You still enjoy'd, and yet you still desired,
Till all dissolving in the trance we lay,
And in tumultuous raptures died away.
The fair Sicilians now thy soul inflame :
Why was I born, ye gods ! a Lesbian dame ?
But ah, beware, Sicilian nymphs ! nor boast
That wandering heart which I so lately lost ;
Nor be with all those tempting words abused,
Those tempting words were all to Sappho used

And you that rule Sicilia's happy plains,
 Have pity, Venus, on your poet's pains!
 Shall fortune still in one sad tenor run,
 And still increase the woes so soon begun ?
 Inured to sorrow from my tender years,
 My parent's ashes drank my early tears :
 My brother next, neglecting wealth and fame,
 Ignobly burn'd in a destructive flame ;
 An infant daughter late my griefs increased,
 And all a mother's cares distract my breast.
 Alas ! what more could fate itself impose,
 But thee, the last and greatest of my woes ?
 No more my robes in waving purple flow,
 Nor on my hand the sparkling diamonds glow ;
 No more my locks, in ringlets curl'd, diffuse
 The costly sweetness of Arabian dews ;
 Nor braids of gold the varied tresses bind,
 That fly disorder'd with the wanton wind :
 For whom should Sappho use such arts as these ?
 He's gone, whom only she desired to please !
 Cupid's light darts my tender bosom move,
 Still is there cause for Sappho still to love :
 So from my birth the Sisters fix'd my doom,
 And gave to Venus all my life to come ;
 Or, while my muse in melting notes complains,
 My yielding heart keeps measure to my strains.
 By charms like thine, which all my soul have won,
 Who might not—ah ! who would not be undone ?
 For those Aurora Cephalus might scorn,
 And with fresh blushes paint the conscious morn :
 For those might Cynthia lengthen Phaon's sleep,
 And bid Endymion nightly tend his sheep :
 Venus for those had rapt thee to the skies,
 But Mars on thee might look with Venus' eyes.
 O scarce a youth, yet scarce a tender boy !
 O useful time for lovers to employ !
 Pride of thy age and glory of thy race,
 Come to these arms, and melt in this embrace !

The vows you never will return, receive ;
And take at least the love you will not give.
See, while I write, my words are lost in tears !
The less my sense, the more my love appears.
Sure 'twas not much to bid one kind adieu ;
(At least to feign was never hard to you !)
Farewell, my Lesbian love, you might have said ;
Or coldly thus, ' Farewell, oh Lesbian maid !'
No tear did you, no parting kiss receive,
Nor knew I then how much I was to grieve.
No lover's gift your Sappho could confer,
And wrongs and woes were all you left with her.
No charge I gave you, and no charge could give,
But this, ' Be mindful of our loves, and live.'
Now by the Nine, those powers adored by me,
And Love, the god that ever waits on thee,
When first I heard (from whom I hardly knew)
That you were fled, and all my joys with you,
Like some sad statue, speechless, pale I stood,
Grief chill'd my breast, and stopp'd my freezing blood
No sigh to rise, no tear had power to flow,
Fix'd in a stupid lethargy of wo :
But when its way the impetuous passion found,
I rend my tresses, and my breast I wound ;
I rave ; then weep ; I curse, and then complain :
Now swell to rage, now melt in tears again.
Not fiercer pangs distract the mournful dame,
Whose first-born infant feeds the funeral flame.
My scornful brother with a smile appears,
Insults my woes, and triumphs in my tears :
His hated image ever haunts my eyes ;
' And why this grief? thy daughter lives,' he cries.
Stung with my love, and furious with despair,
All torn my garments, and my bosom bare,
My woes, thy crimes, I to the world proclaim :
Such inconsistent things are love and shame !
'Tis thou art all my care and my delight,
My daily longing, and my dream by night.

O night, more pleasing than the brightest day,
 When fancy gives what absence takes away,
 And dress'd in all its visionary charms,
 Restores my fair deserter to my arms !
 Then round your neck in wanton wreaths I twine;
 Then you, methinks, as fondly circle mine :
 A thousand tender words I hear and speak ;
 A thousand melting kisses give and take :
 Then fiercer joys : I blush to mention these,
 Yet, while I blush, confess how much they please.
 But when, with day, the sweet delusions fly,
 And all things wake to life and joy, but I ;
 As if once more forsaken, I complain,
 And close my eyes to dream of you again ;
 Then frantic rise, and like some fury rove
 Through lonely plains, and through the silent grove :
 As if the silent grove, and lonely plains,
 That knew my pleasures, could relieve my pains.
 I view the grotto, once the scene of love,
 The rocks around, the hanging roofs above,
 That charm'd me more, with native moss o'ergrown
 Than Phrygian marble, or the Parian stone.
 I find the shades that veil'd our joys before !
 But, Phaon gone, those shades delight no more.
 Here the press'd herbs with bending tops betray
 Where oft entwined in amorous folds we lay ;
 I kiss that earth which once was press'd by you,
 And all with tears the withering herbs bedew.
 For thee the fading trees appear to mourn,
 And birds defer their songs till thy return .
 Night shades the grove, and all in silence lie,
 All but the mournful Philomel and I :
 With mournful Philomel I join my strain,
 Of Tereus she, of Phaon I complain.

A spring there is, whose silver waters show,
 Clear as a glass, the shining sands below ;
 A flowery lotos spreads its arms above,
 Shades all the banks, and seems itself a grove :

Eternal greens the mossy margin grace,
 Watch'd by the sylvan genius of the place.
 Here as I lay, and swell'd with tears the flood,
 Before my sight a watery virgin stood:
 She stood and cried, 'O you that love in vain;
 Fly hence, and seek the fair Leucadian main:
 There stands a rock, from whose impending steep
 Apollo's fane surveys the rolling deep;
 There injured lovers, leaping from above,
 Their flames extinguish, and forget to love.
 Deucalion once with hopeless fury burn'd,
 In vain he loved: relentless Pyrrha scorn'd:
 But when from hence he plunged into the main,
 Deucalion scorn'd, and Pyrrha loved in vain.
 Haste, Sappho, haste, from high Leucadia throw
 Thy wretched weight, nor dread the deeps below!
 She spoke, and vanish'd with the voice—I rise,
 And silent tears fall trickling from my eyes.
 I go, ye nymphs! those rocks and seas to prove;
 How much I fear, but ah, how much I love!
 I go, ye nymphs! where furious love inspires;
 Let female fears submit to female fires.
 To rocks and seas I fly from Phaon's hate,
 And hope from seas and rocks a milder fate.
 Ye gentle gales, beneath my body blow,
 And softly lay me on the waves below!
 And thou, kind Love, my sinking limbs sustain,
 Spread thy soft wings, and waft me o'er the main,
 Nor let a lover's death the guiltless flood profane!
 On Phœbus' shrine my harp I'll then bestow,
 And this inscription shall be plac'd below;
 'Here she who sung, to him who did inspire,
 Sappho to Phœbus consecrates her lyre;
 What suits with Sappho, Phœbus, suits with thee,
 The gift, the giver, and the god agree.'
 But why, alas! relentless youth, ah why
 To distant seas must tender Sappho fly?

Thy charms than those may far more powerful be,
 And Phœbus' self is less a god to me.
 Ah! canst thou doom me to the rocks and sea,
 O far more faithless, and more hard than they?
 Ah! canst thou rather see this tender breast
 Dash'd on these rocks, than to thy bosom press'd?
 This breast, which once, in vain! you liked so well;
 Where the loves play'd, and where the muses dwell
 Alas! the muses now no more inspire;
 Untuned my lute, and silent is my lyre;
 My languid numbers have forgot to flow,
 And fancy sinks beneath a weight of wo.
 Ye Lesbian virgins, and ye Lesbian dames,
 Themes of my verse, and objects of my flames,
 No more your groves with my glad songs shall ring,
 No more these hands shall touch the trembling string:
 My Phaon's fled, and I those arts resign,
 (Wretch that I am, to call that Phaon mine!)
 Return, fair youth, return, and bring along
 Joy to my soul, and vigour to my song:
 Absent from thee, the poet's flame expires;
 But ah! how fiercely burn the lover's fires!
 Gods! can no prayers, no sighs, no numbers move
 One savage heart, or teach it how to love?
 The winds my prayers, my sighs, my numbers bear
 The flying winds have lost them all in air!
 Oh when, alas! shall more auspicious gales
 To these fond eyes restore thy welcome sails?
 If you return—ah, why these long delays?
 Poor Sappho dies while careless Phaon stays.
 O, launch thy bark, nor fear the watery plain;
 Venus for thee shall smooth her native main.
 O, launch thy bark, secure of prosperous gales
 Cupid for thee shall spread the swelling sails.
 If you will fly—(yet ah! what cause can be,
 Too cruel youth, that you should fly from me?)
 If not from Phaon I must hope for ease,
 Ah let me seek it from the raging seas:

To raging seas unpitied I'll remove,
And either cease to live, or cease to love!

ELOISA TO ABELARD.

ARGUMENT.

Abelard and Eloisa flourished in the twelfth century; they were two of the most distinguished persons of their age in learning and beauty, but for nothing more famous than for their unfortunate passion. After a long course of calamities they retired each to a several convent, and consecrated the remainder of their days to religion. It was many years after this separation, that a letter of Abelard's to a friend which contained the history of his misfortune, fell into the hands of Eloisa. This awakening all her tenderness, occasioned those celebrated letters (out of which the following is partly extracted) which give so lively a picture of the struggles of grace and nature virtue and passion.

In these deep solitudes and awful cells,
Where heavenly-pensive contemplation dwells,
And ever-musing melancholy reigns,
What means this tumult in a vestal's veins?
Why rove my thoughts beyond this last retreat?
Why feels my heart its long-forgotten heat?
Yet, yet I love!—From Abelard it came,
And Eloisa yet must kiss the name.

Dear fatal name! rest ever unreveal'd,
Nor pass these lips, in holy silence seal'd:
Hide it, my heart, within that close disguise,
Where, mix'd with God's, his loved idea lies:
O, write it not, my hand—the name appears
Already written—wash it out, my tears!
In vain lost Eloisa weeps and prays;
Her heart still dictates, and her hand obeys.

Relentless walls! whose darksome round contains
 Repentant sighs, and voluntary pains :
 Ye rugged rocks ! which holy knees have worn ;
 Ye grotts and caverns shagg'd with horrid thorn ;
 Shrines ! where their vigils pale-eyed virgins keep ;
 And pitying saints, whose statues learn to weep ;
 Though cold like you, unmoved and silent grown,
 I have not yet forgot myself to stone.

All is not Heaven's while Abelard has part :
 Still rebel nature holds out half my heart ;
 Nor prayers nor fasts its stubborn pulse restrain,
 Nor tears for ages taught to flow in vain.

Soon as thy letters trembling I unclose,
 That well-known name awakens all my woes ;
 Oh, name for ever sad ! for ever dear !
 Still breathed in sighs, still usher'd with a tear.
 I tremble too, where'er my own I find,
 Some dire misfortune follows close behind.
 Line after line my gushing eyes o'erflow,
 Led through a sad variety of wo :
 Now warm in love, now withering in my bloom,
 Lost in a convent's solitary gloom !
 There stern religion quench'd the unwilling flame ;
 There died the best of passions, love and fame

Yet write, oh write me all, that I may join
 Griefs to thy griefs, and echo sighs to thine.
 Nor foes nor fortune take this power away ;
 And is my Abelard less kind than they ?
 Tears still are mine, and those I need not spare ;
 Love but demands what else were shed in prayer ;
 No happier task these faded eyes pursue ;
 To read and weep is all they now can do.

Then share thy pain, allow that sad relief :
 Ah, more than share it, give me all thy grief.
 Heaven first taught letters for some wretch's aid.
 Some banish'd lover, or some captive maid ;
 They live, they speak, they breathe what love inspires,
 Warm from the soul, and faithful to its fires,

The virgin's wish without her fears impart,
Excuse the blush, and pour out all the heart,
Speed the soft intercourse from soul to soul,
And waft a sigh from Indus to the pole !

Thou know'st how guiltless first I met thy flame,
When love approach'd me under friendship's name.
My fancy form'd thee of angelic kind,
Some emanation of the All-beauteous Mind,
Those smiling eyes, attempering every ray,
Shone sweetly lambent with celestial day.
Guiltless I gazed : Heaven listen'd while you sung,
And truths divine came mended from that tongue.
From lips like those what precept fail'd to move ?
Too soon they taught me 'twas no sin to love :
Back through the paths of pleasing sense I ran,
Nor wish'd an angel whom I loved a man.
Dim and remote the joys of saints I see,
Nor envy them that heaven I lose for thee.

How oft, when press'd to marriage, have I said ;
Curse on all laws but those which love has made !
Love, free as air, at sight of human ties,
Spreads his light wings, and in a moment flies.
Let wealth, let honour, wait the wedded dame,
August her deed, and sacred be her fame ;
Before true passion all those views remove ;
Fame, wealth, and honour ! what are you to love !
The jealous god, when we profane his fires,
Those restless passions in revenge inspires,
And bids them make mistaken mortals groan,
Who seek in love for aught but love alone.
Should at my feet the world's great master fall,
Himself, his throne, his world, I'd scorn them all ;
Not Cæsar's empress would I deign to prove ;
No, make me mistress to the man I love.
If there be yet another name more free,
More fond than mistress, make me that to thee !
Oh, happy state ! when souls each other draw,
When love is liberty, and nature law ;

All then is full, possessing and possess'd,
 No craving void left aching in the breast :
 E'en thought meets thought, ere from the lips it part,
 And each warm wish springs mutual from the heart.
 This sure is bliss (if bliss on earth there be)
 And once the lot of Abelard and me.

Alas, how changed ! what sudden horrors rise !
 A naked lover bound and bleeding lies !
 Where, where was Eloïse ? her voice, her hand,
 Her poniard had opposed the dire command.
 Barbarian, stay ! that bloody stroke restrain :
 The crime was common, common be the pain
 I can no more ; by shame, by rage suppress'd,
 Let tears and burning blushes speak the rest.

Canst thou forget that sad, that solemn day,
 When victims at yon altar's foot we lay ?
 Canst thou forget what tears that moment fell,
 When, warm in youth, I bade the world farewell ?
 As with cold lips I kiss'd the sacred veil,
 The shrines all trembled, and the lamps grew pale ;
 Heaven scarce believed the conquest it survey'd,
 And saints with wonder heard the vows I made.
 Yet then, to those dread altars as I drew,
 Not on the cross my eyes were fix'd, but you :
 Not grace, or zeal, love only was my call ;
 And if I lose thy love, I lose my all.
 Come, with thy looks, thy words, relieve my woe,
 Those still at least are left thee to bestow.
 Still on that breast enamour'd let me lie,
 Still drink delicious poison from thy eye,
 Pant on thy lip, and to thy heart be press'd ;
 Give all thou canst—and let me dream the rest.
 Ah, no ! instruct me other joys to prize,
 With other beauties charm my partial eyes :
 Full in my view set all the bright abode,
 And make my soul quit Abelard for God.

Ah ! think at least thy flock deserves thy care,
 Plants of thy hand, and children of thy prayer.

From the false world in early youth they fled,
By thee to mountains, wilds, and deserts led,
You raised these hallow'd walls ; the desert smiled
And paradise was open'd in the wild.
No weeping orphan saw his father's stores
Our shrines irradiate, or emblaze the floors ;
No silver sauts, by dying misers given,
Here bribe the rage of ill-requited Heaven ;
But such plain roofs as piety could raise,
And only vocal with the Maker's praise.
In these lone walls (their day's eternal bound)
These moss-grown domes with spiry turrets crown'd,
Where awful arches make a noon-day night,
And the dim windows shed a solemn light,
Thy eyes diffused a reconciling ray,
And gleams of glory brighten'd all the day :
But now no face divine contentment wears ;
'Tis all blank sadness, or continual tears.
See how the force of others' prayers I try,
(Oh pious fraud of amorous charity !)
But why should I on others' prayers depend ?
Come thou, my father, brother, husband, friend !
Ah, let thy handmaid, sister, daughter, move,
And all those tender names in one, thy love !
The darksome pines that o'er yon rocks reclined,
Wave high, and murmur to the hollow wind,
The wandering streams that shine between the hills,
The grotts that echo to the tinkling rills,
The dying gales that pant upon the trees,
The lakes that quiver to the curling breeze ;
No more these scenes my meditation aid,
Or lull to rest the visionary maid :
But o'er the twilight groves and dusky caves,
Long-sounding aisles, and intermingled graves,
Black melancholy sits, and round her throws
A death-like silence, and a dread repose ;
Her gloomy presence saddens all the scene,
Shades every flower, and darkens every green,

Deepens the murmur of the falling floods,
And breathes a browner horror on the woods.

Yet here for ever, ever must I stay ;
Sad proof how well a lover can obey !
Death, only death, can break the lasting chain ;
And here, e'en then, shall my cold dust remain ;
Here all its frailties, all its flames resign,
And wait till 'tis no sin to mix with thine.

Ah, wretch ! believed the spouse of God in vain,
Confess'd within the slave of love and man.
Assist me, Heaven ! but whence arose that prayer ?
Sprung it from piety, or from despair ?
E'en here, where frozen chastity retires,
Love finds an altar for forbidden fires.
I ought to grieve, but cannot what I ought ;
I mourn the lover, not lament the fault ;
I view my crime, but kindle at the view,
Repent old pleasures, and solicit new ;
Now turn'd to heaven, I weep my past offence,
Now think of thee, and curse my innocence
Of all affliction taught a lover yet,
'Tis sure the hardest science to forget .
How shall I lose the sin, yet keep the sense,
And love the offender, yet detest the offence ?
How the dear object from the crime remove,
Or how distinguish penitence from love ?
Unequal task ! a passion to resign,
For hearts so touch'd, so pierced, so lost as mine .
Ere such a soul regains its peaceful state,
How often must it love, how often hate !
How often hope, despair, resent, regret,
Conceal, disdain—do all things but forget !
But let heaven seize it, all at once 'tis fired :
Not touch'd, but rapt ; not waken'd, but inspired !
Oh come ! oh teach me nature to subdue,
Renounce my love, my life, myself—and you.
Fill my fond heart with God alone, for he Alone can rival, can succeed to thee.

How happy is the blameless vestal's lot ;
The world forgetting, by the world forgot !
Eternal sun-shine of the spotless mind ;
Each prayer accepted, and each wish resign'd
Labour and rest that equal periods keep ;
Obedient slumbers that can wake and weep ,
Desires composed, affections ever even ;
Tears that delight and sighs that waft to heaven.
Grace shines around her with serenest beams,
And whispering angels prompt her golden dreams ;
For her the unfading rose of Eden blooms,
And wings of seraphs shed divine perfumes ;
For her the spouse prepares the bridal ring ;
For her white virgins hymenæals sing ;
To sounds of heavenly harps she dies away,
And melts in visions of eternal day.

Far other dreams my erring soul employ,
Far other raptures of unholy joy :
When, at the close of each sad sorrowing day,
Fancy restores what vengeance snatch'd away,
Then conscience sleeps, and leaving nature free,
All my loose soul unbounded springs to thee.
O curst, dear horrors of all-conscious night !
How glowing guilt exalts the keen delight !
Provoking demons all restraint remove,
And stir within me every source of love.
I hear thee, view thee, gaze o'er all thy charms,
And round thy phantom glue my clasping arms.
I wake:—no more I hear, no more I view,
The phantom flies me, as unkind as you.
I call aloud ; it hears not what I say :
I stretch my empty arms ; it glides away.
To dream once more, I close my willing eyes :
Ye soft illusions, dear deceits, arise !
Alas, no more ! methinks we wandering go
Through dreary wastes, and weep each other's woe,
Where round some mouldering tower pale ivy creeps,
And low-brow'd rocks hang nodding o'er the deeps.

Sudden you mount, you beckon from the skies,
 Clouds interpose, waves roar, and winds arise.
 I shriek, start up, the same sad prospect find,
 And wake to all the griefs I left behind.

For thee the Fates, severely kind, ordain
 A cool suspense from pleasure and from pain;
 Thy life a long dead calm of fix'd repose;
 No pulse that riots, and no blood that glows.
 Still as the sea, ere winds were taught to blow,
 Or moving spirit bade the waters flow;
 Soft as the slumbers of a saint forgiven,
 And mild as opening gleams of promised heaven.

Come, Abelard! for what hast thou to dread?
 The torch of Venus burns not for the dead.
 Nature stands check'd; religion disapproves;
 E'en thou art cold—yet Eloi'sa loves.
 Ah, hopeless, lasting flames! like those that burn
 To light the dead, and warm the unfruitful urn.

What scenes appear where'er I turn my view!
 The dear ideas, where I fly, pursue,
 Rise in the grove, before the altar rise,
 Stain all my soul, and wanton in my eyes.
 I waste the matin lamp in sighs for thee,
 Thy image steals between my God and me;
 Thy voice I seem in every hymn to hear,
 With every bead I drop too soft a tear.
 When from the censer clouds of fragrance roll,
 And swelling organs lift the rising soul,
 One thought of thee puts all the pomp to flight,
 Priests, tapers, temples, swim before my sight.
 In seas of flame my plunging soul is drown'd,
 While altars blaze, and angels tremble round.

While prostrate here in humble grief I lie,
 Kind, virtuous drops just gathering in my eye,
 While, praying, trembling, in the dust I roll,
 And dawning grace is opening on my soul:
 Come, if thou darest, all-charming as thou art,
 Oppose thyself to Heaven; dispute my heart.

Come, with one glance of those deluding eyes
 Blot out each bright idea of the skies ;
 Take back that grace, those sorrows, and those tears,
 Take back my fruitless penitence and prayers ;
 Snatch me, just mounting, from the blest abode,
 Assist the fiends, and tear me from my God !

No, fly me, fly me, far as pole from pole ;
 Rise Alps between us ! and whole oceans roll :
 Ah, come not, write not, think not once of me,
 Nor share one pang of all I felt for thee.
 Thy oaths I quit, thy memory resign ;
 Forget, renounce me, hate what'er was mine.
 Fair eyes, and tempting looks (which yet I view !)
 Long loved, adored ideas, all adieu !
 O grace serene ! O virtue heavenly fair !
 Divine oblivion of low-thoughted care !
 Fresh-blooming hope, gay daughter of the sky !
 And faith, our early immortality !
 Enter, each mild, each amiable guest ;
 Receive and wrap me in eternal rest !

See in her cell sad Eloïsa spread,
 Propp'd on some tomb, a neighbour of the dead,
 In each low wind methinks a spirit calls,
 And more than echoes talk along the walls.
 Here, as I watch'd the dying lamp around,
 From yonder shrine I heard a hollow sound :
 'Come, sister, come !' it said, or seem'd to say,
 'Thy place is here ; sad sister, come away !
 Once like thyself, I trembled, wept, and pray'd,
 Love's victim then, though now a sainted maid :
 But all is calm in this eternal sleep ;
 Here grief forgets to groan, and love to weep :
 E'en superstition loses every fear ;
 For God, not man, absolves our frailties here.'

I come, I come ! prepare your roseate bowers,
 Celestial palms, and ever-blooming flowers :
 Thither, where sinners may have rest, I go,
 Where flames refined in breasts seraphic glow :

Thou, Abelard! the last sad office pay,
 And smooth my passage to the realms of day :
 See my lips tremble, and my eye-balls roll,
 Suck my last breath, and catch my flying soul !
 Ah, no—in sacred vestments mayst thou stand,
 The hallow'd taper trembling in thy hand,
 Present the cross before my lifted eye,
 Teach me at once, and learn of me to die.
 Ah, then thy once-loved Eloïsa see !
 It will be then no crime to gaze on me.
 See from my cheek the transient roses fly !
 See the last sparkle languish in my eye !
 Till every motion, pulse, and breath be o'er ;
 And e'en my Abelard be loved no more.
 O Death, all eloquent ! you only prove
 What dust we dote on, when 'tis man we love.
 Then too, when Fate shall thy fair frame destroy
 (That cause of all my guilt, and all my joy,)
 In trance ecstatic may thy pangs be drown'd,
 Bright clouds descend, and angels watch thee round
 From opening skies may streaming glories shine,
 And saints embrace thee with a love like mine.

May one kind grave unite each hapless name !
 And graft my love immortal on thy fame !
 Then, ages hence, when all my woes are o'er,
 When this rebellious heart shall beat no more,
 If ever chance two wandering lovers brings
 To Paraclete's white walls and silver springs,
 O'er the pale marble shall they join their heads,
 And drink the falling tears each other sheds ;
 Then sadly say, with mutual pity moved,
 ' O, may we never love as these have loved !'
 From the full choir, when loud hosannas rise,
 And swell the pomp of dreadful sacrifice,
 Amid that scene if some relenting eye
 Glance on the stone where our cold relics lie,
 Devotion's self shall steal a thought from heaven,
 One human tear shall drop, and be forgiven.

And sure if Fate some future bard shall join
In sad similitude of griefs to mine,
Condemn'd whole years in absence to deplore,
And image charms he must behold no more ;
Such, if there be, who loves so long, so well,
Let him our sad, our tender story tell !
The well-sung woes will soothe my pensive ghost ;
He best can paint them who shall feel them most !

THE TEMPLE OF FAME.

Written in the Year 1711.

ADVERTISEMENT.

The hint of the following piece was taken from Chaucer's House of Fame. The design is in a manner entirely altered, the descriptions and most of the particular thoughts my own; yet I could not suffer it to be printed without this acknowledgment. The reader who would compare this with Chaucer, may begin with his third book of Fame, there being nothing in the first two books that answers to their title.

The poem is introduced in the manner of the Provençal poets, whose works were for the most part visions, or pieces of imagination, and constantly descriptive. From these, Petrarch and Chaucer frequently borrowed the idea of their poems. See the Trionfi of the former, and the Dream, Flower and the Leaf, &c. of the latter. The author of this, therefore, chose the same sort of exordium.

THE TEMPLE OF FAME.

IN that soft season, when descending showers
Call forth the greens, and wake the rising flowers ;
When opening buds salute the welcome day,
And earth relenting, feels the genial ray ;
As balmy sleep had charm'd my cares to rest,
And love itself was banish'd from my breast,

(What time the morn mysterious visions brings,
While purer slumbers spread their golden wings,)
A train of phantoms in wild order rose,
And join'd, this intellectual scene compose.

I stood, methought, betwixt earth, seas, and skies
The whole creation open to my eyes :
In air self-balanc'd hung the globe below,
Where mountains rise, and circling oceans flow .
Here naked rocks, and empty wastes were seen,
There towering cities, and the forests green ;
Here sailing ships delight the wandering eyes ;
There trees and intermingled temples rise :
Now a clear sun the shining scene displays,
The transient landscape now in clouds decays.

O'er the wide prospect as I gaz'd around,
Sudden I heard a wild promiscuous sound,
Like broken thunders that at distance roar,
Or billows murmuring on the hollow shore :
Then gazing up, a glorious pile beheld,
Whose towering summit ambient clouds conceal'd
High on a rock of ice the structure lay,
Steep its ascent, and slippery was the way :
The wond'rous rock like Parian marble shone,
And seem'd, to distant sight, of solid stone.
Inscriptions here of various names I view'd,
The greater part by hostile time subdued ;
Yet wide was spread their fame in ages past,
And poets once had promis'd they should last.
Some fresh engrav'd appear'd of wits renown'd ;
I look'd again, nor could their trace be found.
Critics I saw, that other names deface,
And fix their own, with labour, in their place :
Their own, like others, soon their place resign'd,
Or disappear'd, and left the first behind.
Nor was the work impair'd oy storms alone,
But felt the approaches of too warm a sun ;
For Fame, impatient of extremes, decays
Not more by envy than excess of praise.

Yet part no injuries of heav'n could feel,
 Like crystal faithful to the graven steel:
 The rock's high summit, in the temple's shade,
 Nor heat could melt, nor beating storm invade.
 Their names inscrib'd unnumber'd ages past,
 From time's first birth, with time itself shall last;
 These ever new, nor subject to decays,
 Spread, and grow brighter with the length of days

So Zembla's rocks (the beauteous work of frost)
 Rise white in air, and glitter o'er the coast;
 Pale suns, unfelt, at distance roll away,
 And on the impassive ice the lightnings play;
 Eternal snows the growing mass supply,
 Till the bright mountains prop th' incumbent sky.
 As Atlas fix'd, each hoary pile appears,
 The gather'd winter of a thousand years.
 On this foundation Fame's high temple stands;
 Stupendous pile! not rear'd by mortal hands.
 Whate'er proud Rome or Artful Greece beheld,
 Or elder Babylon, its frame excell'd.
 Four faces had the dome, and every face
 Of various structure, but of equal grace:
 Four brazen gates, on columns lifted high,
 Salute the different quarters of the sky.
 Here fabled chiefs, in darker ages born,
 Or worthies old, whom arms or arts adorn,
 Who cities rais'd, or tam'd a monstrous race,
 The walls in venerable order grace:
 Heroes in animated marble frown,
 And legislators seem to think in stone.

Westward, a sumptuous frontispiece appear'd,
 On Doric pillars of white marble rear'd,
 Crown'd with an architrave of antique mould,
 And sculpture rising on the roughen'd gold.
 In shaggy spoils here Theseus was beheld,
 And Perseus dreadful with Minerva's shield:
 There great Alcides, stooping with his toil,
 Rests on his club, and holds th' Hesperian spoil

Here Orpheus sings; trees moving to the sound
 Start from their roots, and form a shade around:
 Amphion there the loud creating lyre
 Strikes, and beholds a sudden Thebes aspire!
 Cythæron's echoes answer to his call,
 And half the mountain rolls into a wall:
 There might you see the lengthening spires ascend,
 The domes swell up, the widening arches bend,
 The growing tow'rs, like exhalations, rise,
 And the huge columns heave into the skies.
 The eastern front was glorious to behold,
 With diamond flaming, and barbaric gold.
 There Ninus shone, who spread the Assyrian fame.
 And the great founder of the Persian name:
 There in long robes the royal magi stand,
 Grave Zoroaster waves the circling wand:
 The sage Chaldæans rob'd in white appear'd,
 And Brachmans, deep in desert woods rever'd.
 These stopp'd the moon, and call'd th' unbodied shades
 To midnight banquets in the glimmering glades;
 Made visionary fabrics round them rise,
 And airy spectres skim before their eyes;
 Of talismans and sigils knew the power,
 And careful watched the planetary hour.
 Superior, and alone, Confucius stood,
 Who taught that useful science—to be good.

But on the south, a long majestic race
 Of Egypt's priests the gilded niches grace,
 Who measured earth, described the starry spheres,
 And traced the long records of lunar years.
 High on his car Sesostris struck my view,
 Whom scepter'd slaves in golden harness drew:
 His hands a bow and pointed javelin hold:
 His giant limbs are arm'd in scales of gold.
 Between the statues obelisks were placed,
 And the learn'd walls with hieroglyphics graced.
 Of Gothic structure was the northern side,
 O'erwrought with ornaments of barbarous pride.

There huge Colosses rose, with trophies crown'd,
And Runic characters were graved around.
There sat Zamolxis with erected eyes,
And Odin here in mimic trances dies.
There on rude iron columns, smear'd with blood,
The horrid forms of Scythian heroes stood :
Druids and Bards (their once loud harps unstrung)
And youths that died to be by poets sung.
These and a thousand more of doubtful fame,
To whom old fables give a lasting name,
In ranks adorn'd the temple's outward face ;
The wall in lustre and effect like glass,
Which, o'er each object casting various dyes,
Enlarges some, and others multiplies :
Nor void of emblem was the mystic wall,
For thus romantic Fame increases all.

The temple shakes, the sounding gates unfold,
Wide vaults appear, and roofs of fretted gold :
Raised on a thousand pillars wreathed around
With laurel-foliage, and with eagles crown'd :
Of bright transparent beryl were the walls,
The friezes gold, and gold the capitals :
As heaven with stars, the roof with jewels glows,
And ever-living lamps depend in rows.
Full in the passage of each spacious gate,
The sage historians in white garments wait ;
Graved o'er their seats the form of Time was found,
His scythe reversed, and both his pinions bound.
Within stood heroes, who through loud alarms
In bloody fields pursued renown in arms.
High on a throne with trophies charged I view'd
The youth that all things but himself subdued ;
His feet on sceptres and tiaras trod,
And his horn'd head belied the Lybian god.
There Cæsar, graced with both Minervas, shone ;
Cæsar, the world's great master, and his own
Unmoved, superior still in every state,
And scarce detested in his country's fate.

But chief were those, who not for empire fought,
But with their toils their people's safety bought :

    h o'er the rest Epaminondas stood ;
    Amoleon, glorious in his brother's blood ;
Bold Scipio, saviour of the Roman state ;
Great in his triumphs, in retirement great ;
And wise Aurelius, in whose well-taught mind
With boundless power unbounded virtue join'd,
His own strict judge, and patron of mankind.

Much-suffering heroes next their honours claim,
Those of less noisy, and less guilty fame,
Fair virtue's silent train : supreme of these
Here ever shines the godlike Socrates ;
He whom ungrateful Athens could expel,
At all times just, but when he sign'd the shell :
Here his abode the martyr'd Phocion claims,
With Agis, not the last of Spartan names :
Unconquer'd Cato shows the wound he tore,
And Brutus his ill genius meets no more.

But in the centre of the hallow'd choir,
Six pompous columns o'er the rest aspire ;
Around the shrine itself of Fame they stand,
Hold the chief honours, and the fane command
High on the first, the mighty Homer shone ;
Eternal adamant composed his throne ;
Father of verse ! in holy fillets dress'd,
His silver beard waved gently o'er his breast ;
Though blind, a boldness in his looks appears,
In years he seem'd, but not impair'd by years.
The wars of Troy were round the pillar seen ;
Here fierce Tydides wounds the Cyprian queen ;
Here Hector glorious from Patroclus' fall,
Here dragg'd in triumph round the Trojan wall.
Motion and life did every part inspire,
Bold was the work, and proved the master's fire ;
A strong expression most he seem'd t' affect,
And here and there disclosed a brave neglect.

A golden column next in rank appear'd,
 On which a shrine of purest gold was rear'd ;
 Finish'd the whole, and labour'd every part,
 With patient touches of unwearied art ;
 The Mantuan there in sober triumph sate,
 Composed his posture, and his look sedate ;
 On Homer still he fix'd a reverent eye,
 Great without pride, in modest majesty.
 In living sculpture on the sides were spread
 The Latian wars, and haughty Turnus dead ;
 Eliza stretch'd upon the funeral pyre ;
 Æneas bending with his aged sire ;
 Troy, flamed in burning gold, and o'er the throne
 ' Arms and the man' in golden cyphers shone.

Four swans sustain a car of silver bright,
 With heads advanced, and pinions stretch'd for flig
 Here, like some furious prophet, Pindar rode,
 And seem'd to labour with the inspiring god.
 Across the harp a careless hand he flings,
 And boldly sinks into the sounding strings.
 The figured games of Greece the column grace,
 Neptune and Jove survey the rapid race.
 The youths hang o'er their chariots as they run ;
 The fiery steeds seem starting from the stone :
 The champions in distorted postures threat ;
 And all appear'd irrēgularly great.

Here happy Horace tuned the Ausonian lyre
 To sweeter sounds, and temper'd Pindar's fire ;
 Pleased with Alcæus' manly rage to infuse
 The softer spirit of the Sapphic muse.
 The polish'd pillar different sculptures grace ;
 A work outlasting monumental brass.
 Here smiling loves and Bacchanals appear,
 The Julian star and great Augustus here.
 The doves that round the infant poet spread
 Myrtles and bays, hung hovering o'er his head
 Here, in a shrine that cast a dazzling light,
 Sate fix'd in thought the mighty Stagyrite :

His sacred head a radiant zodiac crown'd,
 And various animals his sides surround ;
 His piercing eyes, erect, appear to view
 Superior worlds, and look all nature through.

With equal rays immortal Tully shone,
 The Roman rostra deck'd the consul's throne :
 Gathering his flowing robe he seem'd to stand,
 In act to speak, and graceful stretch'd his hand
 Behind, Rome's Genius waits with civic crowns,
 And the great father of his country owns.

These massy columns in a circle rise,
 O'er which a pompous dome invades the skies ;
 Scarce to the top I stretch'd my aching sight,
 So large it spread, and swell'd to such a height.
 Full in the midst proud Fame's imperial seat
 With jewels blazed, magnificently great :
 The vivid emeralds there revive the eye,
 The flaming rubies show their sanguine dye,
 Bright azure rays from lively sapphires stream,
 And lucid amber casts a golden gleam.
 With various-colour'd light the pavement shone,
 And all on fire appear'd the glowing throne ;
 The dome's high arch reflects the mingled blaze,
 And forms a rainbow of alternate rays.
 When on the goddess first I cast my sight,
 Scarce seem'd her stature of a cubit's height ;
 But swell'd to larger size the more I gazed,
 Till to the roof her towering front she raised.
 With her, the temple every moment grew,
 And ampler vistas open'd to my view :
 Upward the columns shoot, the roofs ascend,
 And arches widen, and long aisles extend.
 Such was her form, as ancient bards have told,
 Wings raise her arms, and wings her feet infold ;
 A thousand busy tongues the goddess bears,
 A thousand open eyes, and thousand listening ears
 Beneath, in order ranged, the tuneful Nine
 (Her virgin handmaids) still attend the shrine.

With eyes on Fame, for ever fix'd, they sing ;
 For Fame they raise their voice, and tune the string ;

With time's first birth began the heavenly lays,
 And last, eternal, through the length of days.

Around these wonders as I cast a look,
 The trumpet sounded, and the temple shook,
 And all the nations, summon'd at the call,
 From different quarters fill'd the crowded hall :
 Of various tongues the mingled sounds were heard :
 In various garbs promiscuous throngs appear'd ;
 Thick as the bees that with the spring renew
 Their flowery toils, and sip the fragrant dew :
 When the wing'd colonies first tempt the sky,
 O'er dusky fields and shaded waters fly,
 Or, settling, seize the sweets the blossoms yield,
 And a low murmur runs along the field.
 Millions of suppliant crowds the shrine attend,
 And all degrees before the goddess bend :
 The poor, the rich, the valiant, and the sage,
 And boasting youth, and narrative old age.
 Their pleas were different, their request the same :
 For good and bad alike are fond of fame.
 Some she disgraced, and some with honours crown'd ;
 Unlike successes equal merits found.
 Thus her blind sister, fickle Fortune, reigns,
 And undiscerning scatters crowns and chains.

First at the shrine the learned world appear,
 And to the goddess thus prefer their prayer :

' Long have we sought to instruct and please man kind ;

With studies pale, with midnight vigils blind ;
 But thank'd by few, rewarded yet by none,
 We here appeal to thy superior throne :
 On wit and learning the just prize bestow,
 For fame is all we must expect below.'

The goddess heard, and bade the Muses raise
 The golden trumpet of eternal praise :

From pole to pole the winds diffuse the sound,
 That fills the circuit of the world around ;
 Not all at once as thunder breaks the cloud ;
 The notes at first were rather sweet than loud :
 By just degrees they every moment rise,
 Fill the wide earth, and gain upon the skies.
 At every breath were balmy odours shed,
 Which still grew sweeter, as they wider spread
 Less fragrant scents the unfolding rose exhales,
 Or spices breathing in Arabian gales.

Next these the good and just, an awful train,
 Thus on their knees address the sacred fane :
 'Since living virtue is with envy cursed,
 And the best men are treated like the worst,
 Do thou, just goddess, call our merits forth,
 And give each deed the exact intrinsic worth.'
 'Not with bare justice shall your acts be crown'd,'
 Said Fame, 'but high above desert renown'd :
 Let fuller notes the applauding world amaze,
 And the loud clarion labour in your praise.'

This band dismiss'd, behold another crowd
 Preferr'd the same request, and lowly bow'd :
 The constant tenour of whose well-spent days
 No less deserved a just return of praise.
 But straight the direful trump of slander sounds ;
 Through the big dome the doubling thunder bounds
 Loud as the burst of cannon rends the skies,
 The dire report through every region flies,
 In every ear incessant rumours rung,
 And gathering scandals grew on every tongue.
 From the black trumpet's rusty concave broke
 Sulphureous flames and clouds of rolling smoke
 The poisonous vapour blots the purple skies,
 And withers all before it as it flies.

A troop came next, who crowns and armour wore,
 And proud defiance in their looks they bore :

For thee,' they cried, 'amidst alarms and strife,
 We sail'd in tempests down the stream of life :

For thee whole nations fill'd with flames and blood.
 And swam to empire through the purple flood.
 Those ills we dared, thy inspiration own ;
 What virtue seem'd, was done for thee alone.'
 'Ambitious fools!' the queen replied, and frown'd,
 Be all your acts in dark oblivion drown'd ;
 There sleep forgot with mighty tyrants gone,
 Your statues moulder'd, and your names unknown !
 A sudden cloud straight snatch'd them from my sight,
 And each majestic phantom sunk in night.

Then came the smallest tribe I yet had seen :
 Plain was their dress, and modest was their mien.
 'Great idol of mankind ; we neither claim
 The praise of merit, nor aspire to fame !
 But, safe in deserts from the applause of men,
 Would die unheard-of as we lived unseen.
 'Tis all we beg thee, to conceal from sight
 Those acts of goodness which themselves requite.
 O let us still the secret joys partake,
 To follow virtue e'en for virtue's sake.'

'And live there men, who slight immortal Fame ?
 Who then with incense shall adore our name ?
 But mortals ! know, 'tis still our greatest pride,
 To blaze those virtues which the good would hide
 Rise ! Muses, rise ! add all your tuneful breath ;
 These must not sleep in darkness and in death.'
 She said : in air the trembling music floats,
 And on the winds triumphant swell the notes ;
 So soft, though high, so loud, and yet so clear,
 E'en listening angels lean from heaven to hear ;
 To farthest shores the ambrosial spirit flies,
 Sweet to the world, and grateful to the skies.

Next these a youthful train their vows express'd,
 With feathers crown'd, with gay embroidery dress'd
 Hither,' they cried, 'direct your eyes, and see
 The men of pleasure, dress, and gallantry ;
 Ours is the place at banquets, balls, and plays ;
 Sprightly our nights, polite are all our days ;

Courts we frequent, where 'tis our pleasing care
 To pay due visits, and address the fair :
 In fact, 'tis true, no nymphs we could persuade,
 But still in fancy vanquish'd every maid ;
 Of unknown dutchesses lewd tales we tell,
 Yet, would the world believe us, all were well.
 The joy let others have, and we the name,
 And what we want in pleasure, grant in fame.'

The queen assents, the trumpet rends the skies,
 And at each blast a lady's honour dies.

Pleased with the same success, vast numbers press'd
 Around the shrine, and made the same request :
 'What you,' she cried, 'unlearn'd in arts to please,
 Slaves to yourselves, and e'en fatigued with ease,
 Who lose a length of undeserving days,
 Would you usurp the lover's dear-bought praise?
 To just contempt, ye vain pretenders, fall,
 The people's fable, and the scorn of all.'
 Straight the black clarion sends a horrid sound,
 Loud laughs burst out, and bitter scoffs fly round ;
 Whispers are heard, with taunts reviling loud,
 And scornful hisses run through all the crowd.

Last, those who boast of mighty mischiefs done,
 Enslave their country, or usurp a throne ;
 Or who their glory's dire foundation laid
 On sovereigns ruin'd, or on friends betray'd ;
 Calm thinking villains, whom no faith could fix,
 Of crooked counsels and dark politics :
 Of these a gloomy tribe surround the throne,
 And beg to make the immortal treasons known.
 The trumpet roars, long flaky flames expire,
 With sparks that seem'd to set the world on fire.
 At the dread sound, pale mortals stood aghast,
 And startled nature trembled with the blast.

This having heard and seen, some power unknown
 Straight chang'd the scene, and snatch'd me from the Before my view appear'd a structure fair, [throne its site uncertain, if in earth or air :

With rapid motion turn'd the mansion round ;
With ceaseless noise the ringing walls resound :
Not less in number were the spacious doors,
Than leaves on trees, or sands upon the shores ;
Which still unfolded stand, by night, by day,
Pervious to winds, and open every way.
As flames by nature to the skies ascend,
As weighty bodies to the centre tend,
As to the sea returning rivers roll,
And the touch'd needle trembles to the pole ;
Hither, as to their proper place, arise
All various sounds from earth, and seas, and skies,
Or spoke aloud, or whisper'd in the ear ;
Nor ever silence, rest, or peace, is here.
As on the smooth expanse of crystal lakes
The sinking stone at first a circle makes ;
'The trembling surface, by the motion stirr'd
Spreads in a second circle, then a third ;
Wide, and more wide, the floating rings advance,
Fill all the watery plain, and to the margin dance :
Thus every voice and sound, when first they break,
On neighbouring air a soft impression make ;
Another ambient circle then they move ;
That, in its turn, impels the next above ;
Through undulating air the sounds are sent,
And spread o'er all the fluid element.

There various news I heard of love and strife,
Of peace and war, health, sickness, death, and life,
Of loss and gain, of famine and of store,
Of storms at sea, and travels on the shore,
Of prodigies, and portents seen in air,
Of fires and plagues, and stars with blazing hair
Of turns of fortune, changes in the state,
The falls of favourites, projects of the great,
Of old mismanagements, taxations new ;
All neither wholly false, nor wholly true.

Above, below, without, within, around
Confused, unnumber'd multitudes are found.

Who pass, repass, advance, and glide away ;
 Hosts raised by fear, and phantoms of a day :
 Astrologers, that future fates foreshow,
 Projectors, quacks, and lawyers not a few ;
 And priests, and party zealots, numerous bands,
 With home-born lies, or tales from foreign lands ;
 Each talk'd aloud, or in some secret place,
 And wild impatience stared in every face.
 The flying rumours gather'd as they roll'd,
 Scarce any tale was sooner heard than told ;
 And all who told it added something new,
 And all who heard it made enlargements too ;
 In every ear it spread, on every tongue it grew.
 Thus flying east and west, and north and south,
 News travell'd with increase from mouth to mouth.
 So from a spark, that kindled first by chance,
 With gathering force the quickening flames advance ;
 Till to the clouds their curling heads aspire,
 And towers and temples sink in floods of fire.

When thus ripe lies are to perfection sprung,
 Full grown, and fit to grace a mortal tongue,
 Through thousand vents, impatient, forth they flow,
 And rush in millions on the world below,
 Fame sits aloft, and points them out their course,
 Their date determines, and prescribes their force :
 Some to remain, and some to perish soon ;
 Or wane and wax alternate with the moon.
 Around, a thousand winged wonders fly,
 Borne by the trumpet's blast, and scatter'd through the sky.

There, at one passage, oft you might survey
 A lie and truth contending for the way ;
 And long 'twas doubtful, though so closely pent,
 Which first should issue through the narrow vent.
 At last agreed, together out they fly,
 Inseparable now the truth and lie ;
 The strict companions are for ever join'd,
 And this or that unmix'd, no mortal e'er shall find.

While thus I stood, intent to see and hear,
 One came, methought, and whisper'd in my ear:
 What could thus high thy rash ambition raise?
 Art thou, fond youth, a candidate for praise?
 'Tis true,' said I; 'not void of hopes I came:
 For who so fond as youthful bards of Fame?
 But few, alas! the casual blessing boast,
 So hard to gain, so easy to be lost.
 How vain that second life in others' breath,
 The estate which wits inherit after death!
 Ease, health, and life, for this they must resign,
 (Unsure the tenure, but how vast the fine!)
 The great man's curse, without the gains, endure
 Be envied, wretched, and be flatter'd, poor;
 All luckless wits their enemies profess'd,
 And all successful, jealous friends at best:
 Nor Fame I slight, nor for her favours call;
 She comes unlook'd-for, if she comes at all.
 But if the purchase cost so dear a price
 As soothing folly, or exalting vice,
 Oh! if the muse must flatter lawless sway,
 And follow still where fortune leads the way;
 Or if no basis bear my rising name,
 But the fallen ruins of another's fame;
 Then, teach me, Heaven! to scorn the guilty bays
 Drive from my breast that wretched lust of praise
 Unblemish'd let me live, or die unknown;
 Oh, grant an honest fame, or grant me none!"

 JANUARY AND MAY;

OR,

THE MERCHANT'S TALE.

FROM CHAUCER.

---

THERE lived in Lombardy, as authors write,
 In days of old, a wise and worthy knight,

Of gentle manners, as of generous race,
 Bless'd with much sense, more riches, and some grace;
 Yet, led astray by Venus' soft delights,
 He scarce could rule some idle appetites :
 For long ago, let priests say what they could,
 Weak sinful laymen were but flesh and blood.

But in due time, when sixty years were o'er,
 He vow'd to lead this vicious life no more :
 Whether pure holiness inspired his mind,
 Or dotage turn'd his brain, is hard to find :
 But his high courage prick'd him forth to wed,
 And try the pleasures of a lawful bed.
 This was his nightly dream, his daily care,
 And to the heavenly powers his constant praye
 Once ere he died, to taste the blissful life
 Of a kind husband and a loving wife.

These thoughts he fortified with reasons still (For none want reasons to confirm their will.)
 Grave authors say, and witty poets sing,
 That honest wedlock is a glorious thing :
 But depth of judgment most in him appears,
 Who wisely weds in his maturer years.
 Then let him choose a damsel young and fair,
 To bless his age, and bring a worthy heir :
 To soothe his cares, and, free from noise and strife,
 Conduct him gently to the verge of life.
 Let sinful bachelors their woes deplore,
 Full well they merit all they feel, and more :
 Unawed by precepts human or divine,
 Like birds and beasts promiscuously they join :
 Nor know to make the present blessing last,
 To hope the future, or esteem the past :
 But vainly boast the joys they never tried,
 And find divulged the secrets they would hide.
 The married man may bear his yoke with ease,
 Secure at once himself and Heaven to please ;
 And pass his inoffensive hours away,
 In bliss all night, and innocence all day :

Though fortune change, his constant spouse remains
 Augments his joys, or mitigates his pains.

But what so pure, which envious tongues will spare !
 Some wicked wits have libell'd all the fair.
 With matchless impudence they style a wife
 The dear-bought curse, and lawful plague of life ;
 A bosom-serpent, a domestic evil,
 A night-invasion, and a mid-day devil.
 Let not the wise these slanderous words regard,
 But curse the bones of every lying bard.
 All other goods by fortune's hand are given ;
 A wife is the peculiar gift of Heaven.
 Vain fortune's favours, never at a stay,
 Like empty shadows, pass, and glide away ;
 One solid comfort, our eternal wife,
 Abundantly supplies us all our life :
 This blessing lasts (if those who try say true)
 As long as heart can wish—and longer too.

Our grandsire Adam, ere of Eve possess'd,
 Alone, and e'en in Paradise unblest'd,
 With mournful looks the blissful scenes survey'd,
 And wander'd in the solitary shade :
 The Maker saw, took pity, and bestow'd
 Woman, the last, the best reserved of God.

A wife ! ah gentle deities, can he
 That has a wife, e'er feel adversity ?
 Would men but follow what the sex advise,
 All things would prosper, all the world grow wise
 'Twas by Rebecca's aid that Jacob won
 His father's blessing from an elder son :
 Abusive Nabal owed his forfeit life
 To the wise conduct of a prudent wife :
 Heroic Judith, as old Hebrews show,
 Preserved the Jews, and slew the Assyrian foe :
 At Esther's suit, the persecuting sword
 Was sheathed, and Israel lived to bless the Lord
 These weighty motives, January the sage
 Maturely ponder'd in his riper age ;

And, charm'd with virtuous joys and sober life,
 Would try that Christian comfort, call'd a wife.
 His friends were summon'd on a point so nice,
 To pass their judgment, and to give advice;
 But fix'd before, and well resolved was he ;
 (As men that ask advice are wont to be.)

'My friends,' he cried, (and cast a mournful look Around the room, and sigh'd before he spoke :)

Beneath the weight of threescore years I bend,
 And worn with cares and hastening to my end ;
 How I have lived, alas ! you know too well,
 In worldly follies, which I blush to tell ;
 But gracious Heaven has open'd my eyes at last,
 With due regret I view my vices past,
 And, as the precept of the Church decrees,
 Will take a wife, and live in holy ease.
 But, since by counsel all things should be done,
 And many heads are wiser still than one ;
 Choose you for me, who best shall be content
 When my desire 's approved by your consent.

'One caution yet is needful to be told,
 To guide your choice ; this wife must not be old
 There goes a saying, and 'twas shrewdly said,
 Old fish at table, but young flesh in bed.
 My soul abhors the tasteless, dry embrace
 Of a stale virgin with a winter face :
 In that cold season Love but treats his guest
 With bean-straw, and tough forage at the best.
 No crafty widows shall approach my bed ;
 Those are too wise for bachelors to wed ;
 As subtle clerks, by many schools are made,
 Twice-married dames are mistresses of the trade,
 But young and tender virgins, ruled with ease,
 We form like wax, and mould them as we please.

'Conceive me, sirs, nor take my sense amiss ;
 'Tis what concerns my soul's eternal bliss :
 Since if I found no pleasure in my spouse,
 As flesh is frail, and who (God help me) knows ?

Then should I live in lewd adultery,
 And sink downright to Satan when I die.
 Or were I cursed with an unfruitful bed,
 The righteous end were lost for which I wed ;
 To raise up seed to bless the powers above,
 And not for pleasure only, or for love.
 Think not I dote ; 'tis time to take a wife,
 When vigorous blood forbids a chaster life :
 Those that are bless'd with store of grace divine,
 May live like saints, by Heaven's consent and mine
 ' And since I speak of wedlock, let me say,
 (As thank my stars, in modest truth I may,)
 My limbs are active, still I'm sound at heart,
 And a new vigour springs in every part.
 Think not my virtue lost, though time has shed
 These reverend honours on my hoary head ;
 Thus trees are crown'd with blossoms white as snow
 The vital sap then rising from below :
 Old as I am, my lusty limbs appear
 Like winter greens, that flourish all the year.
 Now, sirs, you know to what I stand inclined,
 Let every friend with freedom speak his mind.'

He said ; the rest in different parts divide ;
 The knotty point was urged on either side :
 Marriage, the theme on which they all declaim'd,
 Some praised with wit, and some with reason blamed
 Till what with proofs, objections, and replies,
 Each wondrous positive, and wondrous wise,
 There fell between his brothers a debate ;
 Placebo this was call'd, and Justin that.

First to the knight Placebo thus begun
 (Mild were his looks, and pleasing was his tone :)
 'Such prudence, sir, in all your words appears,
 As plainly proves, experience dwells with years !
 Yet you pursue sage Solomon's advice,
 To work by counsel when affairs are nice :
 But, with the wise man's leave, I must protest,
 So may my soul arrive at ease and rest,
 As still I hold your own advice the best.

'Sir, I have lived a courtier all my days,
 And studied men, their manners, and their ways;
 And have observed this useful maxim still,
 To let my betters always have their will.
 Nay, if my lord affirm that black was white,
 My word was this: 'Your honour's in the right.
 The assuming wit, who deems himself so wise,
 As his mistaken patron to advise,
 Let him not dare to vent his dangerous thought:
 A noble fool was never in a fault.
 This, sir, affects not you, whose every word
 Is weigh'd with judgment, and befits a lord:
 Your will is mine; and is (I will maintain)
 Pleasing to God, and should be so to man!
 At least your courage all the world must praise,
 Who dare to wed in your declining days.
 Indulge the vigour of your mounting blood,
 And let gray folks be indolently good,
 Who, past all pleasure, damn the joys of sense
 With reverend dulness, and grave impotence.'

Justin, who silent sat, and heard the man,
 Thus, with a philosophic frown, began;
 'A heathen author of the first degree
 (Who though not faith, had sense as well as we,
 Bids us be certain our concerns to trust
 To those of generous principles, and just.
 The venture's greater, I'll presume to say,
 To give your person, than your goods away:
 And therefore, sir, as you regard your rest,
 First learn your lady's qualities at least:
 Whether she's chaste or rampant, proud or civil,
 Meek as a saint, or haughty as the devil;
 Whether an easy; fond familiar fool,
 Or such a wit as no man e'er can rule.
 'Tis true, perfection none must hope to find
 In all this world, much less in womankind;
 But, if her virtues prove the larger share,
 Bless the kind Fates, and think your fortune rare

Ah, gentle sir, take warning of a friend,
 Who knows too well the state you thus commend ;
 And, spite of all his praises, must declare,
 All he can find is bondage, cost, and care.
 Heaven knows, I shed full many a private tear,
 And sigh in silence, lest the world should hear !
 While all my friends applaud my blissful life,
 And swear no mortal's happier in a wife ;
 Demure and chaste as any vestal nun,
 The meekest creature that beholds the sun !
 But, by the immortal powers, I feel the pain,
 And he that smarts has reason to complain.
 Do what you list, for me ; you must be sage,
 And cautious sure ; for wisdom is in age ;
 But at these years, to venture on the fair !
 By him who made the ocean, earth, and air,
 To please a wife, when her occasions call,
 Would busy the most vigorous of us all.
 And trust me, sir, the chastest you can choose
 Will ask observance, and exact her dues.
 If what I speak my noble lord offend,
 My tedious sermon here is at an end.'

'Tis well, 'tis wondrous well,' the knight replies,
 Most worthy kinsman ; 'faith you're mighty wise !
 We, sirs, are fools ; and must resign the cause
 To heathenish authors, proverbs, and old saws.'
 He spoke with scorn, and turn'd another way :—
 What does my friend, my dear Placebo, say ?

'I say,' quoth he, 'by Heaven the man's to blame,
 To slander wives, and wedlock's holy name.
 At this the council rose, without delay ;
 Each, in his own opinion, went his way ;
 With full consent, that, all disputes appeased,
 The knight should marry, when and where he pleased

Who now but January exults with joy :
 The charms of wedlock all his soul employ.
 Each nymph by turns his wavering mind possess'd,
 And reign'd the short-lived tyrant of his breast ;

While fancy pictured every lively part,
 And each bright image wander'd o'er his heart.
 Thus, in some public forum fix'd on high,
 A mirror shows the figures moving by ;
 Still one by one, in swift succession, pass
 The gliding shadows o'er the polish'd glass.
 This lady's charms the nicest could not blame,
 But vile suspicions had aspersed her fame :
 That was with sense, but not with virtue bless'd ;
 And one had grace, that wanted all the rest.
 Thus doubting long what nymph he should obey,
 He fix'd at last upon the youthful May.
 Her faults he knew not, Love is always blind,
 But every charm revolved within his mind :
 Her tender age, her form divinely fair,
 Her easy motion, her attractive air,
 Her sweet behaviour, her enchanting face,
 Her moving softness and majestic grace.

Much in his prudence did our knight rejoice,
 And thought no mortal could dispute his choice ;
 Once more in haste he summon'd every friend,
 And told them all, their pains were at an end.
 ' Heaven that (said he) inspired me first to wed,
 Provides a consort worthy of my bed :
 Let none oppose the election, since on this Depends my quiet, and my future bliss.

' A dame there is, the darling of my eyes,
 Young, beauteous, artless, innocent, and wise ;
 Chaste, though not rich ; and, though not nobly born
 Of honest parents, and may serve my turn.
 Her will I wed, if gracious Heaven so please,
 To pass my age in sanctity and ease :
 And thank the powers, I may possess alone
 The lovely prize, and share my bliss with none !
 If you, my friends, this virgin can procure,
 My joys are full, my happiness is sure.

' One only doubt remains : full oft I've heard,
 By casuists grave, and deep divines averr'd,

That 'tis too much for human race to know
 The bliss of heaven above, and earth below :
 Now should the nuptial pleasures prove so great,
 To match the blessings of the future state,
 Those endless joys were ill-exchanged for these.
 Then clear this doubt, and set my mind at ease.'

This Justin heard, nor could his spleen control,
 Touch'd to the quick, and tickled at the soul.
 'Sir knight,' he cried, 'if this be all you dread,
 Heaven put it past your doubt, when'er you wed
 And to my fervent prayers so far consent,
 That, ere the rites are o'er you may repent !
 Good Heaven, no doubt, the nuptial state approves,
 Since it chastises still what best it loves.
 Then be not, sir, abandon'd to despair ;
 Seek, and perhaps you'll find among the fair,
 One that may do your business to a hair :
 Not e'en in wish, your happiness delay,
 But prove the scourge to lash you on your way .
 Then to the skies your mounting soul shall go,
 Swift as an arrow soaring from the bow !
 Provided still, you moderate your joy,
 Nor in your pleasures all your might employ.
 Let reason's rule your strong desires abate,
 Nor please too lavishly your gentle mate,
 Old wives there are, of judgment most acute,
 Who solve these questions beyond all dispute ;
 Consult with those, and be of better cheer ;
 Marry, do penance, and dismiss your fear.'

So said, they rose, nor more the work delay'd ;
 The match was offered, the proposals made.
 The parents, you may think, would soon comply ;
 The old have interest ever in their eye.
 Nor was it hard to move the lady's mind ;
 When fortune favours, still the fair are kind.

I pass each previous settlement and deed,
 Too long for me to write, or you to read ;
 Nor will with quaint impertinence display
 The pomp, the pageantry, the proud array

The time approach'd, to church the parties went,
 At once with carnal and devout intent :
 Forth came the priest, and bade the obedient wife,
 Like Sarah or Rebecca lead her life ;
 Then pray'd the powers the fruitful bed to bless,
 And made all sure enough with holiness.

And now the palace gates are open'd wide,
 The guests appear in order, side by side,
 And placed in state the bridegroom and the bride.
 The breathing flute's soft notes are heard around,
 And the shrill trumpets mix their silver sound ;
 The vaulted roofs with echoing music ring,
 These touch the vocal stops, and those the trembling string.

Not thus Amphion tuned the warbling lyre,
 Nor Joab the sounding clarion could inspire,
 Nor fierce Theodamus, whose sprightly strain
 Could swell the soul to rage, and fire the martial train.

Bacchus himself, the nuptial feast to grace,
 (So poets sing) was present on the place :
 And lovely Venus, goddess of delight,
 Shook high her flaming torch in open sight.
 And danced around, and smiled on every knight :
 Pleased her best servant would his courage try,
 No less in wedlock, than in liberty.
 Full many an age old Hymen had not spied
 So kind a bridegroom, or so bright a bride.
 Ye bards ! renown'd among the tuneful throng
 For gentle lays, and joyous nuptial song,
 Think not your softest numbers can display
 The matchless glories of the blissful day :
 The joys are such as far transcend your rage,
 When tender youth has wedded stooping age.

The beauteous dame sat smiling at the board,
 And darted amorous glances at her lord.
 Not Esther's self, whose charms the Hebrews sing,
 E'er look'd so lovely on her Persian king.

Bright as the rising sun in summer's day,
And fresh and blooming as the month of May .
The joyful knight survey'd her by his side ;
Nor envied Paris with the Spartan bride :
Still as his mind revolved with vast delight
The entrancing raptures of the approaching night,
Restless he sate, invoking every power
To speed his bliss, and haste the happy hour.
Meantime the vigorous dancers beat the ground,
And songs were sung, and flowing bowls went round ;
With odorous spices they perfumed the place,
And mirth and pleasure shone in every face.

Damian alone of all the menial train,
Sad in the midst of triumphs, sigh'd for pain ;
Damian alone, the knight's obsequious 'squire,
Consumed at heart, and fed a secret fire.
His lovely mistress all his soul possess'd ;
He look'd, he languish'd, and could take no rest
His task perform'd, he sadly went his way,
Fell on his bed, and loathed the light of day.
There let him lie, till his relenting dame
Weep in her turn, and waste in equal flame.

The wearied sun, as learned poets write,
Forsook the horizon, and roll'd down the light ;
While glittering stars his absent beams supply,
And night's dark mantle overspread the sky.
Then rose the guests : and, as the time required,
Each paid his thanks, and decently retired.

The foe once gone, our knight prepared to undress,
So keen he was, and eager to possess :
But first thought fit the assistance to receive,
Which grave physicians scruple not to give :
Satyrion near, with hot eringos stood,
Cantharides, to fire the lazy blood,
Whose use old bards describe in luscious rhymes,
And critics learn'd explain to modern times.
By this the sheets were spread, the bride undress'd,
The room was sprinkled, and the bed was bless'd.

What next ensued beseems not me to say ;
 'Tis sung, he labour'd till the dawning day,
 Then briskly sprung from bed, with heart so light,
 As all were nothing he had done by night ;
 And sipp'd his cordial as he sat upright.
 He kiss'd his balmy spouse with wanton play,
 And feebly sung a lusty roundelay :
 Then on the couch his weary limbs he cast :
 For every labour must have rest at last.

But anxious cares the pensive 'squire oppress'd,
 Sleep fled his eyes, and peace forsook his breast .
 The raging flames that in his bosom dwell,
 He wanted art to hide, and means to tell ;
 Yet hoping time the occasion might betray,
 Composed a sonnet to the lovely May ;
 Which, writ and folded with the nicest art,
 He wrapp'd in silk, and laid upon his heart.

When now the fourth revolving day was run,
 ('Twas June, and Cancer had received the sun,)
 Forth from her chamber came the beauteous bride
 The good old knight moved slowly by her side.
 High mass was sung ; they feasted in the hall ;
 The servants round stood ready at their call .
 The 'squire alone was absent from the board,
 And much his sickness grieved his worthy lord,
 Who pray'd his spouse, attended with her train,
 To visit Dauidian, and divert his pain .
 The obliging dames obey'd with one consent ;
 They left the hall, and to his lodging went .
 The female tribe surround him as he lay,
 And close beside him sate the gentle May :
 Where, as she tried his pulse, he softly drew
 A heaving sigh, and cast a mournful view !
 Then gave his bill, and bribed the powers divine
 With secret vows, to favour his design .

Who studies now but discontented May ?
 On her soft couch uneasily she lay ;
 The lumpish husband snored away the night,
 Till coughs awak'd him near the morning light

What then he did, I'll not presume to tell,
Nor if she thought herself in heaven or hell ;
Honest and dull in nuptial bed they lay,
Till the bell toll'd, and all arose to pray.

Were it by forceful destiny decreed,
Or did from chance, or nature's power proceed ;
Or that some star, with aspect kind to love,
Shed its selectest influence from above ;
Whatever was the cause, the tender dame
Felt the first motions of an infant flame ;
Received the impressions of the love-sick 'squire,
And wastèd in the soft infectious fire.

Ye fair, draw near, let May's example move
Your gentle minds to pity those who love !
Had some fierce tyrant, in her stead been found,
The poor adorer sure had hang'd or drown'd :
But she, your sex's mirror, free from pride,
Was much too meek to prove a homicide.

But to my tale : Some sages have defined,
Pleasure the sovereign bliss of human-kind :
Our knight (who studied much, we may suppose,
Derived his high philosophy from those !
For, like a prince, he bore the vast expense
Of lavish pomp, and proud magnificence :
His house was stately, his retinue gay ;
Large was his train, and gorgeous his array.
His spacious garden, made to yield to none,
Was compass'd round with walls of solid stone ;
Priapus could not half describe the grace
(Though god of gardens) of this charming place
A place to tire the rambling wits of France
In long descriptions, and exceed romance ;
Enough to shame the gentlest bard that sings
Of painted meadows, and of purling springs.

Full in the centre of the flowery ground,
A crystal fountain spread its streams around
The fruitful banks with verdant laurels crown'd ;
About this spring (if ancient fame say true)
The dapper elves their moon-light sports pursue ;

Their pigmy king, and little fairy queen,
 In circling dances gambol'd on the green,
 While tuneful sprites a merry concert made,
 And airy music warbled through the shade.

Hither the noble knight would oft repair
 (His scene of pleasure, and peculiar care.)
 For this he held it dear, and always bore
 The silver key that lock'd the garden door.
 To this sweet place, in summer's sultry heat,
 He used from noise and business to retreat ;
 And here in dalliance spend the live-long day
Solus cum sola, with his sprightly May :
 For whate'er work was undischarged a-bed,
 The duteous knight in this fair garden sped.

But ah ! what mortal lives of bliss secure ?
 How short a space our worldly joys endure !
 O Fortune, fair, like all thy treacherous kind,
 But faithless still, and wavering as the wind !
 O painted monster, form'd mankind to cheat
 With pleasing poison, and with soft deceit !
 This rich, this amorous, venerable knight,
 Amidst his ease, his solace, and delight,
 Struck blind by thee, resigns his days to grief,
 And calls on death, the wretch's last relief.

The rage of jealousy then seized his mind,
 For much he fear'd the faith of womankind.
 His wife, not suffered from his side to stray,
 Was captive kept ; he watch'd her night and day
 Abridged her pleasures, and confin'd her sway.
 Full oft in tears did hapless May complain,
 And sigh'd full oft ; but sigh'd and wept in vain :
 She look'd on Damian with a lover's eye ;
 For, oh ! 'twas fix'd, she must possess or die !
 Nor less impatience vex'd her amorous 'squire,
 Wild with delay, and burning with desire.
 Watch'd as she was, yet could he not refrain
 By secret writing to disclose his pain :
 The dame by sighs reveal'd her kind intent,
 Till both were conscious what each other meant.

Ah! gentle knight, what could thy eyes avail,
 Though they could see as far as ships can sail?
 'Tis better, sure, when blind, deceiv'd to be,
 Than be deluded when a man can see!

Argus himself, so cautious and so wise,
 Was over-watch'd, for all his hundred eyes:
 So many an honest husband may, 'tis known,
 Who, wisely, never thinks the case his own.

The dame at last, by diligence and care,
 Procured the key her knight was wont to bear:
 She took the wards in wax before the fire,
 And gave the impression to the trusty 'squire.
 By means of this, some wonder shall appear,
 Which, in due place and season, you may hear.

Well sung sweet Ovid, in the days of yore,
 What slight is that which love will not explore?
 And Pyramus and Thisbe plainly show
 The feats true lovers, when they list, can do:
 Though watch'd and captive, yet in spite of all,
 They found the art of kissing through a wall.

But now no longer from our tale to stray:
 It happ'd, that once upon a summer's day,
 Our reverend knight was urged to amorous play.
 He raised his spouse ere matin bell was rung,
 And thus his morning canticle he sung;
 'Awake, my love, disclose thy radiant eyes:
 Arise, my wife, my beauteous lady, rise!
 Hear how the doves with pensive notes complain,
 And in soft murmurs tell the trees their pain;
 The winter's past; the clouds and tempests fly;
 The sun adorns the fields, and brightens all the sky.

Fair without spot, whose every charming part
 My bosom wounds, and captivates my heart;
 Come, and in mutual pleasures let's engage,
 Joy of my life, and comfort of my age.'

This heard, to Damian straight a sign she made,
 To haste before; the gentle 'squire obey'd:

Secret and undescried, he took his way,
And ambush'd close behind an arbour lay.

It was not long ere January came,
And hand in hand with him his lovely dame ;
Blind as he was, not doubting all was sure,
He turn'd the key, and made the gate secure.

'Here let us walk,' he said, 'observed by none
Conscious of pleasures to the world unknown ;
So may my soul have joy, as thou, my wife,
Art far the dearest solace of my life ;
And rather would I choose, by Heaven above,
To die this instant, than to lose thy love.
Reflect what truth was in my passion shown,
When unendow'd I took thee for my own,
And sought no treasure but thy heart alone.
Old as I am, and now deprived of sight,
Whilst thou art faithful to thy own true knight,
Nor age nor blindness rob me of delight.
Each other loss with patience I can bear :
The loss of thee is what I only fear.

'Consider then, my lady, and my wife,
The solid comforts of a virtuous life.
As, first, the love of Christ himself you gain ,
Next, your own honour undefiled maintain ;
And lastly, that which sure your mind must move,
My whole estate shall gratify your love :
Make your own terms, and ere to-morrow's sun
Displays his light, by Heaven, it shall be done.
I seal the contract with a holy kiss,
And will perform, by this—my dear, and this—
Have comfort, spouse, nor think thy lord unkind ;
'Tis love, not jealousy, that fires my mind.
For when thy charms my sober thoughts engage,
And join'd to them my own unequal age,
From thy dear side I have no power to part,
Such secret transports warm my melting heart.
For who, that once possess'd those heavenly charms,
Could live one moment absent from thy arms ?'

He ceas'd, and May with modest grace replied, (Weak was her voice, as while she spoke she cried,
Heaven knows,' with that a tender sigh she drew,
I have a soul to save as well as you ;

And, what no less you to my charge commend,
My dearest honour, will to death defend.
To you in holy church I gave my hand,
And joined my heart in wedlock's sacred band :
Yet, after this, if you distrust my care,
Then hear, my lord, and witness what I swear :

' First may the yawning earth her bosom rend,
And let me hence to hell alive descend ;
Or die the death I dread no less than hell,
Sew'd in a sack, and plung'd into a well,
Ere I my fame by one lewd act disgrace,
Or once renounce the honour of my race :
For know, sir knight, of gentle blood I came ;
I loath a whore, and startle at the name.
But jealous men on their own crimes reflect,
And learn from hence their ladies to suspect .
Else why these needless cautions, sir, to me ?
These doubts and fears of female constancy ?
This chime still rings in every lady's ear,
The only strain a wife must hope to hear.'

Thus while she spoke a sidelong glance she cast,
Where Damian, kneeling, worshipp'd as she pass'd
She saw him watch the motions of her eye,
And singled out a pear-tree planted nigh :
'Twas charged with fruit that made a goodly show,
And hung with dangling pears was every bough.
Thither the obsequious 'squire address'd his pace,
And, climbing, in the summit took his place ;
The knight and lady walk'd beneath in view,
Where let us leave them, and our tale pursue.

'Twas now the season when the glorious sun
His heavenly progress through the Twins had run .
And Jove, exalted, his mild influence yields,
To glad the glebe, and paint the flowery fields.

Clear was the day, and Phœbus, rising bright,
 Had streak'd the azure firmament with light :
 He pierced the glittering clouds with golden streams
 And warm'd the womb of earth with genial beams

It so befell, in that fair morning-tide,
 The fairies sported on the garden-side,
 And in the midst their monarch and his bride.
 So featly tripp'd the light-foot ladies round,
 The knights so nimbly o'er the greensward bound,
 That scarce they bent the flowers, or touch'd the ground.

The dances ended, all the fairy train
 For pinks and daisies search'd the flowery plain ;
 While, on a bank reclined of rising green,
 Thus, with a frown, the king bespoke his queen :

'Tis too apparent, argue what you can,
 The treachery you women use to man :
 A thousand authors have this truth made out,
 And sad experience leaves no room for doubt.

'Heaven rest thy spirit, noble Solomon,
 A wiser monarch never saw the sun ;
 All wealth, all honours, the supreme degree
 Of earthly bliss, was well bestow'd on thee !
 For sagely hast thou said : " Of all mankind,
 One only just and righteous hope to find :
 But shouldst thou search the spacious world around,
 Yet one good woman is not to be found."

'Thus says the king who knew your wicked ness :

The son of Sirach testifies no less.
 So may some wildfire on your bodies fall,
 Or some devouring plague consume you all ;
 As well you view the lecher in the tree,
 And well this honourable knight you see :
 But since he's blind and old (a helpless case,)
 His squire shall enfold him before your face.

'Now, by my own dread majesty I swear,
 And by this awful sceptre which I bear,

No impious wretch shall 'scape unpunish'd long.
That in my presence offers such a wrong.
I will this instant undeceive the knight,
And in the very act restore his sight ;
And set the strumpet here in open view,
A warning to these ladies, and to you,
And all the faithless sex, for ever to be true.'

'And will you so,' replied the queen, 'indeed ?
Now, by mother's soul, it is decreed,
She shall not want an answer at her need.
For her, and for her daughters, I'll engage,
And all the sex in each succeeding age !
Art shall be theirs, to varnish an offence,
And fortify their crime with confidence.
Nay, were they taken in a strict embrace,
Seen with both eyes, and pinion'd on the place ;
All they shall need is to protest and swear,
Breathe a soft sigh, and drop a tender tear ;
Till their wise husbands, gull'd by arts like these,
Grow gentle, tractable, and tame as geese.

'What though this slanderous Jew, this Solomon,
Call'd women fools, and knew full many a one ;
The wiser wits of later times declare,
How constant, chaste, and virtuous, women are.
Witness the martyrs, who resign'd their breath,
Serene in torments, unconcern'd in death,
And witness next what Roman authors tell,
How Arria, Portia, and Lucretia fell.

'But, since the sacred leaves to all are free,
And men interpret texts, why should not we ?
By this no more was meant, than to have shown,
That sovereign goodness dwells in him alone
Who only is, and is but only One.
But grant the worst ; shall women then be weigh'd
By every word that Solomon has said ?
What though this king (as ancient story boasts)
Built a fair temple to the Lord of Hosts ;
He ceased at last his Maker to adore,
And did as much for idol-gods, or more.

Beware what lavish praises you confer
 On a rank lecher and idolater ;
 Whose reign, indulgent God, says holy writ,
 Did but for David's righteous sake permit ;
 David, the monarch after Heaven's own mind,
 Who loved our sex, and honour'd all our kind.
 ' Well, I'm a woman, and as such must speak ;
 Silence would swell me, and my heart would break
 Know then, I scorn your dull authorities,
 Your idle wits, and all their learned lies.
 By Heaven, those authors are our sex's foes,
 Whom, in our right, I must and will oppose.'

' Nay,' quoth the king, ' dear madam, be not wroth
 I yield it up ; but since I gave my oath,
 That this much-injured knight again should see,
 It must be done—I am a king,' said he,
 ' And one, whose faith has ever sacred been.'
 ' And so has mine,' said she,—' I am a queen ;
 Her answer she shall have, I undertake ;
 And thus an end of all dispute I make.
 Try when you list ; and you shall find, my lord.
 It is not in our sex to break our word.'

We leave them here in this heroic strain,
 And to the knight our story turns again ;
 Who in the garden, with his lovely May,
 Sung merrier than the cuckow or the jay :
 This was his song ; ' Oh, kind and constant be,
 Constant and kind I'll ever prove to thee.'

Thus singing as he went, at last he drew
 By easy steps, to where the pear-tree grew :
 The longing dame look'd up, and spied her love
 Full fairly perch'd among the boughs above.
 She stopp'd and sighing : ' Oh, good gods !' she cried,

What pangs, what sudden shoots, distend my side !
 O for that tempting fruit, so fresh, so green :
 Help, for the love of heaven's immortal queen !
 Help, dearest lord, and save at once the life
 Of thy poor infant, and thy longing wife !'

Sore sigh'd the knight to hear his lady's cry,
 But could not climb, and had no servant nigh :
 Old as he was, and void of eye-sight too,
 What could, alas ! a helpless husband do ?
 And must I languish then,' she said, 'and die,
 Yet view the lovely fruit before my eye ?
 At least, kind sir, for charity's sweet sake,
 Vouchsafe the trunk between your arms to take,
 Then from your back I might ascend the tree ;
 Do you but stoop, and leave the rest to me.'

'With all my soul,' he thus replied again :
 'I'd spend my dearest blood to ease thy pain.'
 With that, his back against the trunk he bent,
 She seized a twig, and up the tree she went.

Now prove your patience, gentle ladies all !
 Nor let on me your heavy anger fall :
 'Tis truth I tell, though not in phrase refined ;
 Though blunt my tale, yet honest is my mind.
 What feats the lady in the tree might do,
 I pass, as gambols never known to you ;
 But sure it was a merrier fit, she swore,
 Than in her life she ever felt before.

In that nice moment, lo ! the wondering knight
 Look'd out, and stood restored to sudden sight.
 Straight on the tree his eager eyes he bent,
 As one whose thoughts were on his spouse intent ;
 But when he saw his bosom-wife so dress'd,
 His rage was such as cannot be express'd :
 Not frantic mothers, when their infants die,
 With louder clamours rend the vaulted sky :
 He cried, he roar'd, he storm'd, he tore his hair :
 Death ! hell ! and furies ! what dost thou do there ?

'What ails my lord ?' the trembling dame replied
 I thought your patience had been better tried .
 Is this your love, ungrateful and unkind,
 This my reward for having cured the blind ?
 Why was I taught to make my husband see,
 By struggling with a man upon a tree ?

Did I for this the power of magic prove ?
 Unhappy wife, whose crime was too much love !
 'If this be struggling, by his holy light,
 'Tis struggling with a vengeance,' quoth the knight
 So Heaven preserve the sight it has restored,
 As with these eyes I plainly saw thee whored ;
 Whored by my slave—perfidious wretch ! may hell
 As surely seize thee, as I saw too well !
 'Guard me, good angels !' cried the gentle May,
 'Pray Heaven, this magic work the proper way !
 Alas, my love ! 'tis certain, could you see,
 You ne'er had used these killing words to me :
 So help me, Fates, as 'tis no perfect sight,
 But some faint glimmering of a doubtful light.'
 'What I have said,' quoth he, 'I must maintain,
 For by the immortal powers it seem'd too plain.'—
 'By all those powers, some frenzy seized your mind,
 Replied the dame : 'are these the thanks I find ?
 Wretch that I am, that e'er I was so kind,'
 She said : a rising sigh express'd her woe,
 The ready tears apace began to flow,
 And, as they fell, she wiped from either eye,
 The drops ; (for women, when they list, can cry.)
 The knight was touch'd, and in his looks appear'd
 Signs of remorse, while thus his spouse he cheer'd :
 'Madam, 'tis pass'd, and my short anger o'er ;
 Come down, and vex your tender heart no more :
 Excuse me, dear, if aught amiss was said,
 For, on my soul, amends shall soon be made :
 Let my repentance your forgiveness draw.
 By Heaven, I swore but what I thought I saw.'
 'Ah, my loved lord ! 'twas much unkind,' she cried.
 'On bare suspicion thus to treat your bride.
 But, till your sight 's establish'd, for a while,
 Imperfect objects may your sense beguile.
 Thus when from sleep we first our eyes display,
 The balls are wounded with the piercing ray,
 And dusky vapours rise, and intercept the day.

So, just recovering from the shades of night,
 Your swimming eyes are drunk with sudden light,
 Strange phantoms dance around, and skim before your sight :

Then, sir, be cautious, nor too rashly deem.
 Heaven knows how seldom things are what they seem!
 Consult your reason, and you soon shall find
 'Twas you were jealous, not your wife unkind :
 Jove ne'er spoke oracle more true than this,
 None judge so wrong as those who think amiss.'

With that she leap'd into her lord's embrace,
 With well-dissembled virtue in her face.
 He hugg'd her close, and kiss'd her o'er and o'er,
 Disturb'd with doubts and jealousies no more :
 Both, pleased and bless'd, renew'd their mutual vows,
 A fruitful wife, and a believing spouse.

Thus ends our tale ; whose moral next to make,
 Let all wise husbands hence example take :
 And pray, to crown the pleasure of their lives,
 To be so well deluded by their wives.

THE WIFE OF BATH.

HER PROLOGUE.

FROM CHAUCER.

---

BEHOLD the woes of matrimonial life,
 And hear with reverence an experienced wife.
 To dear-bought wisdom give the credit due,
 And think for once a woman tells you true.
 In all these trials I have borne a part,
 I was myself the scourge that caused the smart ;
 For, since fifteen, in triumph have I led
 Five captive husbands from the church to bed.

Christ saw a wedding once, the Scripture says,
 And saw but one, 'tis thought, in all his days :

Whence some infer, whose conscience is too nice,
No pious Christian ought to marry twice.

But let them read, and solve me, if they can,
The words address'd to the Samaritan:
Five times in lawful wedlock she was join'd;
And sure the certain stint was ne'er defined.

'Increase and multiply,' was Heaven's command,
And that's a text I clearly understand.

This too, 'Let men their sires and mothers leave,
And to their dearer wives for ever cleave.'

More wives than one by Solomon were tried,
Or else the wisest of mankind's belied.

I've had myself full many a merry fit,
And trust in heaven, I may have many yet;
For when my transitory spouse, unkind,
Shall die, and leave his woful wife behind,
I'll take the next good Christian I can find.

Paul, knowing one could never serve our turn
Declared 'twas better far to wed than burn.

There's danger in assembling fire and tow;
I grant them that, and what it means you know.

The same apostle too has elsewhere own'd,
No precept for virginity he found:

'Tis but a counsel—and we women still

Take which we like, the counsel, or our will.

I envy not their bliss, if he or she

Think fit to live in perfect chastity.

Pure let them be, and free from taint of vice;

I, for a few slight spots, am not so nice.

Heaven calls us different ways, on these bestows

One proper gift, another grants to those:

Not every man's obliged to sell his store,

And give up all his substance to the poor;

Such as are perfect may, I can't deny;

But, by your leaves, divines, so am not I.

Full many a saint, since first the world began,

Lived an unspotted maid, in spite of man:

Let such (a God's name) with fine wheat be fed,

And let us honest wives eat barley bread.

For me, I'll keep the post assign'd by Heaven,
And use the copious talent it has given :
Let my good spouse pay tribute, do me right,
And keep an equal reckoning every night.
His proper body is not his, but mine ;
For so said Paul, and Paul's a sound'divine.

Know then, of those five husbands I have had,
Three were just tolerable, two were bad :
The three were old, but rich and fond beside,
And toil'd most piteously to please their bride :
But since their wealth (the best they had) was mine,
The rest, without much loss, I could resign.
Sure to be loved, I took no pains to please,
Yet had more pleasure far than they had ease.

Presents flow'd in apace : with showers of gold,
They made their court, like Jupiter of old.
If I but smiled, a sudden youth they found,
And a new palsy seized them when I frown'd.

Ye sovereign wives ! give ear and understand,
Thus shall ye speak, and exercise command.
For never was it given to mortal man,
To lie so boldly as we women can ;
Forswear the fact, though seen with both his eyes,
And call your maids to witness how he lies.

'Hark, old sir Paul !' 'twas thus I used to say,
'Whence is our neighbour's wife so rich and gay ?
Treated, caress'd where'er she's pleased to roam—
I sit in tatters, and immured at home.

Why to her house dost thou so oft repair ?
Art thou so amorous ? and is she so fair ?
If I but see a cousin or a friend,
Lord ! how you swell, and rage like any fiend !
But you reel home, a drunken beastly bear,
Then preach till midnight in your easy chair ;
Cry, wives are false, and every woman evil,
And give up all that's female to the devil.

'If poor (you say) she drains her husband's purse
If rich, she keeps her priest, or something worse ;

If highly born, intolerably vain,
 Vapours and pride by turns possess her brain,
 Now gaily mad, now sourly splenetic;
 Freakish when well, and fretful when she's sick.
 If fair, then chaste she cannot long abide,
 By pressing youth attack'd on every side;
 If foul, her wealth the lusty lover lures,
 Or else her wit some fool-gallant procures,
 Or else she dances with becoming grace,
 Or shape excuses the defects of face.
 There swims no goose so gray, but, soon or late,
 She finds some honest gander for her mate.
 'Horses (thou say'st) and asses men may try,
 And ring suspected vessels ere they buy:
 But wives, a random choice, untried they take,
 They dream in courtship, but in wedlock wake:
 Then, nor till then, the veil's removed away,
 And all the woman glares in open day.
 'You tell me, to preserve your wife's good grace
 Your eyes must always languish on my face,
 Your tongue with constant flatteries feed my ear,
 And tag each sentence with, My life! My dear!
 If by strange chance, a modest blush be raised,
 Be sure my fine complexion must be praised.
 My garments always must be new and gay,
 And feasts still kept upon my wedding-day.
 Then must my nurse be pleased, and favourite maid,
 And endless treats, and endless visits paid,
 'To a long train of kindred friends, allies.
 All this thou say'st, and all thou say'st are lies.
 'On Jenkin too you cast a squinting eye;
 What! can your 'prentice raise your jealousy?
 Fresh are his ruddy cheeks, his forehead fair,
 And like the burnish'd gold his curling hair.
 But clear thy wrinkled brow, and quit thy sorrow,
 I'd scorn your 'prentice, should you die to-morrow
 'Why are thy chests all lock'd? on what design?
 Are not thy worldly goods and treasure mine?

Sir, I'm no fool; nor shall you, by St. John,
Have goods and body to yourself alone.
One you shall quit, in spite of both your eyes—
I heed, not I, the bolts, the locks, the spies.
If you had wit, you'd say, 'Go where you will:
Dear spouse, I credit not the tales they tell:
Take all the freedoms of a married life;
I know thee for a virtuous, faithful wife.'

'Lord! when you have enough, what need you care
How merrily soever others fare?
Though all the day I give and take delight,
Doubt not, sufficient will be left at night.
'Tis but a just and rational desire,
To light a taper at a neighbour's fire.

'There's danger too, you think, in rich array,
And none can long be modest that are gay:
The cat, if you but singe her tabby skin,
The chimney keeps, and sits content within;
But once grown sleek, will from her corner run,
Sport with her tail, and wanton in the sun;
She licks her fair round face, and frisks abroad,
To show her fur, and to be catterwaw'd.'

Lo thus, my friends, I wrought to my desires
These three right ancient venerable sires.
I told them, thus you say, and thus you do,
And told them false, but Jenkin swore 'twas true.
I, like a dog, could bite as well as whine,
And first complain'd, whene'er the guilt was mine.
I tax'd them oft with wenching and amours,
When their weak legs scarce dragg'd them out of doors
And swore the rambles that I took by night,
Were all to spy what damsels they bedight.
That colour brought me many hours of mirth;
For all this wit is given us from our birth.
Heaven gave to women the peculiar grace,
To spin, to weep, and cully human race.
By this nice conduct, and this prudent course,
By murmuring, wheedling, stratagem, and force,

I still prevail'd, and would be in the right,
 Or curtain-lectures made a restless night.
 If once my husband's arm was o'er my side,
 'What! so familiar with your spouse?' I cried:
 I levied first a tax upon his need;
 Then let him—'twas a nicety indeed!
 Let all mankind this certain maxim hold,
 Marry who will, our sex is to be sold.
 With empty hands no tassels you can lure,
 But fulsome love for gain we can endure:
 For gold we love the impotent and old,
 And heave, and pant, and kiss, and cling, for gold.
 Yet with embraces, curses oft I mix'd,
 Then kiss'd again, and chid, and rail'd betwixt.
 Well, I may make my will in peace, and die,
 For not one word in man's arrears am I.
 To drop a dear dispute I was unable,
 E'en though the Pope himself had sat at table.
 But when my point was gain'd, then thus I spoke:
 'Billy, my dear, how sheepishly you look!
 Approach, my spouse, and let me kiss thy cheek,
 Thou shouldst be always thus, resign'd and meek!
 Of Job's great patience since so oft you preach,
 Well should you practice, who so well can teach.
 'Tis difficult to do, I must allow,
 But I, my dearest, will instruct you how.
 Great is the blessing of a prudent wife,
 Who puts a period to domestic strife.
 One of us two must rule, and one obey,
 And since in man right reason bears the sway,
 Let that frail thing, weak woman, have her way.
 The wives of all my family have ruled
 Their tender husbands, and their passions cool'd,
 Fie, 'tis unmanly thus to sigh and groan:
 What! would you have me to yourself alone?
 Why take me, love! take all and every part!
 Here's your revenge! you love it at your heart.
 Would I vouchsafe to sell what nature gave,
 You little think what custom I could have.

But see! I'm all your own—nay hold—for shame!
What means my dear—indeed—you are to blame.'

Thus with my first three lords I pass'd my life,
A very woman and a very wife.
What sums from these old spouses I could raise,
Procured young husbands in my riper days.
Though past my bloom, not yet decay'd was I,
Wanton and wild, and chatter'd like a pie.
In country dances still I bore the bell,
And sung as sweet as evening Philomel.
To clear my quailpipe, and refresh my soul,
Full oft I drain'd the spicy nut-brown bowl;
Rich luscious wines, that youthful blood improve,
And warm the swelling veins to feats of love:
For 'tis as sure, as cold engenders hail,
A liquorish mouth must have a lecherous tail:
Wine lets no lover unrewarded go,
As all true gamesters by experience know.
But oh, good gods! whene'er a thought I cast
On all the joys of youth and beauty pass'd,
To find in pleasures I have had my part,
Still warms me to the bottom of my heart.
This wicked world was once my dear delight;
Now, all my conquests, all my charms, good night!
The flour consumed, the best that now I can,
Is e'en to make my market of the bran.

My fourth dear spouse was not exceeding true;
He kept, 'twas thought, a private miss or two;
But all that score I paid—as how? you'll say,
Not with my body in a filthy way:
But I so dress'd, and danced, and drank, and dined,
And view'd a friend with eyes so very kind,
As stung his heart, and made his marrow fry
With burning rage, and frantic jealousy.
His soul, I hope, enjoys eternal glory,
For here on earth I was his purgatory.
Oft, when his shoe the most severely wrung,
He put on careless airs, and sate and sung.

How sore I gall'd him, only Heaven could know
 And he that felt, and ~~Let~~ that caused the woe.
 He died, when last from pilgrimage I came,
 With other gossips, from Jerusalem;
 And now lies buried underneath a rood,
 Fair to be seen, and rear'd of honest wood:
 A tomb indeed, with fewer sculptures graced
 Than that Mausolus' pious widow placed,
 Or where inshrined the great Darius lay;
 But cost on graves is merely thrown away.
 The pit fill'd up, with turf we cover'd o'er;
 So bless the good man's soul, I'll say no more.

Now for my fifth loved lord, the last and best,
 (Kind Heaven afford him everlasting rest!)
 Full hearty was his love, and I can show
 The tokens on my ribs in black and blue;
 Yet, with a knack, my heart he could have won,
 While yet the smart was shooting in the bone.
 How quaint an appetite in women reigns!
 Free gifts we scorn, and love what costs us pains
 Let men avoid us, and on them we leap;
 A glutted market makes provision cheap.

In pure good-will I took this jovial spark,
 Of Oxford he, a most egregious clerk.
 He boarded with a widow in the town,
 A trusty gossip, one dame Alison.
 Full well the secrets of my soul she knew,
 Better than e'er our parish priest could do.
 To her I told whatever could befall:
 Had but my husband piss'd against the wall,
 Or done a thing that might have cost his life,
 She—and my niece—and one more worthy wife,
 Had known it all: what most he would conceal,
 To these I made no scruple to reveal.
 Oft has he blush'd from ear to ear for shame,
 That e'er he told a secret to his dame.

It so befell, in holy time of Lent,
 That oft a day I to this gossip wen.

(My husband, thank my stars, was out of town ;)
From house to house we rambled up and down,
This clerk, myself, and my good neighbour Alse,
To see, be seen, to tell and gather tales.
Visits to every church we daily paid,
And march'd in every holy masquerade,
The stations duly and the vigils kept ;
Not much we fasted, but scarce ever slept.
At sermons too I shone in scarlet gay ;
The wasting moth ne'er spoil'd my best array ;
The cause was this, I wore it every day.
'Twas when fresh May her early blossoms yields,
This clerk and I were walking in the fields,
We grew so intimate, I can't tell how,
I pawn'd my honour, and engaged my vow,
If e'er I laid my husband in his urn,
That he, and only he, should serve my turn.
We straight struck hands, the bargain was agreed ;
I still have shifts against a time of need :
The mouse that always trusts to one poor hole,
Can never be a mouse of any soul.

I vow'd I scarce could sleep since first I knew him,
And durst be sworn he had bewitch'd me to him ;
If e'er I slept, I dream'd of him alone,
And dreams foretell, as learned men have shown ;
All this I said ; but dreams, sirs, I had none :
I follow'd but my crafty crony's lore,
Who bid me tell this lie—and twenty more.

Thus day by day, and month by month we pass'd,
It pleased the Lord to take my spouse at last.
I tore my gown, I soil'd my locks with dust,
And beat my breast as wretched widows—must
Before my face my handkerchief I spread,
To hide the flood of tears I did—not shed.
The good man's coffin to the church was borne :
Around, the neighbours, and my clerk too, mourn.
But as he march'd, good gods ! he show'd a pair
Of legs and feet, so clean, so strong, so fair !

Of twenty winters' age he seem'd to be,
 I (to say truth) was twenty more than he :
 But vigorous still, a lively buxom dame ;
 And had a wondrous gift to quench a flame.
 A conjuror once, that deeply could divine,
 Assured me, Mars in 'Taurus was my sign.
 As the stars order'd, such my life has been :
 Alas, alas, that ever love was sin !
 Fair Venus gave me fire and sprightly grace,
 And Mars assurance and a dauntless face.
 By virtue of this powerful constellation,
 I follow'd always my own inclination.

But to my tale : A month scarce pass'd away,
 With dance and song we kept the nuptial day ;
 All I possess'd I gave to his command,
 My goods and chattels, money, house, and land •
 But oft repented, and repent it still :
 He proved a rebel to my sovereign will :
 Nay once, by Heaven, he struck me on the face,
 Hear but the fact, and judge yourselves the case.

Stubborn as any lioness was I,
 And knew full well to raise my voice on high ;
 As true a rambler as I was before,
 And would be so, in spite of all he swore.
 He against this right sagely would advise,
 And old examples set before my eyes :
 'Tell how the Roman matrons led their life,
 Of Gracchus' mother, and Dullius' wife ;
 And close the sermon, as beseein'd his wit,
 With some grave sentence out of holy writ.
 Oft would he say, ' Who builds his house on sands,
 Pricks his blind horse across the fallow lands ;
 Or lets his wife abroad with pilgrims roam,
 Deserves a fool's-cap, and long ears at home.'
 All this avail'd not ; for whoe'er he be
 That tells my faults, I hate him mortally :
 And so do numbers more, I boldly say,
 Men, women, clergy, regular and lay.

My spouse (who was, you know, to learning bred)
A certain treatise oft at evening read,
Where divers authors (whom the devil confound
For all their lies!) were in one volume bound.
Valerius, whole; and of St. Jerome, part;
Chrysippus and Tertullian, Ovid's Art,
Solomon's Proverbs, Eloisa's loves;
And many more than sure the church approves.
More legions were there here of wicked wives,
Than good in all the Bible and saints' lives.
Who drew the lion vanquish'd? 'twas a man.
But could we women write as scholars can,
Men should stand mark'd with far more wickedness
Than all the sons of Adam could redress.
Love seldom haunts the breast where learning lies,
And Venus sets ere Mercury can rise.
Those play the scholars, who can't play the men,
And use that weapon which they have, their pen;
When old, and past the relish of delight,
Then down they sit, and in their dotage write,
That not one woman keeps her marriage vow.
(This by the way; but to my purpose now.)
It chanced my husband on a winter's night,
Read in this book, aloud, with strange delight,
How the first female (as the Scriptures show)
Brought her own spouse and all his race to woe.
How Samson fell; and he whom Dejanire
Wrapp'd in the envenom'd shirt, and set on fire.
How cursed Eriphyle her lord betray'd,
And the dire ambush Clytemnestra laid.
But what most pleased him was the Cretan Dame,
And Husband bull—oh monstrous! fie, for shame!
He had by heart the whole detail of woe
Xantippe made her good man undergo;
How oft she scolded in a day he knew,
How many piss-pots on the sage she threw,
Who took it patiently and wiped his head;
Rain follows thunder,—that was all he said.

He read, how Arius to his friend complain'd,
 A fatal tree was growing in his land,
 On which three wives successively had twined
 A sliding noose, and waver'd in the wind.
 'Where grows this plant,' replied the friend, 'oh where?
 For better fruit did never orchard bear:
 Give me some slip of this most blissful tree,
 And in my garden planted shall it be.'

Then how two wives their lords' destruction prove,
 Through hatred one, and one through too much love:
 That for her husband mix'd a poisonous draught,
 And this for lust an amorous philtre bought:
 The nimble juice soon seized his giddy head,
 Frantic at night, and in the morning dead.
 How some with swords their sleeping lords have slain,

And some have hammer'd nails into their brain,
 And some have drench'd them with a deadly potion;
 All this he read, and read with great devotion.

Long time I heard, and swell'd, and blush'd, and frown'd:

But when no end to these vile tales I found,
 When still he read, and laugh'd, and read again,
 And half the night was thus consumed in vain;
 Provoked to vengeance, three large leaves I tore,
 And with one buffet fell'd him on the floor.
 With that my husband in a fury rose,
 And down he settled me with hearty blows.
 I groan'd, and lay extended on my side;
 'Oh! thou hast slain me for my wealth,' I cried.

Yet I forgive thee—take my last embrace—
 He wept, kind soul! and stoop'd to kiss my face:
 I took him such a box as turn'd him blue,
 Then sigh'd, and cried, 'Adieu, my dear, adieu!'

But after many a hearty struggle pass'd,
 I condescended to be pleased at last.
 Soon as he said, 'My mistress and my wife,
 Do what you list, the term of all your life;

I took to heart the merits of the cause,
And stood content to rule by wholesome laws ;
Received the reins of absolute command,
With all the government of house and land,
And empire o'er his tongue, and o'er his hand.
As for the volume that reviled the dames,
'Twas torn to fragments, and condemn'd to flames.
Now, Heaven, on all my husbands gone, bestow
Pleasures above for tortures felt below.
That rest they wish'd for, grant them in the grave,
And bless those souls my conduct help'd to save!

THE FIRST BOOK OF
STATIUS HIS THEBAIS.

Translated in the Year 1703.

ARGUMENT.

Œdipus, king of Thebes, having by mistake slain his father Laius, and married his mother Jocasta, put out his own eyes, and resigned the realm to his sons, Eteocles and Polynices. Being neglected by them, he makes his prayer to the fury Tisiphone, to sow debate betwixt the brothers. They agree at last to reign singly, each a year by turns, and the first lot is obtained by Eteocles. Jupiter, in a council of the gods, declares his resolution of punishing the Thebans, and Argives also, by means of a marriage between Polynices and one of the daughters of Adrastus, king of Argos. Juno opposes, but to no effect; and Mercury is sent on a message to the Shades, to the ghost of Laius, who is to appear to Eteocles, and provoke him to break the agreement. Polynices in the mean time departs from Thebes by night, is overtaken by a storm, and arrives at Argos; where he meets with Tydeus, who had fled from Calydon, having killed his brother. Adrastus entertains them, having received an oracle from Apollo that his daughter should be married to a boar and a lion, which he understands to be meant of these strangers, by whom the hides of those beasts were worn, and who arrived at the time when he kept an annual feast in honour of that god. The rise of this solemnity he relates to his guests, the loves of Phœbus and Psamathe, and the story of Chorcæbus. He inquires, and is made acquainted with their descent and quality. The sacrifice is renewed, and the book concludes with a hymn to Apollo.

The translator hopes he need not apologize for his choice of this piece, which was made almost in his childhood: but, finding the version better than he expected, he gave it some correction a few years afterwards.

STATIUS HIS THEBAIS.

FRATERNAL rage the guilty Thebes alarms,
 The alternate reign destroy'd by impious arms,
 Demand our song; a sacred fury fires
 My ravish'd breast, and all the muse inspires.
 O goddess! say, shall I deduce my rhymes
 From the dire nation in its early times,
 Europa's rape, Agenor's stern decree,
 And Cadmus searching round the spacious sea?
 How with the serpent's teeth he sowed the soil,
 And reap'd an iron harvest of his toil?
 Or how from joining stones the city sprung,
 While to his harp divine Amphion sung?
 Or shall I Juno's hate to Thebes resound,
 Whose fatal rage the unhappy monarch found?
 The sire against the son his arrows drew,
 O'er the wide fields the furious mother flew,
 And while her arms a second hope contain,
 Sprung from the rocks, and plunged into the main
 But wave whate'er to Cadmus may belong,
 And fix, O Muse! the barrier of thy song
 At Œdipus—from his disasters trace
 The long confusions of his guilty race:
 Nor yet attempt to stretch thy older wing,
 And mighty Cæsar's conquering eagles sing: ~

How twice he tamed proud Ister's rapid flood,
While Dacian mountains stream'd with barbarous blood :

Twice taught the Rhine beneath his laws to roll,
And stretch'd his empire to the frozen pole:
Or long before, with early valour, strove
In youthful arms to assert the cause of Jove.
And thou, great heir of all thy father's fame,
Increase of glory to the Latian name,
O bless thy Rome with an eternal reign,
Nor let desiring worlds entreat in vain!

What though the stars contract their heavenly space
And crowd their shining ranks to yield thee place;
Though all the skies, ambitious of thy sway,
Conspire to court thee from our world away;
Though Phœbus longs to mix his rays with thine,
And in thy glories more serenely shine;
Though Jove himself no less content would be
To part his throne, and share his heaven with thee;

Yet stay, great Cæsar! and vouchsafe to reign
O'er the wide earth, and o'er the watery main;
Resign to Jove his empire of the skies,
And people heaven with Roman deities.

The time will come, when a diviner flame
Shall warm my breast to sing of Cæsar's fame:
Meanwhile permit, that my preluding muse
In Theban wars a humbler theme may chuse:
Of furious hate, surviving death, she sings,
A fatal throne to two contending kings,
And funeral flames, that parting wide in air,
Express the discord of the souls they bear:
Of towns dispeopled, and the wandering ghosts
Of kings unburied in the wasted coasts;
When Dirce's fountain blush'd with Grecian blood,
And Thetis, near Ismenos' swelling flood,
With dread beheld the rolling surges sweep,
In heaps, her slaughter'd sons into the deep.

What hero, Clio! wilt thou first relate?
 The rage of Tydeus, or the prophet's fate?
 Or how, with hills of slain on every side,
 Hippomedon repell'd the hostile tide?
 Or how the youth, with every grace adorn'd,
 Untimely fell, to be for ever mourn'd?
 Then to fierce Capaneus thy verse extend,
 And sing with horror his prodigious end.

Now wretched Œdipus, deprived of sight,
 Led a long death in everlasting night;
 But while he dwells where not a cheerful ray
 Can pierce the darkness, and abhors the day;
 The clear reflecting mind presents his sin
 In frightful views, and makes it day within;
 Returning thoughts in endless circles roll,
 And thousand furies haunt his guilty soul;
 The wretch then lifted to the un pitying skies,
 Those empty orbs from whence he tore his eyes,
 Whose wounds, yet fresh, with bloody hand he strook
 While from his breast these dreadful accents broke:
 Ye gods! that o'er the gloomy regions reign,
 Where guilty spirits feel eternal pain;
 Thou, sable Styx! whose livid streams are roll'd
 Through dreary coasts, which I, though blind, behold
 Tisiphone, that oft hast heard my prayer,
 Assist, if Œdipus deserve thy care!
 If you received me from Jocasta's womb,
 And nursed the hope of mischiefs yet to come:
 If, leaving Polybus, I took my way
 To Cyrrha's temple, on that fatal day,
 When by the son the trembling father died,
 Where the three roads the Phocian fields divide:
 If I the Sphinx's riddles durst explain,
 Taught by thyself to win the promised reign;
 If wretched I, by baleful Furies led,
 With monstrous mixture stain'd my mother's bed,
 For hell and thee begot an impious brood,
 And with full lust those horrid joys renew'd;

Then self-condemn'd to shades of endless night
Forced from these orbs the bleeding balls of sight;
O hear, and aid the vengeance I require,
If worthy thee, and what thou might'st inspire;
My sons their old unhappy sire despise,
Spoil'd of his kingdom, and deprived of eyes;
Guideless I wander, unregarded mourn,
While these exalt their sceptres o'er my urn;
These sons, ye gods! who, with flagitious pride,
Insult my darkness, and my groans deride.
Art thou a father, unregarding Jove!
And sleeps thy thunder in the realms above?
Thou Fury, then, some lasting curse entail,
Which o'er their children's children shall prevail:
Place on their heads that crown distain'd with gore,
Which these dire hands from my slain father tore;
Go, and a parent's heavy curses bear;
Break all the bonds of nature, and prepare
Their kindred souls to mutual hate and war.
Give them to dare, what I might wish to see,
Blind as I am, some glorious villany!
Soon shalt thou find, if thou but arm their hands,
Their ready guilt preventing thy commands:
Couldst thou some great, proportion'd mischief frame,
They'd prove the father from whose loins they came.'

The Fury heard, while on Cocytus' brink
Her snakes, untied, sulphureous waters drink;
But at the summons roll'd her eyes around,
And snatch'd the starting serpents from the ground.
Not half so swiftly shoots along the air,
The gliding lightning, or descending star,
Through crowds of airy shades she wing'd her flight,
And dark dominions of the silent night;
Swift as she pass'd the flitting ghosts withdrew
And the pale spectres trembled at her view:
To the iron gates of Tænarus she flies,
There spreads her dusky pinions to the skies.

The day beheld, and, sickening at the sight,
 Veil'd her fair glories in the shades of night.
 Affrighted Atlas, on the distant shore,
 Trembled, and shook the heavens and gods he bore.

Now from beneath Malea's airy height
 Aloft she sprung, and steer'd to Thebes her flight.
 With eager speed the well-known journey took,
 Nor here regrets the hell she late forsook.
 A hundred snakes her gloomy visage shade,
 A hundred serpents guard her horrid head;
 In her sunk eye-balls dreadful meteors glow;
 Such rays from Phœbe's bloody circles flow,
 When labouring with strong charms, she shoots
 from high,

A fiery gleam, and reddens all the sky.
 Blood stain'd her cheeks, and from her mouth there came

Blue streaming poisons, and a length of flame.
 From every blast of her contagious breath,
 Famine and drought proceed, and plagues and death
 A robe obscene was o'er her shoulders thrown,
 A dress by Fates and Furies worn alone.
 She toss'd her meagre arms: her better hand
 In waving circles whirl'd a funeral brand:
 A serpent from her left was seen to rear
 His flaming crest, and lash the yielding air.

But when the Fury took her stand on high,
 Where vast Cithæron's top salutes the sky
 A hiss from all the snaky tire went round;
 The dreadful signal all the rocks rebound,
 And through the Achaian cities send the sound.
 Cete, with high Parnassus, heard the voice;
 Eurotus' banks remurmur'd to the noise;
 Again Leucothoe shook at these alarms,
 And press'd Palæmon closer in her arms.
 Headlong from thence the glowing Fury springs
 And o'er the Theban palace spreads her wings,

Once more invades the guilty dome, and shrouds
Its bright pavilions in a veil of clouds
Straight with the rage of all their race possess'd,
Stung to the soul, the brothers start from rest,
And all their furies wake within their breast.
Their tortured minds repining envy tears,
And hate engender'd by suspicious fears ;
And sacred thirst of sway ; and all the ties
Of nature broke ; and royal perjuries ;
And impotent desire to reign alone,
That scorns the dull reversion of a throne ;
Each would the sweets of sovereign rule devour,
While discord waits upon divided power.

As stubborn steers by brawny plowmen broke,
And join'd reluctant to the galling yoke,
Alike disdain with servile necks to bear.
The unwonted weight, or drag the crooked share,
But rend the reins, and bound a different way,
And all the furrows in confusion lay ;
Such was the discord of the royal pair,
Whom fury drove precipitate to war.
In vain the chiefs contrived a specious way,
To govern Thebes by their alternate sway :
Unjust decree ! while this enjoys the state,
That mourns in exile his unequal fate,
And the short monarch of a hasty year
Foresees with anguish his returning heir
Thus did the league their impious arms restrain,
But scarce subsisted to the second reign.

Yet then no proud aspiring piles were raised,
No fretted roof with polish'd metals blazed ;
No labour'd columns in long order placed,
No Grecian stone the pompous arches grae'd ;
No nightly bands in glittering armour wait
Before the sleepless tyrant's guarded gate ;
No chargers then were wrought in burnish'd gold,
Nor silver vases took the forming mould ;
Nor gems on bowls emboss'd were seen to shine
Blaze on the brims, and sparkle in the wine.—

Say, wretched rivals! what provokes your rage?
 Say, to what end your impious arms engage?
 Not all bright Phœbus views in early morn,
 Or when his evening beams the west adorn,
 When the south glows with his meridian ray,
 And the cold north receives a fainter day;
 For crimes like these, not all those realms suffice,
 Were all those realms the guilty victor's prize!

But Fortune now (the lots of empire thrown)
 Decrees to proud Eteocles the crown:
 What joys, oh tyrant! swell'd thy soul that day,
 When all were slaves thou couldst around survey,
 Pleased to behold unbounded power thy own,
 And singly fill a fear'd and envied throne!
 But the vile vulgar, ever discontent,
 Their growing fears in secret murmurs vent;
 Still prone to change, though still the slaves of state,
 And sure the monarch whom they have, to hate:
 New lords they madly make, then tamely bear,
 And softly curse the tyrants whom they fear.
 And one of those who groan beneath the sway
 Of kings imposed, and grudgingly obey,
 (Whom envy to the great, and vulgar spite
 With scandal arm'd, the ignoble mind's delight,
 Exclaim'd—' O Thebes! for thee what fates remain!
 What woes attend this inauspicious reign!
 Must we, alas! our doubtful necks prepare,
 Each haughty master's yoke by turns to bear,
 And still to change whom changed we still must fear?

These now control a wretched people's fate,
 These can divide, and these reverse the state:
 E'en fortune rules no more:—O servile land,
 Where exil'd tyrants still by turns command.
 Thou sire of gods and men, imperial Jove!
 Is this the eternal doom decreed above?
 On thy own offspring hast thou fix'd this fate,
 From the first birth of our unhappy state;

When banish'd Cadmus, wandering o'er the main,
 For lost Europa search'd the world in vain,
 And, fated in Bœotian fields to found
 A rising empire on a foreign ground,
 First raised our walls on that ill-omen'd plain,
 Where earth-born brothers were by brothers slain ?
 What lofty looks the unrivall'd monarch bears !
 How all the tyrant in his face appears !
 What sudden fury clouds his scornful brow !
 Gods ! how his eyes with threatening ardour glow !
 Can this imperious lord forget to reign,
 Quit all his state, descend, and serve again ?
 Yet who, before, more popularly bow'd ?
 Who more propitious to the suppliant crowd ?
 Patient of right, familiar in the throne ?
 What wonder then ? he was not then alone.
 O wretched we, a wild submissive train,
 Fortune's tame fools, and slaves in every reign !
 'As when two winds with rival force contend,
 This way and that, the wavering sails they bend,
 While freezing Boreas and black Eurus blow,
 Now here, now there, the reeling vessel throw :
 Thus on each side, alas ! our tottering state
 Feels all the fury of resistless fate ;
 And doubtful still, and still distracted stands,
 While that prince threatens, and while this commands.'

And now the almighty father of the god
 Convenes a council in the bless'd abodes :
 Far in the bright recesses of the skies,
 High o'er the rolling heavens, a mansion lies,
 Whence, far below, the gods at once survey
 The realms of rising and declining day,
 And all the extended space of earth, and air, and sea.
 Full in the midst, and on a starry throne,
 The majesty of heaven superior shone :
 Serene he look'd, and gave an awful nod,
 And all the trembling spheres confess'd the god.

At Jove's assent, the deities around
 In solemn state the consistory crown'd.
 Next a long order of inferior powers
 Ascend from hills, and plains, and shady bowers;
 Those from whose urns the rolling rivers flow;
 And those that give the wandering winds to blow;
 Here all their rage, and e'en their murmurs cease,
 And sacred silence reigns, and universal peace.
 A shining synod of majestic gods
 Gilds with new lustre the divine abodes;
 Heaven seems improved with a superior ray,
 And the bright arch reflects a double day.
 The monarch then his solemn silence broke,
 The still creation listen'd while he spoke;
 Each sacred accent bears eternal weight,
 And each irrevocable word is fate.

'How long shall man the wrath of heaven defy
 And force unwilling vengeance from the sky!
 Oh race confederate into crimes, that prove
 Triumphant o'er the eluded rage of Jove!
 This wearied arm can scarce the bolt sustain,
 And unregarded thunder rolls in vain;
 The o'erlabour'd Cyclop from his task retires;
 The Æolian forge exhausted of its fires.
 For this I suffer'd Phœbus' steeds to stray,
 And the mad ruler to misguide the day,
 When the wide earth to heaps of ashes turn'd
 And heaven itself the wandering chariot burn'd.
 For this, my brother of the watery reign,
 Released the impetuous sluices of the main:
 But flames consumed, and billows rag'd in vain.
 Two races now, allied to Jove, offend:
 To punish these, see Jove himself descend.
 The Theban kings their line from Cadmus trace,
 From godlike Persens those of Argive race.
 Unhappy Cadmus' fate who does not know,
 And the long series of succeeding wo?
 How oft the Furies, from the deeps of night,
 Arose and mix'd with men in mortal fight:

The exulting mother, stain'd with filial blood
 The savage hunter, and the haunted wood ?
 The direful banquet why should I proclaim,
 And crimes that grieve the trembling gods to name ?

Ere I recount the sins of these profane,
 The sun would sink into the western main,
 And rising gild the radiant east again.
 Have we not seen (the blood of Laius shed)
 The murdering son ascend his parent's bed,
 Through violated nature force his way,
 And stam the sacred womb where once he lay ?
 Yet now in darkness and despair he groans,
 And for the crimes of guilty fate atones ;
 His sons with scorn their eyeless father view,
 Insult his wounds, and make them bleed anew.
 Thy curse, oh Ædipus, just Heaven alarms,
 And sets the avenging Thunderer in arms
 I from the root thy guilty race will tear,
 And give the nations to the waste of war.
 Adrastus soon, with gods averse, shall join
 In dire alliance with the Theban line :
 Hence strife shall rise, and mortal war succeed ;
 The guilty realms of Tantalus shall bleed :
 Fix'd is their doom ; this all-remembering breast
 Yet harbours vengeance for the tyrant's feast.'
 He said : and thus the queen of heaven return'd,
 (With sudden grief her labouring bosom burn'd ;)
 ' Must I, whose cares Phoroneus' towers defend,
 Must I, oh Jove, in bloody wars contend ?
 Thou know'st those regions my protection claim,
 Glorious in arms, in riches, and in fame :
 Though there the fair Egyptian heifer fed,
 And there deluded Argus slept, and bled ;
 Though there the brazen tower was storm'd of old,
 When Jove descended in almighty gold,
 Yet I can pardon those obscurer rapes,
 Those bashful crimes disguised in borrow' d shapes ;

But Thebes, whose, shining in celestial charms,
 Thou camest triumphant to a mortal's arms,
 When all my glories o'er her limbs were spread,
 And blazing lightnings danced around her bed ;
 Cursed Thebes the vengeance it deserves may prove
 Ah, why should Argos feel the rage of Jove ?
 Yet, since thou wilt thy sister queen control,
 Since still the lust of discord fires thy soul,
 Go, raze my Samos, let Mycene fall,
 And level with the dust the Spartan wall ;
 No more let mortals Juno's power invoke,
 Her fanes no more with eastern incense smoke,
 Nor victims sink beneath the sacred stroke :
 But to your Isis all my rights transfer,
 Let altars blaze, and temples smoke for her ;
For her, through Egypt's fruitful clime renown'd,
 Let weeping Nilus hear the timbrel sound.
 But if thou must reform the stubborn times,
 Avenging on the sons the father's crimes,
 And from the long records of distant age,
 Derive incitements to renew thy rage ;
 Say, from what period then has Jove design'd
 To date his vengeance ; to what bounds confined ?
 Begin from thence, where first Alpheus hides
 His wandering stream, and through the briny tides
 Unmix'd to his Sicilian river glides.
 Thy own Arcadians there the thunder claim,
 Whose impious rites disgrace thy mighty name ;
 Who raise thy temples where the chariot stood
 Of fierce CEnomäus defil'd with blood ;
 Where once his steeds their savage banquet found,
 And human bones yet whiten all the ground.
 Say, can those honours please ? and canst thou love
 Presumptuous Crete, that boasts the tomb of Jove ?
 And shall not Tantalus's kingdom share
 Thy wife and sister's tutelary care ?
 Reverse, O Jove, thy too severe decree,
Nor doom to war a race derived from thee .

On impious realms and barbarous kings impose
Thy plagues, and curse them with such sons as those.

Thus, in reproach and prayer, the queen express'd
The rage and grief contending in her breast ;
Unmoved remain'd the ruler of the sky,
And from his throne return'd this stern reply :

'Twas thus I deem'd thy haughty soul would bear

The dire, though just, revenge which I prepare
Against a nation thy peculiar care.
No less Dione might for Thebes contend,
Nor Bacchus less his native town defend ;
Yet these in silence see the fates fulfil
Their work, and reverence our superior will.
For, by the black infernal Styx I swear,
(That dreadful oath which binds the Thunderer,)
'Tis fix'd ; the irrevocable doom of Jove ;
No force can bend me, no persuasion move.
Haste then, Cyllenius, through the liquid air ;
Go mount the winds, and to the shades repair ;
Bid hell's black monarch my commands obey,
And give up Laius to the realms of day :
Whose ghost yet shivering on Coeytus' sand,
Expects its passage to the farther strand ;
Let the pale sire revisit Thebes, and bear
These pleasing orders to the tyrant's ear ;
That, from his exil'd brother, swell'd with pride
Of foreign forces, and his Argive bride,
Almighty Jove commands him to detain
The promised empire, and alternate reign ;
Be this the cause of more than mortal hate :
The rest succeeding times shall ripen into fate.'
The god obeys, and to his feet applies
Those golden wings that cut the yielding skies ;
His ample hat his beamy locks o'erspread,
And veil'd the starry glories of his head.
He seized the wand that causes sleep to fly,
Or in soft slumbers seals the wakeful eye ;

That drives the dead to dark Tartarian coasts,
 Or back to life compels the wandering ghosts.
 Thus, through the parting clouds, the son of May
 Wings on the whistling winds his rapid way ;
 Now smoothly steers through air his equal flight,
 Now springs aloft, and towers the ethereal height
 Then wheeling, down the steep of heaven he flies,
 And draws a radiant circle o'er the skies.

Meantime the banish'd Polynices roves
 (His Thebes abandon'd) through the Aonian groves, While future realms his wandering thoughts delight,

His daily vision, and his dream by night ;
 Forbidden Thebes appears before his eye,
 From whence he sees his absent brother fly
 With transport views the airy rule his own,
 And swells on an imaginary throne.
 Fain would he cast a tedious age away,
 And live out all in one triumphant day :
 He chides the lazy progress of the sun,
 And bids the year with swifter motion run.
 With anxious hopes his craving mind is toss'd,
 And all his joys in length of wishes lost.

The hero then resolves his course to bend
 Where ancient Danaus' fruitful fields extend,
 And famed Mycene's lofty towers ascend,
 (Where late the sun did Atreus crimes detest,
 And disappear'd in horror of the feast.)
 And now, by chance, by fate, or furies led,
 From Bacchus' consecrated caves he fled,
 Where the shrill cries of frantic matrons sound,
 And Pentheus' blood enrich'd the rising ground.
 Then sees Cithæron towering o'er the plain,
 And thence declining gently to the main.
 Next to the bounds of Nisus' realm repairs,
 Where treacherous Scylla cut the purple hairs :
 The hanging cliffs of Scyron's rock explores,
 And hears the murmurs of the different shores.

Passes the strait that parts the foaming seas,
And stately Corinth's pleasing site surveys.
'Twas now the time when Phœbus yields to night,
And rising Cynthia sheds her silver light :
Wide o'er the world in solemn pomp she drew
Her airy chariot, hung with pearly dew ;
All birds and beasts lie hush'd : Sleep steals away
The wild desires of men, and toils of day,
And brings, descending through the silent air
A sweet forgetfulness of human care.
Yet no red clouds, with golden borders gay,
Promise the skies the bright return of day ;
No faint reflections of the distant light [night ;
Streak with long gleams the scattering shades of
From the damp earth impervious vapours rise,
Increase the darkness, and involve the skies.
At once the rushing winds with roaring sound
Burst from the Æolian caves, and rend the ground,
With equal rage their airy quarrel try,
And win by turns the kingdom of the sky :
But with a thicker night black Auster shrouds
The heavens, and drives on heaps the rolling clouds,
From whose dark womb a rattling tempest pours,
Which the cold North congeals to haily showers.
From pole to pole the thunder roars aloud,
And broken lightnings flash from every cloud.
Now smokes with showers the misty mountain-
ground,
And floated fields lie undistinguish'd round,
The Inachian streams with headlong fury run,
And Erasinus rolls a deluge on :
The foaming Lerna swells above its bounds
And spreads its ancient poisons o'er the grounds :
Where late was dust, now rapid torrents play,
Rush through the mounds, and bear the dams away ;
Old limbs of trees from crackling forests torn,
Are whirl'd in air, and on the winds are borne .
The storm the dark Lycæan groves display'd,
And first to light exposed the sacred shade.

The intrepid Theban hears the bursting sky,
 Sees yawning rocks in massy fragments fly,
 And views astonish'd from the hills afar,
 The floods descending, and the watery war,
 That, driven by storms, and pouring o'er the plain,
 Swept herds, and hinds, and houses to the main.
 Through the brown horrors of the night he fled,
 Nor knows, amazed, what doubtful path to tread;
 His brother's image to his mind appears,
 Inflames his heart with rage, and wings his feet with fears.

So fares a sailor on the stormy main,
 When clouds conceal Bœotes' golden wain;
 When not a star its friendly lustre keeps,
 Nor trembling Cynthia glimmers on the deeps;
 He dreads the rocks, and shoals, and seas, and skies.
 While thunder roars, and lightning round him flies.

Thus strove the chief, on every side distress'd,
 Thus still his courage with his toils increased;
 With his broad shield opposed, he forced his way
 Through thickest woods, and roused the beasts of prey
 Till he beheld, where from Larissa's height
 The shelving walls reflect a glancing light:
 Thither with haste the Theban hero flies;
 On this side Lerna's poisonous water lies,
 On that Prosymna's grove and temple rise:
 He pass'd the gates, which then unguarded lay,
 And to the regal palace bent his way;
 On the cold marble, spent with toil, he lies,
 And waits till pleasing slumbers seal his eyes.

Adrastus here his happy people sways,
 Bless'd with calm peace in his declining days.
 By both his parents of descent divine,
 Great Jové and Phœbus graced his noble line:
 Heaven had not crown'd his wishes with a son,
 But two fair daughters heir to his state and throne
 To him Apollo (wondrous to relate!
 But who can pierce into the depths of Fate?)

Had sung—' Expect thy sons on Argos shore,
 A yellow lion, and a bristly boar.'
 This, long revolved in his paternal breast,
 Sate heavy on his heart, and broke his rest ;
 This, great Amphiarus, lay hid from thee,
 Though skill'd in fate, and dark futurity.
 The father's care and prophet's art were vain :
 For thus did the predicting god ordain.

Lo, hapless Tydeus, whose ill-fated hand
 Had slain his brother, leaves his native land,
 And, seized with horror, in the shades of night,
 Through the thick deserts headlong urged his flight,
 Now by the fury of the tempest driven,
 He seeks a shelter from the inclement heaven,
 Till, led by fate, the Theban's steps he treads,
 And to fair Argos' open court succeeds.

When thus the chiefs from different lands reson,
 To Adrastus' realms, and hospitable court ;
 The king surveys his guests with curious eyes,
 And views their arms and habit with surprise.
 A lion's yellow skin the Theban wears,
 Horrid his mane, and rough with curling hairs ;
 Such once employ'd Alcides' youthful toils,
 Ere yet adorn'd with Nemea's dreadful spoils.
 A boar's stiff hide, of Calydonian breed,
 Enides' manly shoulders overspread :
 Oblique his tusks, erect his bristles stood :
 Alive, the pride and terror of the wood.

Struck with the sight, and fix'd in deep amaze
 The king the accomplish'd oracle surveys ;
 Reveres Apollo's vocal caves, and owns
 The guiding godhead, and his future sons.
 O'er all his bosom secret transports reign,
 And a glad horror shoots through every vein.
 To heaven he lifts his hands, erect his sight,
 And thus invokes the silent queen of night :

Goddess of shades, beneath whose gloomy reign
 Yon spangled arch glows with the starry train ;

You, who the cares of heaven and earth allay,
 Till nature, quicken'd by the inspiring ray,
 Wakes to new vigour with the rising day :
 O thou, who freest me from my doubtful state,
 Long lost and wilder'd in the maze of fate!
 Be present still : oh goddess ! in our aid
 Proceed, and 'firm those omens thou hast made.
 We to thy name our annual rites will pay,
 And on thy altars sacrifices lay ;
 The sable flock shall fall beneath the stroke,
 And fill thy temples with a graceful smoke
 Hail, faithful Tripos ! hail, ye dark abodes
 Of awful Phœbus : I confess the gods !'

Thus, seized with sacred fear, the monarch pray'd
 Then to his inner court the guests convey'd :
 Where yet thin fumes from dying sparks arise
 And dust yet white upon each altar lies,
 The relics of a former sacrifice.
 The king once more the solemn rites requires,
 And bids renew the feasts, and wake the fires.
 His train obey, while all the courts around
 With noisy care and various tumult sound.
 Embroider'd purple clothes the golden beds ;
 This slave the floor, and that the table spreads :
 A third dispels the darkness of the night ;
 And fills depending lamps with beams of light ;
 Here loaves in canisters are piled on high,
 And there in flames the slaughter'd victims fry.
 Sublime in regal state Adrastus shone,
 Stretch'd on rich carpets on his ivory throne ;
 A lofty couch receives each princely guest ;
 Around, at awful distance, wait the rest.

And now the king, his royal feast to grace,
 Acestis calls, the guardian of his race,
 Who first their youth in arts of virtue train'd,
 And their ripe years in modest grace maintain'd ;
 Then softly whisper'd in her faithful ear,
 And bade his daughters at the rites appear.

When from the close apartments of the night,
 The royal nymphs approach divinely bright ;
 Such was Diana's, such Minerva's face ;
 Nor shine their beauties with superior grace,
 But that in these a milder charm endears,
 And less of terror in their looks appears.
 As on the heroes first they cast their eyes,
 O'er their fair cheeks the glowing blushes rise,
 Their downcast looks a decent shame confess'd,
 Then on their father's reverend features rest.

The banquet done, the monarch gives the sign
 To fill the goblet high with sparkling wine,
 Which Danaus used in sacred rites of old,
 With sculpture graced, and rough with rising go.
 Here to the clouds victorious Perseus flies,
 Medusa seems to move her languid eyes,
 And e'en in gold, turns paler as she dies.
 There from the chase Jove's towering eagle bears,
 On golden wings, the Phrygian to the stars ;
 Still as he rises in the ethereal height,
 His native mountains lessen to his sight ;
 While all his sad companions upward gaze,
 Fix'd on the glorious scene in wild amaze,
 And the swift hounds, affrighted as he flies,
 Run to the shade, and bark against the skies

This golden bowl with generous juice was crown'd
 The first libation sprinkled on the ground :
 By turns on each celestial power they call,
 With Phœbus' name resounds the vaulted hall.
 The courtly train, the strangers, and the rest,
 Crown'd with chaste laurel, and with garlands
 dress'd,

While with rich gums the fuming altars blaze,
 Salute the god in numerous hymns of praise.

Then thus the king : ' Perhaps, my noble guests,
 These honour'd altars, and these annual feasts
 To bright Apollo's awful name design'd,
 Unknown, with wonder may perplex your mind,

Great was the cause ; our old solemnities
 From no blind zeal or fond tradition rise ;
 But, saved from death, our Argives yearly pay
 These grateful honours to the god of day.

' When by a thousand darts the Python slain
 With orbs unroll'd, lay covering all the plain, (Transfix'd as o'er Castalia's streams he hung,
 And suck'd new poison with his triple tongue,)
 To Argo's realms the victor god resorts,
 And enters old Crotopus' humble courts.
 This rural prince one only daughter bless'd,
 That all the charms of blooming youth possess'd :
 Fair was her face, and spotless was her mind,
 Where filial love with virgin sweetness join'd.
 Happy ! and happy still she might have proved,
 Were she less beautiful, or less beloved !
 But Phœbus loved, and on the flowery side
 Of Nemea's stream the yielding fair enjoy'd :
 Now, ere ten moons their orb with light adorn,
 The illustrious offspring of the god was born ;
 The nymph, her father's anger to evade,
 Retires from Argos to the sylvan shade ;
 To woods and wilds the pleasing burthen bears,
 And trusts her infant to a shepherd's cares.

' How mean a fate, unhappy child is thine !
 Ah, how unworthy those of race divine !
 On flowery herbs in some green covert laid,
 His bed the ground, his canopy the shade,
 He mixes with the bleating lambs his cries,
 While the rude swain his rural music tries,
 To call soft slumbers on his infant eyes.
 Yet e'en in those obscure abodes to live,
 Was more, alas ! than cruel fate would give ;
 For on the grassy verdure as he lay,
 And breathed the freshness of the early day,
 Devouring dogs the helpless infant tore,
 Fed on his trembling limbs, and lapp'd the gore
 The astonish'd mother, when the rumour came,
 Forgets her father, and neglects her fame.

With loud complaints she fills the yielding air,
And beats her breast, and rends her flowing hair ;
Then wild with anguish to her sire she flies,
Demands the sentence, and contented dies.

' But, touch'd with sorrow for the dead too late,
The raging god prepares to avenge her fate.
He sends a monster, horrible and fell,
Begot by furies in the depths of hell.

The pest a virgin's face and bosom bears ;
High on a crown a rising snake appears,
Guards her black front, and hisses in her hairs ;
About the realm she walks her dreadful round,
When night with sable wings o'erspreads the ground
Devours young babes before their parents' eyes,
And feeds and thrives on public miseries.

' But generous rage the bold Choræbus warms.
Choræbus, famed for virtue, as for arms ;
Some few like him, inspired with martial flame,
Thought a short life well lost for endless fame.
These, where two ways in equal parts divide,
The direful monster from afar descried,
Two bleeding babes depending at her side,
Whose panting vitals, warm with life, she draws,
And in their hearts imbrues her cruel claws.
The youths surround her with extended spears ;
But brave Choræbus in the front appears,
Deep in her breast he plunged his shining sword,
And hell's dire monster back to hell restored.
The Inachians view the slain with vast surprise,
Her twisting volumes, and her rolling eyes,
Her spotted breast, and gaping womb imbrued
With livid poison, and our children's blood.
The crowd in stupid wonder fix'd appear,
Pale e'en in joy, nor yet forget to fear.
Some with vast beams the squalid corpse engage,
And weary all the wild efforts of rage.
The birds obscene, that nightly flock'd to taste,
With hollow screeches fled the dire repast ;

And ravenous dogs, allured by scented blood,
 And starving wolves ran howling to the wood.
 'But, fired with rage, from cleft Parnassus' brow
 Avenging Phœbus bent his deadly bow,
 And hissing flew the feather'd fates below :
 A night of sultry clouds involved around
 The towers, the fields, and the devoted ground
 And now a thousand lives together fled,
 Death with his scythe cut off the fatal thread,
 And a whole province in his triumph led.
 But Phœbus, ask'd why noxious fires appear,
 And raging Sirius blasts the sickly year,
 Demands their lives by whom his monster fell,
 And dooms a dreadful sacrifice to hell.
 'Bless'd be thy dust, and let eternal fame
 Attend thy mânes, and preserve thy name,
 Undaunted hero ! who, divinely brave,
 In such a cause disdain'd thy life to save ;
 But view'd the shrine with a superior look,
 And its upbraided godhead thus bespoke :
 'With piety, the soul's securest guard,
 And conscious virtue, still its own reward,
 Willing I come, unknowing how to fear ;
 Nor shalt thou, Phœbus, find a suppliant here.
 Thy monster's death to me was owed alone,
 And 'tis a deed too glorious to disown.
 Behold him here, for whom, so many days,
 Impervious clouds conceal'd thy sullen rays ;
 For whom, as man no longer claim'd thy care,
 Such numbers fell by pestilential air !
 But if the abandon'd race of human kind
 From gods above no more compassion find ;
 If such inclemency in heaven can dwell,
 Yet why must unoffending Argos feel
 The vengeance due to this unlucky steel !
 On me, on me, let all thy fury fall,
 Nor err from me, since I deserve it all :
 Unless our desert cities please thy sight,
 Or funeral flames reflect a grateful light,

Discharge thy shafts, this ready bosom rend,
 And to the shades a ghost triumphant send ;
 But for my country let my fate atone,
 Be mine the vengeance, as the crime my own.'

' Merit distress'd, impartial Heaven relieves :
 Unwelcome life relenting Phœbus gives :
 For not the vengeful power that glow'd with rage,
 With such amazing virtue durst engage.
 The clouds dispersed, Apollo's wrath expired,
 And from the wondering god the unwilling youth re-
 Thence we these altars in his temple raise, [tired.
 And offer annual honours, feasts, and praise ;
 Those solemn feasts propitious Phœbus please ;
 These honours still renew'd, his ancient wrath appease.

' But say, illustrious guest !' adjoin'd the king,
 'What name you bear from what high race you spring?
 The noble Tydeus stands confess'd, and known
 Our neighbour prince, and heir of Calydon.
 Relate your fortunes, while the friendly night
 And silent hours to various talk invite.'

The Theban bends on earth his gloomy eyes,
 Confused, and sadly thus at length replies ;
 ' Before these altars how shall I proclaim
 (Oh generous prince !) my nation or my name,
 Or through what veins our ancient blood has roll'd ?
 Let the sad tale for ever rest untold !
 Yet if, propitious to a wretch unknown,
 You seek to share in sorrows not your own ;
 Know then, from Cadmus I derive my race,
 Jocasta's son, and Thebes my native place.'

To whom the king (who felt his generous breast Touch'd with concern for his unhappy guest)
 Replies :—' Ah, why forbears the son to name
 His wretched father, known too well by fame ?
 Fame, that delights around the world to stray,
 Scorns not to take our Argos in her way.
 E'en those who dwell where suns at distance roll,
 In northern wilds, and freeze beneath the pole ;

And those who tread the burning Libyan lands,
The faithless Syrtes, and the moving sands ;
Who view the western sea's extremest bounds,
Or drink of Ganges in their eastern grounds ;
All these the woes of Œdipus have known,
Your fates, your furies, and your haunted town.
If on the sons the parents' crimes descend,
What prince from those his lineage can defend ?
Be this thy comfort, that 'tis thine to efface
With virtuous acts thy ancestor's disgrace,
And be thyself the honour of thy race.
But see ! the stars begin to steal away,
And shine more faintly at approaching day.
Now pour the wine ; and in your tuneful lays
Once more resound the great Apollo's praise.'

Oh, father Phœbus ! whether Lycia's coast
And snowy mountains thy bright presence boast ;
Whether to sweet Castalia thou repair,
And bathe in silver dews thy yellow hair ;
Or, pleased to find fair Delos float no more,
Delight in Cynthus, and the shady shore ;
Or choose thy seat in Ilion's proud abodes,
The shining structures raised by labouring gods ;
By thee the bow and mortal shafts are borne ;
Eternal charms thy blooming youth adorn :
Skill'd in the laws of secret fate above,
And the dark counsels of almighty Jove,
'Tis thine the seeds of future war to know,
The change of sceptres, and impending woe ;
When direful meteors spread through glowing air
Long trails of light, and shake their blazing hair,
Thy rage the Phrygian felt, who durst aspire
To excel the music of thy heavenly lyre ;
Thy shafts avenged lewd Tityus' guilty flame
The immortal victim of thy mother's fame ;
Thy hand slew Python, and the dame who lost
Her numerous offspring for a fatal boast.
In Phlegyas' doom thy just revenge appears,
Condemn'd to furies and eternal fears :

He views his food, but dreads, with lifted eye,
The mouldering rock, that trembles from on high.

---

Propitious hear our prayer, O power divine!
And on thy hospitable Argos shine,
Whether the style of Titan please thee more,
Whose purple rays the Achæmenes adore;
Or great Osiris, who first taught the swain
In Pharian field to sow the golden grain;
Or Mithra, to whose beams the Persian bows,
And pays, in hollow rocks, his awful vows;
Mithra, whose head the blaze of light adorns,
Who grasps the struggling heifer's lunar horns.

THE FABLE OF DRYOPE.

FROM

OVID'S METAMORPHOSES,

Book 9.

---

SHE said, and for her lost Galanthis sighs,
When the fair consort of her son replies:
Since you a servant's ravish'd form bemoan,
And kindly sigh for sorrows not your own;
Let me (if tears and grief permit) relate
A nearer woe, a sister's stranger fate.
No nymph of all Oechalia could compare
For beauteous form with Dryope the fair,
Her tender mother's only hope and pride
(Myself the offspring of a second bride.)
This nymph, compress'd by him who rules the day,
Whom Delphi and the Delian isle obey,
Andræmon loved; and, bless'd in all those charms
That pleased a god, succeeded to her arms.
A lake there was, with shelving banks around,
Whose verdant summit fragrant myrtles crown'd

These shades, unknowing of the fates, she sought,
 And to the Naiads flowery garlands brought;
 Her smiling babe (a pleasing charge) she press'd
 Within her arms, and nourish'd at her breast.
 Not distant far, a watery lotos grows;
 The spring was new, and all the verdant boughs
 Adorn'd with blossoms, promised fruits that vie
 In glowing colours with the Tyrian dye:
 Of these she cropp'd to please her infant son;
 And I myself the same rash act had done:
 But lo! I saw (as near her side I stood)
 The violated blossoms drop with blood.
 Upon the tree I cast a frightful look;
 The trembling tree with sudden horror shook.
 Lotis the nymph (if rural tales be true,
 As from Priapus' lawless lust she flew,
 Forsook her form; and, fixing here, became
 A flowery plant, which still preserves her name.
 This change unknown, astonish'd at the sight,
 My trembling sister strove to urge her flight:
 And first the pardon of the nymphs implored,
 And those offended sylvan powers adored:
 But when she backward would have fled, she found
 Her stiffening feet were rooted in the ground;
 In vain to free her fasten'd feet she strove,
 And, as she struggles, only moves above;
 She feels the encroaching bark around her grow
 By quick degrees, and cover all below:
 Surprised at this, her trembling hand she heaves
 To rend her hair: her hand is fill'd with leaves:
 Where late was hair, the shooting leaves are seen
 To rise, and shade her with a sudden green.
 The child Amphissus, to her bosom press'd,
 Perceived a colder and a harder breast,
 And found the springs, that ne'er till then demed
 Their milky moisture, on a sudden dried.
 I saw, unhappy! what I now relate,
 And stood the helpless witness of thy fate.

Embraced thy boughs, thy rising bark delay'd,
There wish'd to grow, and mingle shade with shade.

Behold Andræmon and the unhappy sire
Appear, and for their Dryope inquire ;
A springing tree for Dryope they find,
And print warm kisses on the panting rind ;
Prostrate, with tears their kindred plant bedew,
And close embrace as to the roots they grew.
The face was all that now remain'd of thee,
No more a woman, nor yet quite a tree ;
Thy branches hung with humid pearls appear,
From every leaf distils a trickling tear,
And straight a voice, while yet a voice remains,
Thus through the trembling boughs in sighs complains :

' If to the wretched any faith be given,
I swear by all the unpitying powers of heaven,
No wilful crime this heavy vengeance bred ;
In mutual innocence our lives we led :
If this be false, let these new greens decay,
Let sounding axes lop my limbs away,
And crackling flames on all my honours prey !
But from my branching arms this infant bear,
Let some kind nurse supply a mother's care :
And to his mother let him oft be led,
Sport in her shades, and in her shades be fed ;
Teach him, when first his infant voice shall frame
Imperfect words, and lisp his mother's name,
To hail this tree ; and say with weeping eyes,
Within this plant my hapless parent lies :
And when in youth he seeks the shady woods,
Oh, let him fly the crystal lakes and floods,
Nor touch the fatal flowers ; but, warn'd by me,
Believe a goddess shrined in every tree.
My sire, my sister, and my spouse, farewell !
If in your breast or love or pity dwell,
Protect your plant, nor let my branches feel
The browsing cattle, or the piercing steel.

Farewell! and since I cannot bend to join
 My lips to yours, advance at least to mine.
 My son, thy mother's parting kiss receive
 While yet thy mother has a kiss to give.
 I can no more; the creeping rind invades
 My closing lips, and hides my head in shades
 Remove your hands; the bark shall soon suffice
 Without their aid to seal these dying eyes.'
 She ceased at once to speak, and ceased to be
 And all the nymph was lost within the tree;
 Yet latent life through her new branches reign'd,
 And long the plant a human heat retain'd.

VERTUMNUS AND POMONA.

FROM

Book 4.

---

THE fair Pomona flourish'd in his reign:
 Of all the virgins of the sylvan train,
 None taught the trees a nobler race to bear,
 Or more improved the vegetable care.
 To her the shady grove, the flowery field,
 The streams and fountains, no delights could yield:
 'Twas all her joy the ripening fruits to tend,
 And see the boughs with happy burthens bend.
 The hook she bore instead of Cynthia's spear,
 To lop the growth of the luxuriant year,
 To decent form the lawless shoots to bring,
 And teach the obedient branches where to spring.
 Now the cleft rind inserted grafts receives,
 And yields an offspring more than nature gives;
 Now sliding streams the thirsty plants renew,
 And feed their fibres with reviving dew.

These cares alone her virgin breast employ,
Averse from Venus and the nuptial joy.
Her private orchards, wall'd on every side,
To lawless sylvans all access denied.
How oft the satyrs and the wanton fauns,
Who haunt the forests, or frequent the lawns,
The god whose ensigns scares the birds of prey
And old Silenus, youthful in decay,
Employ'd their wives and unavailing care,
To pass the fences, and surprise the fair!
Like these, Vertumnus own'd his faithful flame.
Like these, rejected by the scornful dame.
To gain her sight, a thousand forms he wears;
And first a reaper from the field appears,
Sweating he walks, while loads of golden grain
O'ercharge the shoulders of the seeming swain.
Oft o'er his back a crooked scythe is laid,
And wreaths of hay his sun-burnt temples shade
Oft in his harden'd hand a goad he bears,
Like one who late unyoked the sweating steers
Sometimes his pruning-hook corrects the vines,
And the loose stragglers to their ranks confines.
Now gathering what the bounteous year allows,
He pulls ripe apples from the bending boughs.
A soldier now, he with his sword appears;
A fisher next, his trembling angle bears.
Each shape he varies, and each art he tries,
On her bright charms to feast his longing eyes.

A female form at last Vertumnus wears,
With all the marks of reverend age appears,
His temples thinly spread with silver hairs:
Propp'd on his staff, and stooping as he goes,
A painted mitre shades his furrow'd brows.
The god, in this decrepit form array'd,
The gardens entered, and the fruit survey'd;
And 'Happy you!' he thus address'd the maid,
'Whose charms as far all other nymphs out-shine,
As other gardens are excell'd by thine!'

Then kiss'd the fair (his kisses warmer grow
 Than such as women on their sex bestow ;)
 Then, placed beside her on the flowery ground,
 Beheld the trees with autumn's bounty crown'd.
 An elm was near, to whose embraces led,
 The eurling vine her swelling clusters spread :
 He view'd her twining branches with delight,
 And praised the beauty of the pleasing sight.

' Yet this tall elm, but for his vine,' he said,
 ' Had stood neglected, and a barren shade ;
 And this fair vine, but that her arms surround
 Her married elm, had crept along the ground.
 Ah beauteous maid ! let this example move
 Your mind, averse from all the joys of love
 Deign to be loved, and every heart subdue :
 What nymph could e'er attract such crowds
 you ?

Not she whose beauty urged the Centaur's arms,
 Ulysses' queen, nor Helen's fatal charms.
 E'en now, when silent scorn is all they gain,
 A thousand court you, though they court in vain.
 A thousand sylvans, demigods, and gods,
 nat haunt our mountains, and our Alban woods.
 But if you'll prosper, mark what I advise,
 Whom age and long experience render wise,
 And one whose tender care is far above
 All that these lovers ever felt for love ;
 (Far more than e'er can by yourself be guess'd )
 Fix on Vertumnus, and reject the rest.
 For his firm faith I dare engage my own ;
 Scarce to himself, himself is better known.
 To distant lands Vertumnus never roves ;
 Like you, contented with his native groves ;
 Nor at first sight, like most, admires the fair ;
 For you he lives : and you alone shall share
 His last affection, as his early care.
 Besides, he's lovely far above the rest,
 With youth immortal, and with beauty bless'd.

Add, that he varies every shape with ease,
And tries all forms that may Pomona please.
But what should most excite a mutual flame
Your rural cares and pleasures are the same :
To him your orchard's early fruit are due,
(A pleasing offering when 'tis made by you,)
He values these ; but yet, alas ! complains,
That still the best and dearest gift remains.
Not the fair fruit that on yon branches glows
With that ripe red the autumnal sun bestows !
Nor tasteful herbs that in these gardens rise,
Which the kind soil with milky sap supplies :
You, only you, can move the god's desire :
Oh, erown so constant and so pure a fire !
Let soft compassion touch your gentle mind ;
Think, 'tis Vertumnus begs you to be kind :
So may no frost, when early buds appear,
Destroy the promise of the youthful year ;
Nor winds, when first your florid orchard blows,
Shake the light blossoms from their blasted boughs.<sup>1</sup>
This when the various god had urged in vain,
He straight assumed his native form again
Such, and so bright an aspect now he bears
As when through clouds the emerging sun appears
And, thence exerting his refulgent ray,
Dispels the darkness, and reveals the day.
Force he prepared, but check'd the rash design ;
For when, appearing in a form divine,
The nymph surveys him, and beholds the grace
Of charming features, and a youthful face ;
In her soft breast consenting passions move,
And the warm maid confess'd a mutual love.

WOMEN ben full of ragerie,
 Yet swinken nat sans secresie.
 Thilka moral shall ye understand,
 From schoole-boy's tale of fayre Ireland :
 Which to the fennes hath him betake,
 To filch the gray ducke fro the lake.
 Right then, there passen by the way
 His aunt, and eke her daughters tway,
 Ducke in his trowsers hath he hent,
 Not to be spied of ladies gent.
 'But ho! our nephew,' crieth one,
 'Ho!' quoth another, 'cozen John ;'
 And stoppen, and lough, and callen out,—
 This silly clerke full low doth lout :
 They asken that, and talken this,
 'Lo! here is coz, and here is miss.'
 But as he glozeth with speeches soote,
 The ducke sore tickleth his erse roote ;
 Fore-piece and buttons all to-brest,
 Forth thrust a white neck, and red crest.
 'Te-he,' cried ladies ; clerke nought spake ;
 Miss stared, and gray ducke cryeth, 'Quaake.'
 'O moder, moder,' quoth the daughter,
 'Be thilke same thing maids longen a'ter ?
 Bette is to pine on coals and chalke,
 Then trust on mon, whose yerde can talke.'

THE ALLEY.

IN every town where Thamis rolls his tyde,
 A narrow pass there is with houses low ;

Where, ever and anon, the stream is eyed,
 And many a boat, soft sliding to and fro.
 There oft are heard the notes of infant woe,
 The short thick sob, loud scream, and shriller squall
 How can ye, mothers, vex your children so ?
 Some play, some eat, some cack against the wall,
 And as they crouchen low, for bread and butter call

And on the broken pavement, here and there,
 Doth many a stinking sprat and herring lie ;
 A brandy and tobacco shop is near,
 And hens, and dogs, and hogs are feeding by ;
 And here a sailor's jacket hangs to dry.
 At every door are sun-burnt matrons seen,
 Mending old nets to catch the scaly fry,
 Now singing shrill, and scolding eft between ;
 Scolds answer foul-mouth'd scolds ; bad neighbourhood I ween.

*he snappish cur (the passenger's annoy)
 Close at my heel with yelping treble flies ;
 The whimpering girl, and hoarser screaming boy,
 Join to the yelping treble, shrilling cries ;
 The scolding quean to louder notes doth rise,
 And her full pipes those shrilling cries confound ;
 To her full pipes the grunting hog replies ;
 The grunting hogs alarm the neighbours round,
 And curs, girls, boys, and scolds, in the deep base are drown'd.

Hard by a sty, beneath a roof of thatch,
 Dwelt Obloquy, who in her carly days
 Baskets of fish at Billingsgate did watch,
 Cod, whiting, oyster, mackrel, sprat, or plaice ;
 There learn'd she speech from tongues that never cease.

Slander beside her, like a magpie, chatters,
 With Envy (spitting cat,) dread foe to peace ;
 Like a cursed cur, Malice before her clatters,
 And, vexing every wight, tears clothes and all tatters.

Her dug's were mark'd by every collier's hand,
 Her mouth was black as bull dog's at the stall;
 She scratch'd, bit, and spared ne lace ne band,
 And bitch and rogue her answer was to all;
 Nay, e'en the parts of shame by name would call;
 Yea, when she passed by or lane or nook,
 Would greet the man who turn'd him to the wall,
 And by his hand obscene the porter took,
 Nor ever did askance like modest virgin look.

Such place hath Deptford, navy-building town,
 Woolwich and Wapping, smelling strong of pitch:
 Such Lambeth, envy of each band and gown;
 And Twickenham such, which fairer scenes enrich
 Grot's, statues, urns, and Jo—n's dog and bitch,
 Ne village is without, on either side,
 All up the silver Thames, or all adown:
 Ne Richmond's self, from whose tall front are eyed Vales, spires, meandering streams, and Windsor's towery pride.

WALLER.

OF A LADY SINGING TO HER LUTE.

FAIR charmer, cease, nor make your voice's prize,
 A heart resign'd, the conquest of your eyes:
 Well might, alas! that threaten'd vessel fail,
 Which winds and lightning both at once assail.
 We were too bless'd with these exchanting lays,
 Which must be heavenly when an angel plays;
 But killing charms your lover's death contrive,
 Lest heavenly music should be heard alive.
 Orpheus could charm the trees: but thus a tree,
 Taught by your hand, can charm no less than he.
 A poet made the silent wood pursue,
 This vocal wood had drawn the poet too.

ON A FAN OF THE AUTHOR'S DESIGN.

In which was painted the Story of Cephalus and Procris, with the Motto, ' Aura veni.'

'COME, gentle air!' the Æolian shepherd said,
 While Procris panted in the secret shade ;
 'Come, gentle air,' the fairer Delia cries,
 While at her feet her swain expiring lies.
 Lo, the glad gales o'er all her beauties stray,
 Breathe on her lips, and in her bosom play !
 In Delia's hand this toy is fatal found,
 Nor could that fatal dart more surely wound
 Both gifts destructive to the givers prove ;
 Alike both lovers fall by those they love.
 Yet guiltless too the bright destroyer lives,
 At random wounds, nor knows the wound she gives
 She views the story with attentive eyes,
 And pities Procris, while her lover dies.

COWLEY.

THE GARDEN.

FAIN would my muse the flowery treasure sing,
 And humble glories of the youthful spring :
 Where opening roses breathing sweets diffuse,
 And soft carnations shower their balmy dews
 Where lilies smile in virgin robes of white,
 The thin undress of superficial light,
 And varied tulips show so dazzling gay,
 Blushing in bright diversities of day.
 Each painted floweret in the lake below
 Surveys its beauties, whence its beauties grow ;
 And pale Narcissus, on the bank, in vain
 Transformed, gazes on himself again,
 Here aged trees cathedral walks compose,
 And mount the hill in venerable rows ;
 There the green infants in their beds are laid,
 The garden's hope, and its expected shade,

Here orange trees with blooms and pendants shine
 And vernal honours to their autumn join ;
 Exceed their promise in their ripen'd store,
 Yet in the rising blossom promise more.
 There in bright drops the crystal fountains play,
 By laurels shielded from the piercing day ;
 Where Daphne, now a tree, as once a maid,
 Still from Apollo vindicates her shade,
 Still turns her beauties from the invading beam,
 Nor seeks in vain for succour to the stream ;
 The stream at once preserves her virgin leaves,
 At once a shelter from her boughs receives,
 Where summer's beauty midst of winter stays,
 And winter's coolness spite of summer's rays.

WEEPING.

WHILE Celia's tears make sorrow bright,
 Proud grief sits swelling in her eyes :
 The sun, next those the fairest light,
 Thus from the ocean first did rise ;
 And thus through mists we see the sun,
 Which else we durst not gaze upon.

These silver drops, like morning dew,
 Foretell the fervour of the day :
 So from one cloud soft showers we view
 And blasting lightnings burst away.
 The stars that fall from Celia's eye,
 Declare our doom is drawing nigh.

The baby in that sunny sphere
 So like a Phaeton appears,
 That heaven, the threaten'd world to spare,
 Thought fit to drown him in her tears :
 Else might the ambitious nymph aspire
 To set, like him, heaven too on fire.

EARL OF ROCHESTER

ON SILENCE.

SILENCE ! coeval with eternity,
 Thou wert, ere nature's self began to be ;
 Twas one vast nothing, all, and all slept fast in thee.

Thine was the sway, ere heav'n was formed, or earth :

Ere fruitful thought conceived creation's birth,
 r midwife word gave aid, and spoke the infant forth.

The various elements against thee join'd
 In one more various animal combined,
 And framed the clamorous race of busy human-kind.

The tongue moved gently first and speech was low,
 Till wrangling science taught it noise and show,
 And wicked wit arose, thy most abusive foe.

But rebel wit deserts thee oft in vain ;
 Lost in the maze of words he turns again,
 And seeks a surer state, and courts thy gentle reign.

Afflicted sense thou kindly dost set free,
 Oppress'd with argumental tyranny,
 And routed reason finds a safe retreat in thee.

With thee in private modest dulness lies,
 And in thy bosom lurks in thought's disguise ;
 Thou varnisher of fools, and cheat of all the wise !

Yet thy indulgence is by both confess'd ;
 Folly by thee lies sleeping in the breast,
 And 'tis in thee at last that wisdom seeks for rest.

Silence, the knave's repute, the whore's good name,
 The only honour of the wishing dame ;
 Thy very want of tongue makes thee a kind of fame.

But couldst thou seize some tongues that now are free,

How church and state should be obliged to thee ;
 At senate, and at bar, how welcome wouldst thou be !

Yet speech e'en there submissively withdraws,
 From rights of subjects, and the poor man's cause;
 Then pompous Silence reigns, and stills the noisy laws.

Past services of friends, good deeds of foes,
 What favourites gain, and what the nation owes.
 Fly the forgetful world, and in thy arms repose.

The country wit, religion of the town,
 The courtier's learning, policy of the gown,
 Are best by thee express'd; and shine in thee alone.

The parson's cant, the lawyer's sophistry,
 Lord's quibble, critic's jest, all end in thee,
 All rest in peace at last, and sleep eternally.

ARTEMISIA.

THOUGH Artemisia talks, by fits,
 Of councils, classics, fathers, wits;
 Reads Malbranche, Boyle, and Locke;
 Yet in some things methinks she fails:
 'Twere well if she would pare her nails,
 And wear a cleaner smock.

Haughty and huge as High-Dutch bride,
 Such nastiness, and so much pride
 Are oddly join'd by fate:
 On her large squab you find her spread,
 Like a fat corpse upon a bed,
 That lies and stinks in state.

She wears no colours (sign of grace)
 On any part except her face;
 All white and black beside:
 Dauntless her look, her gesture proud,
 Her voice theatrically loud,
 And masculine her stride.

IMITATIONS.

227

So have I seen, in black and white,
A prating thing, a magpie hight,
Majestically stalk ;
A stately, worthless animal,
That plies the tongue, and wags the tail
All flutter, pride, and talk.

PIRYNE.

PHYRYNE had talents for mankind,
Open she was, and unconfined,
Like some free port of trade ;
Merchants unloaded here their freight,
And agents from each foreign state,
Here first their entry made.
Her learning and good-breeding such,
Whether the Italian or the Dutch,
Spaniards or French came to her ;
To all obliging she'd appear :
'Twas ' Si Signor,' 'twas ' Yaw Mynheer,'
'Twas ' S'il vous plait, Monsieur.'
Obscure by birth, renown'd by crimes,
Still changing names, religion, climes,
At length she turns a bride :
In diamonds, pearls, and rich brocades,
She shines the first of batter'd jades,
And flutters in her pride.
So have I known those insects fair
(Which curious Germans hold so rare)
Still vary shapes and dyes ;
Still gain new titles with new forms ;
First grubs obscene, then wriggling worms.
Then painted butterflies.

THE HAPPY LIFE OF A COUNTRY PARSON.

PARSON, these things in thy possessing,
Are better than the bishop's blessing :

A wife that makes conserves ; a steed
 That carries double when there's need ;
 October store, and best Virginia,
 Tithe pig, and mortuary guinea ;
 Gazettes sent gratis down, and frank'd,
 For which thy patron's weekly thank'd ;
 A large Concordance, bound long since ;
 Sermons to Charles the First, when prince ;
 A Chronicle of ancient standing ;
 A Chrysostom to smooth—thy band in ;
 The Polyglott—three parts—my text,
 Howbeit,—likewise—now to my next :
 Lo, here the Septuagint,—and Paul,
 To sum the whole,—the close of all.

He that has these, may pass his life,
 Drink with the 'squire, and kiss his wife ;
 On Sundays preach, and eat his fill ;

AN ESSAY ON MAN

IN FOUR EPISTLES

TO HENRY ST. JOHN, LORD BOLINGBROKE

---

THE DESIGN.

HAVING proposed to write some pieces on human life and manners, such as (to use my lord Bacon's expression) 'come home to men's business and hosoms,' I thought it more satisfactory to begin with considering man in the abstract, his nature, and his state : since, to prove any moral duty, to enforce any moral precept, or to examine the perfection or imperfection of any creature whatsoever, it is necessary first to know what condition and relation it is placed in, and what is the proper end and purpose of its being.

The science of human nature is, like all other sciences, reduced to a few clear points: there are not many certain truths in this world. It is therefore in the anatomy of the mind as in that of the body; more good will accrue to mankind by attending to the large, open, and perceptible parts, than by studying too much such finer nerves and vessels, the conformations and uses of which will for ever escape our observation. The disputes are all upon these last; and I will venture to say, they have less sharpened the wits than the hearts of men against each other, and have diminished the practice more than advanced the theory of morality. If I could flatter myself that this Essay has any merit, it is in steering betwixt the extremes of doctrines seemingly opposite, in passing over terms utterly unintelligible, and in forming a temperate, yet not inconsistent, and a short, yet not imperfect, system of ethics.

This I might have done in prose; but I chose verse and even rhyme, for two reasons. The one will appear obvious; that principles, maxims, or precepts, so written, both strike the reader more strongly at first, and are more easily retained by him afterwards; the other may seem odd, but it is true: I found I could express them more shortly this way than in prose itself; and nothing is more certain, than that much of the force, as well as the grace of arguments or instructions, depends on their conciseness. I was unable to treat this part of my subject more in detail, without becoming dry and tedious; or more poetically, without sacrificing perspicuity to ornament, without wandering from the precision, or breaking the chain of reasoning: if any man can unite all these without diminution of any of them, I freely confess he will compass a thing above my capacity.

What is now published, is only to be considered as a general map of man, marking out no more than the greater parts, their extent, their limits, and their connexion, but leaving the particular to be more fully delineated in the charts which are to follow. Consequently these Epistles, in their progress, (if I have health and leisure to make any progress,) will be less dry, and more susceptible of poetical ornament. I am here only opening the fountains, and clearing the passage. To deduce the rivers, to follow them in their course, and to observe their effects, may be a task more agreeable.

ARGUMENT OF EPISTLE I.

Of the Nature and State of Man with respect to the Universe.

Of man in the abstract. I. That we can judge only with regard to our own system, being ignorant of the relations of systems and things, ver. 17, &c. II. That man is not to be deemed imperfect, but a being suited to his place and rank in the creation, agreeable to the general order of things, and conformable to ends and relations to him unknown, ver. 35, &c. III. That it is partly upon his ignorance of future events, and partly upon the hope of a future state, that all his happiness in the present depends, ver. 77, &c. IV. The pride of aiming at more knowledge, and pretending to more perfection, the cause of man's error and misery. The impiety of putting himself in the place of God, and judging the fitness or unfitness, perfection or imperfection, justice or injustice, of his dispensations, ver. 109, &c. V. The absurdity of conceiving himself the final cause of the creation, or expecting that perfec tion in the moral world, which is not in the natural, ver. 131, &c. VI. The unreasonableness of his complaints against Providence, while on the one hand he demands the perfection of the angels, and on the other the bodily qualifications of the brutes; though to possess any of the sensitive faculties in a higher degree, would render him miserable, ver. 173, &c. VII. That throughout the whole visible world, an universal order and gradation in the sensual and mental faculties is observed, which causes a subordination of creature to creature, and of all creatures to man. The gradations of sense, instinct, thought, reflection, reason; that reason alone countervails all the other faculties, ver. 207. VIII. How much farther this order and subordination of living creatures may extend above and below us; were any part of which broken, not that part only, but the whole connected creation must be destroyed, ver. 233. IX. The extravagance, madness, and pride of such a desire, ver. 250. X. The consequence of all, the absolute submission due to Providence, both as to our present and future state, ver. 281. to the end.

EPISTLE I.

AWAKE, my St. John! leave all meaner things
 To low ambition, and the pride of kings:
 Let us (since life can little more supply
 Than just to look about us, and to die)
 Expatriate free o'er all this scene of man;
 A mighty maze! but not without a plan:
 A wild, where weeds and flowers promiscuous shoot;
 Or garden, tempting with forbidden fruit
 Together let us beat this ample field,
 Try what the open, what the covert yield;
 The latent tracts, the giddy heights explore
 Of all who blindly creep, or sightless soar;
 Eye nature's walks, shoot folly as it flies,
 And catch the manners living as they rise:
 Laugh where we must, be candid where we can,
 But vindicate the ways of God to man.

I. Say first, of God above, or man below,
 What can we reason, but from what we know:

Of man, what see we but his station here,
 From which to reason, or to which refer? 20
 Through worlds unnumber'd though the God be
 'Tis ours to trace him only in our own. [known,
 He, who through vast immensity can pierce,
 See worlds on worlds compose one universe,
 Observe how system into system runs,
 What other planets circle other suns,
 What varied being peoples every star,
 May tell why heavens has made us as we are.
 But of this frame, the bearings and the ties,
 The strong connexions, nice dependencies, 30
 Gradations just, has thy pervading soul
 Look'd through? or can a part contain the whole?

Is the great chain that draws all to agree,
 And drawn supports, upheld by God, or thee?

II. Presumptuous man! the reason wouldst thou
 Why form'd so weak, so little and so blind? [find,
 First, if thou canst, the harder reason guess,
 Why form'd no weaker, blinder, and no less?
 Ask of thy mother earth, why oaks are made
 Taller or stronger than the weeds they shade? 40
 Or ask of yonder argent fields above,
 Why Jove's satellites are less than Jove.

Of systems possible, if 'tis confess'd,
 That wisdom infinite must form the best,
 Where all must fail or not coherent be,
 And all that rises, rise in due degree;
 Then, in the scale of reasoning life, 'tis plain,
 There must be somewhere, such a rank as man:
 And all the question (wrangle e'er so long)
 Is only this, if God has placed him wrong? 50

Respecting man, whatever wrong we call,
 May, must be right, as relative to all.
 In human works, though labour'd on with pain,
 A thousand movements scarce one purpose gain:
 In God's one single can its end produce;
 Yet serve to second too some other use:

So man who here seems principal alone,
 Perhaps acts second to some sphere unknown,
 Touches some wheel, or verges to some goal :
 'Tis but a part we see, and not a whole. 60

When the proud steed shall know why man restrains
 His fiery course, or drives him o'er the plains ;
 When the dull ox, why now he breaks the clod,
 Is now a victim, and now Egypt's god,
 Then shall man's pride and dulness comprehend
 His actions', passions', being's use and end ;
 Why doing, suffering, check'd, impell'd ; and why
 This hour a slave, the next a deity.

Then say not man's imperfect, Heaven in fault :
 Say rather, man's as perfect as he ought : 70
 His knowledge measured to his state and place,
 His time a moment, and a point his space.
 If to be perfect in a certain sphere,
 What matter, soon or late, or here or there ?
 The bless'd to-day is as completely so,
 As who began a thousand years ago.

III. Heaven from all creatures hides the book of fate,
 All but the page prescribed, their present state ;
 From brutes what men, from men what spirits know
 Or who could suffer being here below ? 80
 The lamb thy riot dooms to bleed to-day,
 Had he thy reason, would he skip and play ?
 Pleased to the last, he crops the flowery food,
 And licks the hand just raised to shed his blood.
 Oh blindness to the future ! kindly given,
 That each may fill the circle mark'd by Heaven ;
 Who sees with equal eye, as God of all,
 A hero perish, or a sparrow fall,
 Atoms or systems into ruin hurl'd,
 And now a bubble burst, and now a world. 90

Hope humbly then ; with trembling pinions soar
 Wait the great teacher, Death ; and God adore.
 What future bliss, he gives not thee to know,
 But gives that hope to be thy blessing now.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast .
 Man never Is, but always To be bless'd :
 The soul, uneasy, and confined from home,
 Rests and expatiates on a life to come.

Lo, the poor Indian ! whose untutor'd mind
 Sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind ; 100
 His soul proud science never taught to stray
 Far as the solar walk, or milky way ;
 Yet simple nature to his hope has given,
 Bcaind the cloud-topp'd hill, an humbler heaven ;
 Some safer world in depth of woods embraced,
 Some happier island in the watery waste,
 Where slaves once more their native land behold
 No fiends torment, no Christians thirst for gold.
 To be, contents his natural desire,
 He asks no angel's wing, no seraph's fire ; 110
 But thinks, admitted to that equal sky,
 His faithful dog shall bear him company.

IV. Go wiser thou ! and in thy scale of sense,
 Weigh thy opinion against Providence ;
 Call imperfection what thou fanciest such
 Say, here he gives too little, there too much
 Destroy all creatures for thy sport or gust,
 Yet say, if man's unhappy, God's unjust .
 If man alone engross not Heaven's high care,
 Alone made perfect here, immortal there : 120
 Snatch from his hand the balance and the rod,
 Re-judge his justice, be the god of God.
 In pride, in reasoning pride, our error lies ;
 All quit their sphere, and rush into the skies.
 Pride still is aiming at the bless'd abodes,
 Men would be angels, angels would be gods.
 Aspiring to be gods, if angels fell,
 Aspiring to be angels, men rebel :
 And who but wishes to invert the laws
 Of order, sins against the Eternal Cause 130

V. Ask for what end the heavenly bodies shine,
 Earth for whose use ? Pride answers, 'Tis for mine :

For me kind nature wakes her genial power ;
 Suckles each herb, and spreads out every flower
 Annual for me, the grape, the rose, renew
 The juice nectareous, and the balmy dew,
 For me, the mine a thousand treasures brings ;
 For me, health gushes from a thousand springs ;
 Seas roll to waft me, suns to light me rise ;
 My foot-stool earth, my canopy the skies.' 140

But errs not nature from this gracious end,
 From burning suns when livid deaths descend,
 When earthquakes swallow, or when tempests sweep
 Towns to one grave, whole nations to the deep ?
 'No,' 'tis replied, 'the first Almighty Cause
 Acts not by partial, but by general laws ;'
 The exceptions few ; some change since all began ;
 And what created perfect ?—Why then man ?
 If the great end be human happiness,
 Then nature deviates ; and can man do less ? 150
 As much that end a constant course requires
 Of showers and sun-shine, as of man's desires ?
 As much eternal springs and cloudless skies,
 As men for ever temperate, calm, and wise.
 If plagues or earthquakes break not Heaven's design,
 Why then a Borgia, or a Catiline ?
 Who knows, but he whose hand the lightning forms,
 Who heaves old Ocean, and who wings the storms,
 Pours fierce ambition in a Cæsar's mind,
 Or turns young Ammon loose to scourge mankind ? 160
 From pride, from pride, our very reasoning springs ;
 Account for moral as for natural things :
 Why charge we Heaven in those, in these acquit ?
 In both, to reason right, is to submit.

Better for us, perhaps, it might appear,
 Were there all harmony, all virtue here ;
 That never air or ocean felt the wind,
 That never passion discomposed the mind.
 But all subsists by elemental strife ;
 And passions are the elements of life. . 170

The general order since the whole began,
Is kept in nature, and is kept in man.

VI. What would this man? Now upward will he soar
And, little less than angel, would be more ;
Now looking downwards, just as grieved appears
To want the strength of bulls, the fur of bears.
Made for his use all creatures if he call,
Say what their use, had he the powers of all ?
Nature to these, without profusion, kind,
The proper organs, proper powers assign'd ; 180
Each seeming want compensated ; of course,
Here with degrees of swiftness, there of force ;
All in exact proportion to the state ;
Nothing to add, and nothing to abate.
Each beast, each insect, happy in its own :
Is Heaven unkind to man, and man alone ?
Shall he alone, whom rational we call,
Be pleased with nothing, if not bless'd with all ?

The bliss of man (could pride that blessing find)
Is not to act or think beyond mankind ; 190
No powers of body or of soul to share,
But what his nature and his state can bear.
Why has not man a microscopic eye ?
For this plain reason, man is not a fly.
Say what the use, were finer optics given,
To inspect a mite, not comprehend the heaven ?
Or touch, if tremblingly alive all o'er,
To smart and agonize at every pore ?
Or quick effluvia darting through the brain,
Die of a rose in aromatic pain ? 200
If Nature thunder'd in his opening ears,
And stunn'd him with the music of the spheres,
How would he wish that Heaven had left him still
The whispering zephyr, and the purling rill !
Who finds not Providence all good and wise,
Alike in what it gives, and what denies ?

VII. Far as creation's ample range extends,
The scale of sensual, mental, powers ascends :

Mark how it mounts to man's imperial race,
 From the green myriads in the peopled grass: 210
 What modes of sight betwixt each wide extreme,
 The mole's dim curtain, and the lynx's beam;
 Of smell, the headlong lioness between,
 And hound sagacious on the tainted green;
 Of hearing, from the life that fills the flood,
 To that which warbles through the vernal wood!
 The spider's touch how exquisitely fine!
 Feels at each thread, and lives along the line;
 In the nice bee, what sense so subtly true,
 From poisonous herbs extracts the healing dew? 220
 How instinct varies in the grovelling swine,
 Compared, half-reasoning elephant, with thine?
 Twixt that and reason what a nice barrier;
 For ever separate, yet for ever near!
 Remembrance and reflection how allied;
 What thin partitions sense from thought divide!
 And middle natures, how they long to join,
 Yet never pass the insuperable line!
 Without this just gradation, could they be Subjected, these to those, or all to thee? 230
 The powers of all subdued by thee alone,
 Is not thy reason all these powers in one?

VIII. See, through this air, this ocean, and this earth,
 All matter quick, and bursting into birth.
 Above, how high progressive life may go!
 Around, how wide! how deep extend below!
 Vast chain of being! which from God began,
 Natures ethereal, human, angel, man,
 Beast, bird, fish, insect, which no eye can see,
 No glass can reach; from infinite to thee; 240
 From thee to nothing.—On superior powers
 Were we to press, inferior might on ours;
 Or in the full creation leave a void,
 Where, one step broken, the great scale's destroy'd
 From nature's chain whatever link you strike,
 •enth, or ten thousandth, breaks the chain alike.

And, if each system in gradation roll
 Alike essential to the amazing whole,
 The least confusion but in one, not all
 That system only, but the whole must fall. 254
 Let earth unbalanced from her orbit fly,
 Planets and suns run lawless through the sky;
 Let ruling angels from their spheres be hurl'd,
 Being on being wreck'd, and world on world;
 Heaven's whole foundations to their centre nod,
 And nature trembles to the throne of God.
 All this dread order break—for whom? for thee?
 Vile worm!—oh madness! pride! impiety!

IX. What if the foot, ordain'd the dust to tread,
 Or hand, to toil, aspir'd to be the head? 263
 What if the head, the eye, or ear, repined
 To serve mere engines to the ruling mind?
 Just as absurd for any part to claim
 To be another in this general frame;
 Just as absurd, to mourn the task or pains
 The great directing Mind of all ordains.

All are but parts of one stupendous whole,
 Whose body Nature is, and God the soul;
 That, changed through all, and yet in all the same,
 Great in the earth, as in the ethereal frame; 270
 Warms in the sun, refreshes in the breeze,
 Glows in the stars, and blossoms in the trees;
 Lives through all life, extends through all extent,
 Spreads undivided, operates unspent;
 Breathes in our soul, informs our mortal part,
 As full, as perfect, in a hair as heart;
 As full, as perfect, in vile man that mourns,
 As the rapt seraph that adores and burns;
 To him no high, no low, no great, no small;
 He fills, he bounds, connects, and equals all. 280

X. Cease then, nor order imperfection name:
 Our proper bliss depends on what we blame.
 Know thy own point: this kind, this due degree
 Of blindness, weakness, Heaven bestows on thee.

Submit.--In this, or any other sphere,
 Secure to be as bless'd as thou canst bear :
 Safe in the hand of one disposing Power, <sup>1</sup>
 Or in the natal, or the mortal hour.
 All nature is but art, unknown to thee
 All chance, direction which thou canst not see : 294
 All discord, harmony not understood ;
 All partial evil, universal good.
 And, spite of pride, in erring reason's spite,
 One truth is clear, WHATEVER IS, IS RIGHT.

 ARGUMENT OF EPISTLE II.

On the Nature and State of Man with respect to himself, as an Individual.

I. The business of man not to pry into God, but to study himself. His middle nature; his powers and frailties, ver. 1 to 19. The limits of his capacity, ver. 19, &c. II. The two principles of man, self-love and reason, both necessary, ver. 53, &c. Self-love the stronger, and why, ver. 67, &c. Their end the same, ver. 81, &c. III. The passions, and their use, ver. 93 to 130. The predominant passion, and its force, ver. 132 to 160. Its necessity, in directing men to different purposes, ver. 165, &c. Its providential use, in fixing our principle, and ascertaining our virtue, ver. 177. IV. Virtue and vice joined in our mixed nature; the limits near, yet the things separate and evident: what is the office of reason, ver. 202 to 216. V. How odious vice in itself, and how we deceive ourselves into it, ver. 217. VI. That, however, the ends of Providence and general good are answered in our passions and imperfections, ver. 231, &c. How usefully these are distributed to all orders of men, ver. 241. How useful they are to society, ver. 251. And to individuals, ver. 263. In every state, and every age of life, ver. 273, &c.

EPISTLE II.

I. Know then thyself, presume not God to scan
 The proper study of mankind is man.

Placed on this isthmus of a middle state,
 A being darkly wise, and rudely great :
 With too much knowledge for the sceptic side,
 With too much weakness for the Stoic's pride,
 He hangs between ; in doubt to act, or rest ;
 In doubt to deem himself a god, or beast ;
 In doubt his mind or body to prefer ;
 Born but to die, and reasoning but to err ; 10
 Alike in ignorance, his reason such,
 Whether he thinks too little or too much ;
 Chaos of thought and passion, all confused ;
 Still by himself abused or disabused ;
 Created half to rise, or half to fall ;
 Great lord of all things, yet a prey to all ;
 Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurl'd
 The glory, jest, and riddle of the world !

Go, wondrous creature! mount where science guides,
 Go, measure earth, weigh air, and state the tides ; 20
 Instruct the planets in what orbs to run,
 Correct old time, and regulate the sun ;
 Go, soar with Plato to the empyreal sphere,
 To the first good, first perfect, and first fair ;
 Or tread the mazy round his followers trod,
 And quitting sense call imitating God ;
 As Eastern priests in giddy circles run,
 And turn their heads to imitate the sun.
 Go, teach Eternal Wisdom how to rule—
 Then drop into thyself, and be a fool ! 30

Superior beings, when of late they saw
 A mortal man unfold all nature's law,
 Admired such wisdom in an earthly shape,
 And show'd a Newton as we show an ape.

Could he, whose rules the rapid comet bind,
 Describe or fix one movement of his mind ?
 Who saw its fires here rise, and there descend,
 Explain his own beginning or his end ?
 Alas, what wonder ! Man's superior part
 Uncheck'd may rise, and climb from art to art ; 40

But when his own great work is but begun,
 What reason weaves, by passion is undone,
 Trace science then, with modesty thy guide;
 First strip off all her equipage of pride:
 Deduct what is but vanity or dress,
 Or learning's luxury, or idleness:
 Or tricks to show the stretch of human brain,
 Mere curious pleasure, or ingenious pain:
 Expunge the whole, or lop the excrescent parts
 Of all our vices have created arts: 50

Then see how little the remaining sum,
 Which served the past, and must the times to come!

II. Two principles in human nature reign;
 Self-love to urge, and reason to restrain:
 Nor this a good, nor that a bad we call,
 Each works its end, to move or govern all:
 And to their proper operation still,
 Ascribe all good, to their improper, ill. -

Self-love, the spring of motion, acts the soul
 Reason's comparing balance rules the whole. 60
 Man, but for that, no action could attend,
 And, but for this, were active to no end:
 Fix'd like a plant on his peculiar spot,
 To draw nutrition, propagate, and rot;
 Or, meteor-like, flame lawless through the void,
 Destroying others, by himself destroy'd.

Most strength the moving principle requires;
 Active its task, it prompts, impels, inspires.
 Sedate and quiet the comparing lies,
 Form'd but to check, deliberate, and advise. 70
 Self-love still stronger, as its object's nigh;
 Reason's at distance, and in prospect lie:
 That sees immediate good by present sense;
 Reason, the future and the consequence.
 Thicker than arguments temptations throng,
 At best more watchful this, but that more strong.
 The action of the stronger to suspend,
 Reason still use, to reason still attend.

Attention habit and experience gains ;
 Each strengthens reason, and self-love restrains. 80
 Let subtle schoolmen teach these friends to fight,
 More studious to divide than to unite ;
 And grace and virtue, sense and reason split,
 With all the rash dexterity of wit.
 Wits, just like fools, at war about a name,
 Have full as oft no meaning or the same.
 Self-love and reason to one end aspire,
 Pain their aversion, pleasure their desire ;
 But greedy that, its object would devour,
 This taste the honey, and not wound the flower : 90
 Pleasure, or wrong or rightly understood,
 Our greatest evil, or our greatest good.

III. Modes of self-love the passions we may call
 'Tis real good, or seeming, moves them all :
 But since not every good we can divide,
 And reason bids us for our own provide :
 Passions, though selfish, if their means be fair,
 List under reason, and deserve her care ;
 Those, that imparted, court a nobler aim,
 Exalt their kind, and take some virtue's name. 100

In lazy apathy let Stoics boast
 Their virtue's fix'd : 'tis fix'd as in a frost ;
 Contracted all, retiring to the breast ;
 But strength of mind is exercise, not rest :
 The rising tempest puts in act the soul ;
 Parts it may ravage, but preserve the whole.
 On life's vast ocean diversely we sail,
 Reason the card, but passion is the gale ;
 Nor God alone in the still calm we find,
 He mounts the storm, and walks upon the wind. 110

Passions, like elements, though born to fight,
 Yet mix'd and soften'd, in his work unite :
 These 'tis enough to temper and employ ;
 But what composes man, can man destroy ?
 Suffice that reason keep to nature's road,
 Subject, compound them, follow her and God.

Love, hope, and joy, fair pleasure's smiling train ;
 Hate, fear, and grief, the family of pain ;
 These mix'd with art, and to due bounds confin'd,
 Make and maintain the balance of the mind : 120
 The lights and shades, whose well-accorded strife
 Gives all the strength and colour of our life.

Pleasures are ever in our hands and eyes ;
 And when in act they cease, in prospect rise :
 Present to grasp, and future still to find,
 The whole employ of body and of mind,
 All spread their charms, but charm not all alike
 On different senses, different objects strike :
 Hence different passions more or less inflame,
 As strong or weak, the organs of the frame ; 130
 And hence one master passion in the breast.

Like Aaron's serpent, swallows up the rest.
 As man, perhaps, the moment of his breath,
 Receives the lurking principle of death ;
 The young disease, which must subdue at length,
 Grows with his growth, and strengthens with his
 So, cast and mingled with his very frame, [strength :
 The mind's disease, its ruling passion came ;
 Each vital humour, which should feed the whole,
 Soon flows to this, in body and in soul : 140

Whatever warms the heart, or fills the head,
 As the mind opens, and its functions spread.
 Imagination plies her dangerous art,
 And pours it all upon the peccant part.
 Nature its mother, habit is its nurse ;
 Wit, spirit, faculties, but make it worse ;
 Reason itself but gives it edge and power ;
 As Heaven's blest beam turns vinegar more sour.

We wretched subjects, though no lawful sway,
 In this weak queen some favourite still obey ; 150
 Ah ! if she lent not arms, as well as rules,
 What can she more than tell us we are fools ?
 Teach us to mourn our nature, not to mend :
 A sharp accuser, but a helpless friend !

Or from a judge turn pleader, to persuade
 The choice we make, or justify it made;
 Proud of an easy conquest all along,
 She but removes weak passions for the strong.
 So, when small humours gather to a gout,
 The doctor fancies he has driven them out. 164

Yes, nature's road must ever be preferr'd;
 Reason is here no guide, but still a guard;
 'Tis hers to rectify, not overthrow,
 And treat this passion more as friend than foe:
 A mightier power the strong direction sends,
 And several men impels to several ends:
 Like varying winds by other passions toss'd,
 This drives them constant to a certain coast.
 Let power or knowledge, gold or glory, please,
 Or (oft more strong than all) the love of ease; 170
 Through life 'tis follow'd e'en at life's expense;
 The merchant's toil, the sage's indolence,
 The monk's humility, the hero's pride,
 All, all alike, find reason on their side

The Eternal Art, educing good from ill,
 Grafts on this passion our best principle:
 'Tis thus the mercury of man is fix'd,
 Strong grows the virtue with his nature mix'd:
 The dross cements what else were too refined,
 And in one interest body acts with mind. 180

As fruits, ungrateful to the planter's care,
 On savage stocks inserted learn to bear;
 The surest virtues thus from passions shoot,
 Wild nature's vigour working at the root.
 What crops of wit and honesty appear
 From spleen, from obstinacy, hate, or fear!
 See anger, zeal and fortitude supply;
 E'en avarice, prudence; sloth, philosophy;
 Lust, through some certain strainers well refined,
 Is gentle love, and charms all womankind; 190
 Envy, to which the ignoble mind 's a slave,
 Is emulation in the learn'd or brave;

Nor virtue, male or female, can we name,
But what will grow on pride, or grow on shame.

Thus Nature gives us (let it check our pride)

The virtue nearest to our vice allied :

Reason the bias turns to good from ill,

And Nero reigns a Titus, if he will.

The fiery soul abhorr'd in Catiline,

In Decius charms, in Curtius is divine : 200

The same ambition can destroy or save,

And makes a patriot as it makes a knave.

IV. This light and darkness in our chaos join'd,

What shall divide? The God within the mind.

Extremes in nature equal ends produce,

In man they join to some mysterious use ;

Though each by turns the other's bounds invade,

As, in some well-wrought picture, light and shade,

And oft so mix, the difference is too nice

Where ends the virtue, or begins the vice. 210

Fools ! who from hence into the notion fall,

That vice and virtue there is none at all.

If white and black blend, soften, and unite

A thousand ways, is there no black or white ?

Ask your own heart, and nothing is so plain ;

'Tis to mistake them, costs the time and pain.

V. Vice is a monster of so frightful mein,

As, to be hated, needs but to be seen ;

Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,

We first endure, then pity, then embrace. 220

But where the extreme of vice, was ne'er agreed ;

Ask where's the north ? at York, 'tis on the Tweed ;

In Scotland, at the Orcades ; and there,

At Greenland, Zembla, or the Lord knows where.

No creature owns it in the first degree,

But thinks his neighbour farther gone than he :

E'en those who dwell beneath its very zone,

Or never feel the rage, or never own ;

What happier nature shrink at with affright

The hard inhabitant contends is right. 230

Virtuous and vicious every man must be,
 Few in the extreme, but all in the degree ;
 The rogue and fool by fits is fair and wise ;
 And e'en the best, by fits, what they despise.
 'Tis but by parts we follow good or ill ;
 For, vice or virtue, self directs it still ;
 Each individual seeks a several goal ;
 But Heaven's great view, is one, and that the whole.
 That counterworks each folly and caprice ;
 That disappoints the effects of every vice ;      240
 That, happy frailties to all ranks applied,
 Shame to the virgin, to the matron pride ;
 Fear to the statesman, rashness to the chief ;
 To kings presumption, and to crowds belief :
 That, virtue's ends from vanity can raise,
 Which seeks no interest, no reward but praise ;
 And build on wants, and on defects of mind,
 The joy, the peace, the glory of mankind.

Heaven forming each on other to depend
 A master, or a servant, or a friend,      250
 Bids each on other for assistance call,
 Till one man's weakness grows the strength of all.
 Wants, frailties, passions, closer still ally
 The common interest, or endear the tie.
 To these we owe true friendship, love sincere,
 Each home-felt joy that life inherits here ;
 Yet from the same we learn, in its decline
 Those joys, those loves, those interests, to resign.
 Taught half by reason, half by mere decay,
 To welcome death, and calmly pass away.      260

Whate'er the passion, knowledge, fame, or pelf,
 Not one will change his neighbour with himself.
 The learn'd is happy nature to explore,
 The fool is happy that he knows no more ;
 The rich is happy in the plenty given ;
 The poor contents him with the care of Heaven.
 See the blind beggar dance, the cripple sing,
 The sot a hero, lunatic a king ;

The starving chemist in his golden views
Supremely bless'd ; the poet in his muse. 270

See some strange comfort every state attend
And pride bestow'd on all, a common friend :
See some fit passion every age supply ;
Hope travels through, nor quits us when we die.

Behold the child, by nature's kindly law,
Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw :
Some livelier play-thing gives his youth delight,
A little louder, but as empty quite :
Scarfs, garters, gold, amuse his riper stage,
And beads and prayer-books are the toys of age: 280
Pleased with this bauble still, as that before ;
'Till tired, he sleeps, and life's poor play is o'er.

Meanwhile opinion gilds with varying rays,
Those painted clouds that beautify our days :
Each want of happiness by hope supplied,
And each vacuity of sense by pride :
These build as fast as knowledge can destroy,
In folly's cup still laughs the bubble joy ;
One prospect lost, another still we gain ; 290
And not a vanity is given in vain ;
E'en mean self-love becomes, by force divine,
The scale to measure others' wants by thine.
See ! and confess, one comfort still must rise ;
'Tis this, Though man 's a fool, yet God is WISE.

EPISTLE III.

HERE then we rest : 'The universal cause
Acts to one end, but acts by various laws.'
In all the madness of superfluous health,
The train of pride, the impudence of wealth,
Let this great truth be present night and day
But most be present, if we preach or pray.

I. Look round our world ; behold the chain of love
Combining all below and all above.

See plastic Nature working to this end,

The single atoms each to other tend, 10

Attract, attracted to, the next in place

Form'd and impell'd its neighbour to embrace.

See matter next, with various life endued,

Press to one centre still, the general good.

See dying vegetables life sustain,

See life dissolving vegetate again :

All forms that perish other forms supply,

(By turns we catch the vital breath and die.)

Like bubbles on the sea of matter borne,

They rise, they break, and to that sea return. 20

Nothing is foreign ; parts relate to whole ;

One all-extending, all-preserving soul

Connects each being, greatest with the least ;
 Made beast in aid of man, and man of beast ;
 All served, all serving : nothing stands alone ;
 The chain holds on, and where it ends, unknown.

Has God, thou fool ! work'd solely for thy good,
 Thy joy, thy pastime, thy attire, thy food ?
 Who for thy table feeds the wanton fawn
 For him has kindly spread the flowery lawn : 30
 Is it for thee the lark ascends and sings ?

Joy tunes his voice, joy elevates his wings.
 Is it for thee the linnet pours his throat ?
 Loves of his own, and raptures, swell the note
 The bounding steed you pompously bestride,
 Shares with his lord the pleasure and the pride.
 Is thine alone the seed that strews the plain ?
 The birds of heaven shall vindicate their grain.
 Thine the full harvest of the golden year ?
 Part pays, and justly, the deserving steer : 40
 The hog, that ploughs not, nor obeys thy call,
 Lives on the labours of this lord of all.

Know, Nature's children all divide her care ;
 The fur that warms a monarch, warm'd a bear.
 While man exclaims, ' See all things for my use !'
 ' See man for mine !' replies a pamper'd goose :
 And just as short of reason he must fall,
 Who thinks all made for one, not one for all.

Grant that the powerful still the weak control :
 Be man the wit and tyrant of the whole : 50
 Nature that tyrant checks : he only knows,
 And helps another creature's wants and woes.
 Say, will the falcon, stooping from above
 Smit with her varying plumage, spare the dove ?
 Admires the jay the insect's gilded wings ?
 Or hears the hawk when Philomela sings ?
 Man cares for all : to birds he gives his woods,
 To beasts his pastures, and to fish his floods :
 For some his interest prompts him to provide,
 For more his pleasure, yet for more his pride. 60

And feed on one vain patron, and enjoy
 The extensive blessing of his luxury.
 That very life his learned hunger craves,
 He saves from famine, from the savage saves ;
 Nay, feasts the animal he dooms his feast,
 And, till he ends the being, makes it bless'd :
 Which sees no more the stroke, or feels the pain,
 Than favour'd man by touch ethereal slain.
 The creature had his feast of life before ;
 Thou too must perish, when thy feast is o'er !     70
 To each unthinking being, Heaven a friend,
 Gives not the useless knowledge of its end :
 To man imparts it ; but with such a view,
 As, while he dreads it, makes him hope it too :
 The hour conceal'd, and so remote the fear,
 Death still draws nearer, never seeming near.
 Great standing miracle ! that Heaven assign'd
 Its only thinking thing this turn of mind.

II. Whether with reason or with instinct bless'd,
 Know, all enjoy that power which suits them best ; 80
 To bliss alike by that direction tend,
 And find the means proportion'd to their end.
 Say, where full instinct is the unerring guide,
 What pope or council can they need beside ?
 Reason, however able, cool at best,
 Cares not for service, or but serves when press'd,
 Stays till we call, and then not often near ;
 But honest instinct comes a volunteer,
 Sure never to o'ershoot, but just to hit ;
 While still too wide or short is human wit ;     90
 Sure by quick nature happiness to gain,
 Which heavier reason labours at in vain.
 This too serves always, reason never long :
 One must go right, the other may go wrong.
 See then the acting and comparing powers,
 One in their nature, which are two in ours !
 And reason raise o'er instinct as you can,
 In this 'tis God directs, in that 'tis man.

Who taught the nations of the field and wood
 To shun their poison, and to choose their food ? 100
 Prescient, the tides or tempest to withstand,
 Build on the wave, or arch beneath the sand ?
 Who made the spider parallels design,
 Sure as De Moivre, without rule or line ?
 Who bid the stork, Columbus-like, explore
 Heavens not his own, and worlds unknown before ;
 Who culls the council, states the certain day ;
 Who forms the phalanx, and who points the way ?

III. God, in the nature of each being, founds
 Its proper bliss, and sets its proper bounds : 110
 But as he fram'd a whole the whole to bless,
 On mutual wants built mutual happiness ;
 So from the first eternal order ran,
 And creature link'd to creature, man to man.
 Whate'er of life all-quickening ether keeps,
 Or breathes through air, or shoots beneath the deeps,
 Or pours profuse on earth, one nature feeds
 The vital flame, and swells the genial seeds.
 Not man alone, but all that roam the wood,
 Or wing the sky, or roll along the flood, 120
 Each loves itself, but not itself alone,
 Each sex desires alike, till two are one.
 Nor ends the pleasure with the fierce embrace ;
 They love themselves, a third time, in their race.
 Thus beast and bird their common charge attend,
 The mothers nurse it, and the sires defend :
 The young dismiss'd to wander earth or air,
 There stops the instinct, and there ends the care ;
 The link dissolves, each seeks a fresh embrace,
 Another love succeeds, another race. 130
 A longer care man's helpless kind demands ;
 That longer care contracts more lasting bands ;
 Reflection, reason, still the ties improve,
 At once extend the interest, and the love :
 With choice we fix, with sympathy we burn ;
 Each virtue in each passion takes its turn ;

And still new deeds, new helps, new habits rise,
 That graft benevolence on charities.
 Still as one brood, and as another rose,
 These natural love maintain'd, habitual those: 140
 The last, scarce ripen'd into perfect man,
 Saw helpless him from whom their life began :
 Memory and forecast just returns engage ;
 That pointed back to youth, this on to age ;
 While pleasure, gratitude, and hope combined,
 Still spread the interest, and preserve the kind.

IV. Nor think, in nature's state they blindly trod ;
 The state of nature was the reign of God ;
 Self-love and social at her birth began,
 Union the bond of all things, and of man. 150
 Pride then was not ; nor arts, that pride to aid ;
 Man walk'd with beast, joint tenant of the shade :
 The same his table, and the same his bed ;
 No murder clothed him, and no murder fed.
 In the same temple, the resounding wood,
 All vocal beings hymn'd their equal God :
 The shrine with gore unstain'd, with gold undress'd,
 Unbribed, unbloody, stood the blameless priest :
 Heaven's attribute was universal care,
 And man's prerogative, to rule, but spare. 160
 Ah ! how unlike the man of times to come !
 Of half that live the butcher and the tomb ;
 Who, foe to nature, hears the general groan,
 Murders their species, and betrays his own.
 But just disease to luxury succeeds,
 And every death its own avenger breeds :
 The fury-passions from that blood began,
 And turn'd on man a fiercer savage, man.

See him from nature rising slow to art :
 To copy instinct then was reason's part. 170
 Thus then to man the voice of nature spake—
 ' Go, from the creatures thy instructions take :
 Learn from the birds what food the thickets yield ;
 Learn from the beasts the physic of the field ;

Thy arts of building from the bee receive ;
 Learn of the mole to plough, the worm to weave ;
 Learn of the little Nautilus to sail,
 Spread the thin oar, and catch the driving gale.
 Here too all forms of social union find,
 And hence let reason, late, instruct mankind : 180
 Here subterranean works and cities see ;
 There towns aerial on the waving tree.
 Learn each small people's genius, policies,
 The ant's republic, and the realm of bees ;
 How those in common all their wealth bestow,
 And anarchy without confusion know ;
 And these for ever, though a monarch reign,
 Their separate cells and properties maintain.
 Mark what unvaried laws preserve each state,
 Laws wise as nature, and as fix'd as fate. 190
 In vain thy reason finer webs shall draw,
 Entangle justice in her net of law,
 And right, too rigid, harden into wrong ;
 Still for the strong too weak, the weak too strong.
 Yet go! and thus o'er all the creatures sway,
 Thus let the wiser make the rest obey :
 And for those arts mere instinct could afford,
 Be crown'd as monarchs, or as gods adored.
 V. Great nature spoke : observant man obey'd ;
 Cities were built, societies were made : 200
 Here rose one little state ; another near
 Grew by like means, and join'd through love or fear.
 Did here the trees with ruddier burdens bend,
 And there the streams in purer rills descend ?
 What war could ravish, commerce could bestow :
 And he return'd a friend, who came a foe.
 Converse and love mankind might justly draw,
 When love was liberty, and nature law.
 Thus states were form'd ; the name of king unknown,
 Till common interest placed the sway in one. 210
 'Twas virtue only (or in arts or arms, Diffusing blessings, or averting harms,)

The same which in a sire the sons obey'd,
A prince the father of a people made. [sate

VI. Till then, by nature crown'd each patriarch
King, priest, and parent, of his growing state :

On him, their second Providence, they hung,
Their law his eye, their oracle his tongue.
He from the wandering furrow call'd the food,
Taught to command the fire, control the flood, 220
Draw forth the monsters of the abyss profound,
Or fetch the aerial eagle to the ground.

Till drooping, sickening, dying, they began
Whom they revered as god to mourn as man :
Then looking up from sire to sire, explored
One great First Father, and that first adored.
On plain tradition, that this all begun,
Convey'd unbroken faith from sire to son.
The worker from the work distinct was known,
And simple reason never sought but one : 230

Ere wit oblique had broke that steady light,
Man, like his Maker, saw that all was right :
To virtue, in the paths of pleasure trod,
And own'd a father when he own'd a God.
Love all the faith, and all the allegiance then
For nature knew no right divine in men
No ill could fear in God, and understood
A sovereign being, but a sovereign good.
True faith, true policy, united ran ;
That was but love of God, and this of man. 240

Who first taught souls enslaved, and realms un-
The enormous faith of many made for one ; [done,
That proud exception to all nature's laws,
To invert the world, and counterwork its cause,
Force first made conquest, and that conquest, law ;
Till superstition taught the tyrant awe.
Then shared the tyranny, then lent it aid,
And gods of conquerors, slaves of subjects made :
She midst the lightning's blaze, and thunder's sound,
When rock'd the mountains, and when groan'd the
ground, 250

She taught the weak to bend, the proud to pray,
 To power unseen, and mightier far than they :
 She, from the rending earth, and bursting skies,
 Saw gods descend, and fiends infernal rise :
 Here fix'd the dreadful, there the blest abodes,
 Fear made her devils, and weak hope her gods ;
 Gods partial, changeful, passionate, unjust,
 Whose attributes were rage, revenge, or lust ;
 Such as the souls of cowards might conceive,
 And, form'd like tyrants, tyrants would believe. 260
 Zeal, then, not charity, became the guide ;
 And hell was built on spite, and heaven on pride.
 Then sacred seem'd the ethereal vault no more ;
 Altars grew marble then, and reek'd with gore
 Then first the flamen tasted living food,
 Next his grim idol smear'd with human blood ;
 With Heaven's own thunders shook the world below,
 And play'd the god an engine on his foe.

So drives self-love, through just and through unjust,
 To one man's power, ambition, lucre, lust ; 270
 The same self-love in all becomes the cause
 Of what restrains him, government and laws.
 For what one likes, if others like as well,
 What serves one will, when many wills rebel ?
 How shall he keep what, sleeping or awake.
 A weaker may surprise, a stronger take ?
 His safety must his liberty restrain :
 All join to guard what each desires to gain.
 Forced into virtue thus, by self-defence,
 E'en kings learn'd justice and benevolence : 280
 Self-love forsook the path it first pursued,
 And found the private in the public good.

'Twas then the studious head or generous mind,
 Follower of God, or friend of human-kind,
 Poet or patriot, rose but to restore
 The faith and moral nature gave before ;
 Resumed her ancient light, not kindled new ;
 If not God's image, yet his shadow drew ;

Taught power's due use to people and to kings,
 Taught nor to slack, nor strain its tender strings, 290
 The less or greater set so justly true,
 That touching one must strike the other too,
 Till jarring interests of themselves create
 The according music of a well-mix'd state.
 Such is the world's great harmony, that springs
 From order, union, full consent of things :
 Where small and great, where weak and mighty, made
 To serve, not suffer, strengthen, not invade ;
 More powerful each as needful to the rest,
 And, in proportion as it blesses, bless'd : 300
 Draw to one point, and to one centre bring
 Beast, man, or angel, servant, lord, or king.

For forms of government let fools contest ;
 Whate'er is best administer'd is best :
 For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight,
 His can't be wrong whose life is in the right ;
 In faith and hope the world will disagree,
 But all mankind's concern is charity ;
 All must be false, that thwarts this one great end ;
 And all of God, that bless mankind, or mend. 310

Man, like the generous vine, supported lives ;
 The strength he gains is from the embrace he gives
 On their own axis as the planets run,
 Yet make at once their circle round the sun ;
 So two consistent motions act the soul ;
 And one regards itself, and one the whole.

Thus God and Nature link'd the general frame,
 And bade self-love and social be the same.

ARGUMENT OF EPISTLE IV.

Of the Nature and State of Man with respect to Happiness.

I. False notions of happiness, philosophical and popular, answered, from ver. 19 to 77. II. It is the ene of all men, and attainable by all, ver. 30. God intends happiness to be equal; and, to be so, it must be social, since all particular happiness depends on general, and since he governs by general, not particular laws, ver. 37. As it is necessary for order, and the peace and welfare of society, that external goods should be unequal, happiness is not made to consist in those, ver. 51. But, notwithstanding that inequality, the balance of happiness among mankind is kept even by Providence, by the two passions of hope and fear, ver. 70. III. What the happiness of individuals is, as far as is consistent with the constitution of this world; and that the good man has here the advantage, ver. 77. The error of imputing to virtue what are only the calamities of nature, or of fortune, ver. 94. IV. The folly of expecting that God should alter his general laws in favour of particulars, ver. 121. V. That we are not judges who are good; but that, whoever they are, they must be happiest, ver. 133, &c. VI. That external goods are not the proper rewards, but often inconsistent with, or destructive of, virtue, ver. 167. That even these can make no man happy without virtue; instanced in riches, ver. 185. Honours, ver. 193. Nobility, ver. 205. Greatness, ver. 217. Fame, ver. 237. Superior talents, ver. 257, &c. With pictures of human infelicity in men possessed of them all, ver. 259, &c. VII. That virtue only constitutes a happiness, whose object is universal, and whose prospect eternal, ver. 307. That the perfection of virtue and happiness consists in a conformity to the order of Providence here, and a resignation to it here and hereafter, ver. 326, &c.

EPISTLE IV.

Oh Happiness! our being's end and aim!
 Good, pleasure, ease, content! whate'er thy name:
 That something still which prompts the eternal sigh
 For which we bear to live, or dare to die -
 Which still so near us, yet beyond us lies,
 O'erlook'd, seen double, by the fool and wise,
 Plant of celestial seed! if dropp'd below
 Say, in what mortal soil thou deign'st to grow

Fair opening to some court's propitious shine,
 Or deep with diamonds in the flaming mine? 10
 Twined with the wreaths Parnassian laurels yield,
 Or reap'd in iron harvests of the field?

Where grows? where grows it not? If vain our toil
 We ought to blame the culture, not the soil:

Fix'd to no spot is happiness sincere,

'Tis no where to be found, or every where;

'Tis never to be bought, but always free,

And fled from monarchs, St. John! dwells with thee.

I. Ask of the learn'd the way? The learn'd are blind.

This bids to serve, and that to shun mankind; 20

Some place the bliss in action, some in ease,

Those call it pleasure, and contentment these.

Some, sunk to beasts, find pleasure end in pain:

Some, swell'd to gods, confess e'en virtue vain:

Or, indolent, to each extreme they fall.

To trust in every thing, or doubt of all.

Who thus define it, say they more or less

Than this, that happiness is happiness?

II. Take nature's path, and mad opinions leave;

All states can reach it, and all heads conceive: 30

Obvious her goods, in no extreme they dwell;

There needs but thinking right, and meaning well;

And, mourn our various portions as we please

Equal is common sense, and common ease.

Remember, man, 'the Universal Cause

Acts not by partial, but by general laws;

And makes what happiness we justly call,

Subsist not in the good of one, but all.

There's not a blessing individuals find,

But some way leans and hearkens to the kind 40

No bandit fierce, no tyrant mad with pride,

No cavern'd hermit, rests self-satisfied:

Who most to shun or hate mankind pretend,

Seek an admirer, or would fix a friend:

Abstract what others feel, what others think

All pleasures sicken, and all glories sink:

Each has his share ; and who would more obtain,
Shall find the pleasure pays not half the pain.

Order is Heaven's first law ; and this confess'd,
Some are, and must be, greater than the rest, 50
More rich, more wise ; but who infers from hence
That such are happier, shocks all common sense
Heaven to mankind impartial we confess,
If all are equal in their happiness :
But mutual wants this happiness increase ;
All nature's difference keeps all nature's peace
Condition, circumstance, is not the thing ;
Bliss is the same in subject or in king,
In who obtain defence, or who defend,
In him who is, or him who finds a friend : 60
Heaven breathes through every member of the whole
One common blessing, as one common soul.
But fortune's gifts, if each alike possess'd,
And each were equal, must not all contest ?
If then to all men happiness was meant,
God in externals could not place content.

Fortune her gifts may variously dispose,
And these be happy call'd, unhappy those ;
But Heaven's just balance equal will appear,
While those are placed in hope, and these in fear : 70
Not present good or ill, the joy or curse,
But future views of better or of worse.
O, sons of earth ! attempt ye still to rise,
By mountains piled on mountains, to the skies ?
Heaven still with laughter the vain toil surveys,
And buries madmen in the heaps they raise.

III. Know, all the good that individuals find,
Or God and nature meant to mere mankind,
Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words, health, peace, and competence, 80
But health consists with temperance alone ;
And peace, O virtue ! peace is all thy own.
The good or bad the gifts of fortune gain ;
But these less taste them, as they worse obtain.

Say, in pursuit of profit or delight,
 Who risk the most, that take wrong means, or right ?
 Of vice or virtue, whether bless'd or curs'd,
 Which meets contempt, or which compassion first ?
 Count all the advantage prosperous vice attains,
 'Tis but what virtue flies from and disdains :     90
 And grant the bad what happiness they would,
 One they must want, which is, to pass for good.
     Oh, blind to truth, and God's wholesome below,
 Who fancy bliss to vice, to virtue wo !
 Who sees and follows that great scheme the best,
 Best knows the blessing, and will most be bless'd.
 But fools the good alone unhappy call,
 For ills or accidents that chance to all.
 See Falkland dies, the virtuous and the just !
 See godlike Turenne prostrate on the dust !     100
 See Sidney bleeds amid the martial strife !
 Was this their virtue, or contempt of life !
 Say, was it virtue, more though Heaven ne'er gave,
 Lamented Digby ! sunk thee to the grave ?
 Tell me, if virtue made the son expire,
 Why, full of days and honour, lives the sire.
 Why drew Marseilles' good bishop purer breath,
 When nature sicken'd, and each gale was death ?
 Or why so long (in life if long can be)
 Lent Heaven a parent to the poor and me ?     110
     What makes all physical or moral ill ?
 There deviates nature, and here wanders will.
 God sends not ill, if rightly understood,
 Or partial ill is universal good,
 Or change admits, or nature lets it fall,
 Short, and but rare, till man improved it all.
 We just as wisely might of Heaven complain,
 That righteous Abel was destroy'd by Cain,
 As that the virtuous son is ill at ease
 When his lewd father gave the dire disease.     120
 Think we, like some weak prince, the Eternal Cause
 Prone for his favourites to reverse his laws !

IV. Shall burning Ætna, if a sage requires,
 Forget to thunder, and recall her fires !
 On air or sea new motions be impress'd,
 Oh blameless Bethel ! to relieve thy breast ?
 When the loose mountain trembles from on high,
 Shall gravitation cease if you go by ?
 Or some old temple, nodding to its fall,
 For Chartres' head reserve the hanging wall ? 130

V. But still this world (so fitted for the knave)
 Contents us not. A better shall we have ?
 A kingdom of the just then let it be :
 But first consider how those just agree.
 The good must merit God's peculiar care !
 But who, but God, can tell us who they are ?
 One thinks on Calvin Heaven's own spirit fell ;
 Another deems him instrument of hell :
 If Calvin feel Heaven's blessing, or its rod,
 This cries, there is, and that, there is no God. 140
 What shocks one part will edify the rest,
 Nor with one system can they all be bless'd.
 The very best will variously incline,
 And what rewards your virtue, punish mine.
 WHATEVER IS, IS RIGHT.—This world, 'tis true,
 Was made for Cæsar—but for Titus too ;
 And which more bless'd ? who chain'd his country say,

Or he whose virtue sigh'd to lose a day ?

VI. 'But sometimes virtue starves while vice is fed.'
 What then ? Is the reward of virtue bread ? 150
 That, vice may merit, 'tis the price of toil ;
 The knave deserves it, when he tills the soil ;
 The knave deserves it when he tempts the main ;
 Where folly fights for kings, or dives for gain
 The good man may be weak, be indolent ;
 Nor is his claim to plenty, but content.
 But grant him riches, your demand is o'er :
 No—shall the good want health, the good want power ?

And health and power and every earthly thing—
 'Why bounded power? why private? why no king? 160
 Nay, why external for internal given?
 Why is not man a god, and earth a heaven?'
 Who ask and reason thus, will scarce conceive
 God gives enough, while he has more to give;
 Immense the power, immense were the demand;
 Say, at what part of nature will they stand?
 What nothing earthly gives or can destroy,
 The soul's calm sun-shine, and the heart-felt joy,
 Is virtue's prize: a better would you fix?
 Then give humility a coach and six, 170
 Justice a conqueror's sword, or truth a gown,
 Or public spirit its great cure—a crown.
 Weak, foolish man! will Heaven reward us there,
 With the same trash mad mortals wish for here!
 The boy and man an individual makes,
 Yet sigh'st thou now for apples and for cakes?
 Go, like the Indian, in another life
 Expect thy dog, thy bottle, and thy wife,
 As well as dream such trifles are assign'd,
 As toys and empires, for a god-like mind. 180
 Rewards, that either would to virtue bring
 No joy, or be destructive of the thing;
 How oft by these at sixty are undone
 The virtues of a saint at twenty-one!
 To whom can riches give repute or trust,
 Content or pleasure, but the good and just?
 Judges and senates have been bought for gold;
 Esteem and love were never to be sold.
 Oh fool! to think God hates the worthy mind,
 The lover and the love of human-kind, 190
 Whose life is healthful, and whose conscience clear,
 Because he wants a thousand pounds a year.
 Honour and shame from no condition rise;
 Act well your part, there all the honour lies.
 Fortune in men has some small difference
 One flaunts in rags, one flutters in brocade.

The cobbler apron'd, and the parson gown'd,
 The friar hooded, and the monarch crown'd.
 'What differ more,' you cry, 'than crown and cowl !'
 I'll tell you, friend ! a wise man and a fool. 200
 You'll find, if once the monarch acts the monk,
 Or, cobbler-like, the parson will be drunk,
 Worth makes the man, and want of it the fellow ;
 The rest is all but leather or prunella.

Stuck o'er with titles and hung round with strings,
 That thou may'st be by kings, or whores of kings,
 Boast the pure blood of an illustrious race,
 In quiet flow from Lucrece to Lucrece :
 But by your fathers' worth if yours you rate,
 Count me those only who were good and great. 210
 Go ! if your ancient, but ignoble blood
 Has crept through scoundrels ever since the flood,
 Go ! and pretend your family is young ;
 Nor own your fathers have been fools so long.
 What can ennoble sots, or slaves, or cowards ?
 Alas ! not all the blood of all the Howards.

Look next on greatness : say where greatness lies
 'Where, but among the heroes and the wise ?'
 Heroes are much the same, the point's agreed,
 From Macedonia's madman to the Swede ; 220
 The whole strange purpose of their lives, to find
 Or make, an enemy of all mankind !
 Not one looks backward, onward still he goes
 Yet ne'er looks forward further than his nose.
 No less alike the politic and wise ;
 All sly slow things with circumspective eyes ;
 Men in their loose unguarded hours they take,
 Not that themselves are wise, but others weak.
 But grant that those can conquer, these can cheat,
 'Tis phrase absurd to call a villain great : 230
 Who wickedly is wise, or madly brave,
 Is but the more a fool, the more a knave.
 Who noble ends by noble means obtains.
 Or failing smiles in exile or in chains,

Like good Aurelius let him reign, or bleed
Like Socrates, that man is great indeed.

What's fame? a fancied life in other's breath,
A thing beyond us, e'en before our death.
Just what you hear you have; and what's unknown,
The same (my lord) if Tully's, or your own. 240
All that we feel of it begins and ends
In the small circle of our foes or friends;
To all beside as much an empty shade
As Eugene living, as a Cæsar dead;
Alike or when or where they shone or shine,
Or on the Rubicon, or on the Rhine.
A wit's a feather, and a chief a rod;
An honest man's the noblest work of God.
Fame but from death a villain's name can save,
As justice tears his body from the grave; 250
When what to oblivion better were resign'd,
Is hung on high to poison half mankind.
All fame is foreign but of true desert,
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart
One self-approving hour whole years outweighs
Of stupid starers, and of loud huzzas;
And more true joy Marcellus exiled feels
Than Cæsar with a senate at his heels.

In parts superior what advantage lies?
Tell (for you can) what is it to be wise? 260
'Tis but to know how little can be known,
To see all others' faults, and feel our own;
Condemn'd in business or in arts to drudge
Without a second, or without a judge;
Truths would you teach, or save a sinking land;
All fear, none aid you, and few understand.
Painful pre-eminence! yourself to view
Above life's weakness, and its comforts too.
Bring then these blessings to a strict account:
Make fair deductions; see to what they 'mount: 270
How much of other each is sure to cost;
How each for other oft is wholly lost;

How inconsistent greater goods with these
 How sometimes life is risk'd, and always ease;
 Think, and if still the things thy envy call,
 Say, wouldst thou be the man to whom they fall?
 To sigh for ribands if thou art so silly,
 Mark how they grace Lord Umbra, or Sir Billy.
 Is yellow dirt the passion of thy life?
 Look but on Gripus, or on Gripus' wife. 290
 If parts allure thee, think how Bacon shined,
 The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind;
 Or ravish'd with the whistling of a name,
 See Cromwell damn'd to everlasting fame!
 If all united, thy ambition call,
 From ancient story learn to scorn them all.
 There, in the rich, the honour'd, famed, and great,
 See the false scale of happiness complete!
 In hearts of kings, or arms of queens who lay,
 How happy! those to ruin, these betray. 290
 Mark by what wretched steps their glory grows;
 From dirt and sea-weed as proud Venice rose;
 In each how guilt and greatness equal ran,
 And all that raised the hero sunk the man:
 Now Europe's laurels on their brows behold,
 But stain'd with blood, or ill exchanged for gold:
 Then see them broke with toils, or sunk in ease,
 Or infamous for plunder'd provinces.
 O wealth ill-fated! which no act of fame
 E'er taught to shine, or sanctified from shame! 300
 What greater bliss attends their close of life?
 Some greedy minion, or imperious wife,
 The trophied arches, storied halls invade,
 And haunt their slumbers in the pompous shade.
 Alas! not dazzled with their noon-tide ray,
 Compute the morn and evening to the day;
 The whole amount of that enormous fame,
 A tale that blends their glory with their shame!
 Know then this truth, (enough for man to know,)
 Virtue alone is happiness below. 310

The only point where human bliss stands still
 And tastes the good without the fall to ill ;
 Where only merit constant pay receives,
 Is bless'd in what it takes, and what it gives ;
 The joy unequall'd, if its end it gain,
 And if it lose, attended with no pain :
 Without satiety, though e'er so bless'd,
 And but more relish'd as the more distress'd :
 The broadest mirth unfeeling folly wears,
 Less pleasing far than virtue's very tears : 320
 Good, from each object, from each place acquired,
 For ever exercised, yet never tired ;
 Never elated, while one man's oppress'd .
 Never dejected, while another's bless'd :
 And where no wants, no wishes can remain,
 Since but to wish more virtue, is to gain.

See the sole bliss Heaven could on all bestow !
 Which who but feels can taste, but thinks can know
 Yet poor with fortune and with learning blind,
 The bad must miss, the good untaught will find ;
 Slave to no sect, who takes no private road, 330
 But looks through nature up to nature's God ;
 Pursues that chain which links th' immense design
 Joins Heav'n and earth, and mortal and divine
 Sees that no being any bliss can know,
 But touches some above, and some below ;
 Learns from the union of the rising whole
 The first, last purpose of the human soul ;
 And knows where faith, law, morals, all began,
 All end in love of God and love of man. 340

For him alone hope leads from goal to goal,
 And opens still, and opens on his soul ;
 Till lengthen'd on to faith, and unconfined,
 It pours the bliss that fills up all the mind.
 He sees why nature plants in man alone,
 Hope of known bliss, and faith in bliss unknown :
 (Nature, whose dictates to no other kind
 Are given in vain, but what they seek they find)

Wise is her present ; she connects in this
 His greatest virtue with his greatest bliss ;
 At once his own bright prospect to be bless'd ;
 And strongest motive to assist the rest.

Self love thus push'd to social, to divine,
 Gives thee to make thy neighbour's blessing thine.
 Is this too little for the boundless heart ?

Extend it, let thy enemies have part ;
 Grasp the whole world of reason, life, and sense,
 In one close system of benevolence ;
 Happier as kinder, in whate'er degree,
 And height of bliss but height of charity. 360

God loves from whole to parts : but human soul
 Must rise from individual to the whole.
 Self-love but serves the virtuous mind to wake,
 As the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake ;
 The centre moved, a circle straight succeeds,
 Another still, and still another spreads ;
 Friend, parent, neighbour, first it will embrace ;
 His country next, and next all human rae :
 Wide and more wide, the o'erflowings of the mind
 Take every creature in, of every kind : 370
 Earth smiles around, with boundless bounty bless'd,
 And Heaven beholds its image in his breast.

Come then, my friend ! my genius ! come along ;
 O master of the poet, and the song !

And while the muse now stoops, or now ascends,
 To man's low passions, or their glorious ends, *
 Teach me, like thee, in various nature wise,
 To fall with dignity, with temper rise ;
 Form'd by thy converse, happily to steer
 From grave to gay, from lively to severe ; 380
 Correct with spirit, eloquent with ease,
 Intent to reason, or polite to please.

O ! while along the stream of time thy name
 Expanded flies, and gathers all its fame,
 Say, shall my little bark attendant sail,
 Pursue the triumph, and partake the gale ?

When statesmen, heroes, kings, in dust repose,
 Whose sons shall blush their fathers were thy foes,
 Shall then this verse to future age pretend
 Thou wert my guide, philosopher, and friend? 390
 That, urged by thee, I turn'd the tuneful art
 From sound to things, from fancy to the heart;
 For wit's false mirror held up nature's light,
 Show'd erring pride, WHATEVER IS, IS RIGHT;
 That reason, passion, answer one great aim;
 That true self-love and social are the same;
 That virtue only makes our bliss below;
 And all our knowledge, is ourselves to know.

THE UNIVERSAL PRAYER.

DEO OPT. MAX.

---

It may be proper to observe, that some passages in the preceding Essay having been unjustly suspected of a tendency towards fate and naturalism, the author composed this prayer as the sum of all, to show that his system was founded in free-will, and terminated in piety: that the First Cause was as well the Lord and Governor of the universe as the Creator of it; and that, by submission to his will (the great principle enforced throughout the Essay) was not meant the suffering ourselves to be carried along by a blind determination, but a resting in a religious acquiescence, and confidence full of hope and immortality. To give all this the greater weight, the poet chose for his model the Lord's Prayer, which, of all others, best deserves the title prefixed to this paraphrase.

FATHER of all! in every age,
 In every clime adored,
 By saint, by savage, and by sage,
 Jehovah, Jove, or Lord!

THE UNIVERSAL PRAYER. 269

Thou Great First Cause, least understood,
Who all my sense confined
To know but this, That thou art good,
And that myself am blind;

Yet gave me, in this dark estate,
To see the good from ill;
And, binding Nature fast in Fate,
Left free the human will:

What conscience dictates to be done,
Or warns me not to do,
This, teach me more than hell to shun,
That, more than heaven pursue.

What blessings thy free bounty gives,
Let me not cast away;
For God is paid when man receives:
To enjoy is to obey.

Yet not to earth's contracted span
Thy goodness let me bound,
Or think thee Lord alone of man,
When thousand worlds are round.

Let not this weak, unknowing hand
Presume thy bolts to throw,
And deal damnation round the land,
On each I judge thy foe.

If I am right, thy grace impart,
Still in the right to stay:
If I am wrong, O teach my heart
To find that better way.

Save me alike from foolish pride,
Or impious discontent,
At aught thy wisdom has denied,
Or aught thy goodness lent.

Teach me to feel another's wo,
To hide the fault I see:
That mercy I to others show
That mercy show to me

Mean though I am, not wholly so,
Since quicken'd by thy breath ;
O lead me, wheresoe'er I go,
Through this day's life or death.

This day, be bread and peace my lot :
All else beneath the sun,
'Thou know'st if best bestow'd or not,
And let thy will be done.

To thee, whose temple is all space,
Whose altar, earth, sea, skies !
One chorus let all beings raise !
All Nature's incense rise !

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE Essay on Man was intended to have been comprised in four books :

The first of which the author has given us under that title, in four epistles."

The second was to have consisted of the same number : 1. Of the extent and limits of human reason. 2. Of those arts and sciences, and of the parts of them, which are useful, and therefore attainable, together with those which are unuseful, and therefore unattainable. 3. Of the nature, ends, use, and application of the different capacities of men. 4. Of the use of learning, of the science of the world, and of wit; concluding with a satire against a misapplication of them, illustrated by pictures, characters, and examples.

The third book regarded civil regimen, or the science of politics, in which the several forms of a republic were to be examined and explained; together with the several modes of religious worship, as far forth as they affect society: between which the author always supposed there was the most interesting relation and closest connexion: so that this part would have treated of civil and religious society in their full extent.

The fourth and last book concerned private ethics, or practical morality, considered in all the circumstances, orders, professions, and stations of human life.

The scheme of all this had been maturely digested, and communicated to Lord Bolingbroke, Dr. Swift, and one or two more, and was intended for the only work of his riper years; but was partly through ill-health, partly through discouragements from the depravity of the times, and partly on prudential and other considerations, interrupted, postponed, and, lastly, in a manner laid aside.

But as this was the author's favourite work, which more exactly reflected the image of his strong capacious mind, and as we can have but a very imperfect idea of it from the dissecta membra poetæ that now remain, it may not be amiss to be a little more particular concerning each of these projected books.

The first, as it treats of man in the abstract, and considers him in general under every of his relations, becomes the foundation, and furnishes out the subjects, of the three following; so that

The second book was to take up again the first and second epistles of the first book, and treat of man in his intellectual capacity at large, as has been explained above. Of this, only a small part of the conclusion (which, as we said, was to have contained a satire against the misapplication of wit and learning) may be found in the fourth book of the Dunciad, and up and down, occasionally, in the other three.

The third book, in like manner, was to re-assume the subject of the third epistle of the first, which treats of man in his social, political, and religious capacity. But this part the poet afterwards conceived might be best executed in an epic poem; as the action would make it more animated, and the fable less invidious: in which all the great principles of true and false governments and religions should be chiefly delivered in feigned examples.

The fourth and last book was to pursue the subject of the fourth epistle of the first, and to treat of ethics, or practical morality; and would have consisted of many members; of which the four following epistles were detached portions; the first two, on the characters of men and women, being the introductory part of this concluding book.

MORAL ESSAYS.

EPISTLE I.

TO SIR RICHARD TEMPLE, LORD COBHAM.

---

ARGUMENT.

Of the Knowledge and Characters of Men.

1. That it is not sufficient for this knowledge to consider man in the abstract: books will not serve the purpose, nor yet our own experience singly, ver. 1. General maxims, unless they be formed upon both, will be but notional, ver. 10. Some peculiarity in every man, charac-

eristic to himself, yet varying from himself, ver. 15. Difficulties arising from our own passions, fancies, faculties, &c. ver. 31. The shortness of life to observe in, and the uncertainty of the principles of action in men to observe by, ver. 37, &c. Our own principle of action often hid from ourselves, ver. 41. Some few characters plain, but in general confounded, dissembled, or inconsistent, ver. 51. The same man utterly different in different places and seasons, ver. 62. Unimaginable weaknesses in the greatest, ver. 70, &c. Nothing constant and certain but God and nature, ver. 95. No judging of the motives from the actions: the same actions proceeding from contrary motives, and the same motives influencing contrary actions, ver. 100. II. Yet, to form characters, we can only take the strongest actions of a man's life, and try to make them agree. The utter uncertainty of this, from nature itself, and from policy, ver. 120. Character given according to the rank of men of the world, ver. 135. And some reason for it, ver. 140. Education alters the nature, or at least character, of many, ver. 149. Actions, passions, opinions, manners, humours, or principles, all subject to change. No judging by nature, from ver. 158 to ver. 168. III. It only remains to find (if we can) his ruling passion: That will certainly influence all the rest, and can reconcile the seeming or real inconsistency of all his actions, ver. 175. Instanced in the extraordinary character of Clodio, ver. 179. A caution against mistaking second qualities for first, which will destroy all possibility of the knowledge of mankind, ver. 210. Examples of the strength of the ruling passion, and its continuation to the last breath, ver. 222, &c.

EPISTLE I.

I. YES, you despise the man to books confined,
Who from his study rails at human kind,
Though what he learns he speaks, and may advance
Some general maxims, or be right by chance

The coxcomb bird, so talkative and grave,
That from his cage cries cuckold, whore, and knave
Though many a passenger he rightly call,
You hold him no philosopher at all.

And yet the fate of all extremes is such,
Men may be read, as well as books, too much. 10
To observations which ourselves we make,
We grow more partial for the observer's sake;
To written wisdom, as another's, less;
Maxims are drawn from notions, these from guess.
There's some peculiar in each leaf and grain,
Some unmark'd fibre, or some varying vein:
Shall only man be taken in the grass?
Grant but as many sorts of minds as moss.

That each from others differs, first confess;
Next, that he varies from himself no less; 20
Add nature's, custom's, reason's, passion's strife,
And all opinion's colours cast on life.

Our depths who fathoms, or our shallows finds
Quick whirls, and shifting eddies of our minds?
On human actions reason though you can,
It may be reason, but it is not man:
His principle of action once explore,
That instant 'tis his principle no more.
Like following life through creatures you dissect,
You lose it in the moment you detect. 30

Yet more; the difference is as great between
The optics seeing, as the objects seen.
All manners take a tincture from our own;
Or some discolour'd through our passions shown
Or fancy's beam enlarges, multiplies,
Contracts, inverts, and gives ten thousand dyes.

Nor will life's stream for observation stay;
It hurries all too fast to mark their way:
In vain sedate reflections we would make,
When half our knowledge we must snatch, not take;
Oft, in the passions' wild rotation toss'd,
Our spring of action to ourselves is lost;

Tired, not determined, to the last we yield,
 And what comes then is master of the field.
 As the last image of that troubled heap,
 When sense subsides and fancy sports in sleep,
 (Though past the recollection of the thought,)
 Becomes the stuff of which our dream is wrought ;
 Something as dim to our internal view,
 Is thus, perhaps, the cause of most we do. 50

True, some are open, and to all men known ;
 Others, so very close, they're hid from none ;
 (So darkness strikes the sense no less than light :)
 Thus gracious Chandos is beloved at sight ;
 And every child hates Shylock, though his soul
 Still sits at squat, and peeps not from its hole.
 At half mankind when generous Manly raves,
 All know 'tis virtue, for he thinks them knaves ;
 When universal homage Umbra pays,
 All see 'tis vice, an itch of vulgar praise. 60
 When flattery glares, all hate it in a queen,
 While one there is who charms us with his spleen.

But these plain characters we rarely find ;
 Though strong the bent, yet quick the turns of mind :
 Or puzzling contraries confound the whole ;
 Or affectations quite reverse the soul.
 The dull flat falsehood serves for policy ;
 And in the cunning, truth itself's a lie :
 Unthought of frailties cheat us in the wise ;
 The fool lies hid in inconsistencies. 70

See the same man, in vigour, in the gout,
 Alone, in company ; in place, or out ;
 Early at business, and at hazard late ;
 Mad at a fox-chase, wise at a debate ;
 Drunk at a borough, civil at a ball ;
 Friendly at Hackney, faithless at Whitehall.

Catius is ever moral, ever grave,
 Thinks who endures a knave, is next a knave,
 Save just at diener—then prefers, no doubt,
 A rogue with venison to a saint without. 80

Who would not praise Patricio's high desert,
 His hand unstain'd, his uncorrupted heart,
 His comprehensive head, all interests weigh'd,
 All Europe saved, yet Britain not betray'd ?
 He thanks you not, his pride is in piquet,
 Newmarket-fame, and judgment at a bet.

What made (say, Montagne, or more sage Charron!)
 Otho a warrior, Cromwell a buffoon ?

A perjured prince a leaden saint revere,
 A godless regent tremble at a star ? 96
 The throne a bigot keep, a genius quit,
 Faithless through piety, and duped through wit ?
 Europe a woman, child, or dotard rule,
 And just her wisest monarch made a fool ?

Know, God and nature only are the same ;
 In man, the judgment shoots at flying game :
 A bird of passage ! gone as soon as found,
 Now in the moon, perhaps, now under ground.

II. In vain the sage, with retrospective eye,
 Would from the apparent what, conclude the why ; 100
 Infer the motive from the deed, and show,
 That what we chanced, was what we meant to do
 Behold, if fortune or a mistress frowns,
 Some plunge in business, others shave their crowns :
 To ease the soul of one oppressive weight,
 This quits an empire, that embroils a state :
 The same adust complexion has impell'd
 Charles to the convent, Philip to the field.

Not always actions show the man ; we find
 Who does a kindness, is not therefore kind : 110
 Perhaps prosperity becalm'd his breast,
 Perhaps the wind just shifted from the east :
 Not therefore humble he who seeks retreat,
 Pride guides his steps, and bids him shun the great
 Who combats bravely is not therefore brave,
 He dreads a death-bed like the meanest slave
 Who reasons wisely is not therefore wise,
 His pride in reasoning, not in acting, lies.

But grant that actions best discover man :
 Take the most strong, and sort them as you can : 120
 The few that glare, each character must mark,
 You balance not the many in the dark.
 What will you do with such as disagree ?
 Suppress them, or miscall them policy ?
 Must then at once (the character to save)
 The plain rough hero turn a crafty knave ?
 Alas ! in truth the man but changed his mind,
 Perhaps was sick, in love, or had not dined.
 Ask why from Britain Cæsar would retreat ?
 Cæsar himself might whisper, he was beat. 130
 Why risk the world's great empire for a punk ?
 Cæsar perhaps might answer he was drunk.
 But, sage historians ! 'tis your task to prove
 One action, conduct ; one, heroic love.

'Tis from high life high characters are drawn,
 A saint in crape is twice a saint in lawn ;
 A judge is just, a chancellor juster still ;
 A gownman learn'd, a bishop what you will ;
 Wise, if a minister ; but, if a king,
 More wise, more learn'd, more just, more every thing.
 Court virtues bear like gems, the highest rate, 141
 Born where heaven's influence scarce can penetrate :
 In life's low vale, the soil the virtues like,
 They please as beauties, here as wonders strike.
 Though the same sun with all-diffusive rays
 Blush in the rose, and in the diamond blaze
 We prize the stronger effort of his power,
 And justly set the gem above the flower.

'Tis education forms the common mind :
 Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined. 18
 Boastful and rough, your first son is a 'squire ;
 The next a tradesman, meek, and much a liar :
 Tom struts a soldier, open, bold, and brave :
 Will sneaks a scrivener, an exceeding knave.
 Is he a churchman ? then he's fond of power .
 A quaker ? sly : a presbyterian ? sour :
 A smart free-thinker ? all things in an hour.

Ask men's opinions : Scoto now shall tell
 How trade increases, and the world goes well :
 Strike off his pension, by the setting sun, 160
 And Britain, if not Europe, is undone.

That gay free-thinker, a fine talker once,
 What turns him now a stupid silent dunce ?
 Some god, or spirit, he has lately found ;
 Or chanced to meet a minister that frown'd.

Judge we by nature ? habit can efface,
 Interest o'ercome, or policy take place :
 By actions ? those uncertainty divides :
 By passions ? these dissimulation hides :
 Opinions ? they still take a wider range : 170
 Find, if you can, in what you cannot change.

Manners with fortunes, humours turn with climes,
 Tenets with books, and principles with times.

III. Search then the ruling passion : There, alone,
 The wild are constant, and the cunning known ;
 The fool consistent, and the false sincere ;
 Priests, princes, women, no dissemblers here.
 This clew once found unravels all the rest,
 The prospect clears, and Wharton stands confess'd.
 Wharton ! the scorn and wonder of our days, 180
 Whose ruling passion was the lust of praise ;
 Born with whate'er could win it from the wise,
 Women and fools must like him, or he dies :
 Though wondering senates hung on all he spoke,
 The club must hail him master of the joke.
 Shall parts so various aim at nothing new ?
 He'll shine a Tully and a Wilmot too ;
 Then turns repentant, and his God adores
 With the same spirit that he drinks and whores ,
 Enough if all around him but admire, 199
 And now the punk applaud, and now the friar.
 Thus with each gift of nature and of art,
 And wanting nothing but an honest heart :
 Grown all to all, from no one vice exempt,
 And most contemptible, to shun contempt ;

His passion still, to covet general praise ;
 His life, to forfeit it a thousand ways ;
 A constant bounty, which no friend has made ;
 An angel tongue, which no man can persuade ;
 A fool, with more of wit than half mankind, 200
 Too rash for thought, for action too refined .

A tyrant to the wife his heart approves ;
 A rebel to the very king he loves ;
 He dies, sad outcast of each church and state,
 And harder still ! flagitious, yet not great.
 Ask you why Wharton broke through every rule ;
 'Twas all for fear the knaves should call him fool.

Nature well known, no prodigies remain,
 Comets are regular, and Wharton plain.
 Yet, in this search, the wisest may mistake, 210
 If second qualities for first they take.

When Catiline by rapine swell'd his store ;
 When Cæsar made a noble dame a whore
 In this the lust, in that the avarice,
 Were means, not ends ; ambition was the vice.
 That very Cæsar, born in Scipio's days,
 Had aim'd like him, by chastity, at praise,
 Lucullus, when frugality could charm,
 Had roasted turnips in the Sabine farm.
 In vain the observer eyes the builder's toil, 220
 But quite mistakes the scaffold for the pile.

In this one passion man can strength enjoy,
 As fits give vigour just when they destroy.
 Time, that on all things lays his lenient hand,
 Yet tames not this ; it sticks to our last sand.
 Consistent in our follies and our sins,
 Here honest Nature ends as she begins.

Old politicians chew on wisdom past,
 And totter on in business to the last ;
 As weak, as earnest ; and as gravely out, 230
 As sober Lanesborow dancing in the gout.

Behold a reverend sire, whom want of grace
 Has made the father of a nameless race,

Shoved from the wall perhaps, or rudely press'd
 By his own son, that passes by unblest'd :
 Still to his wench he crawls on knocking knees,
 And envies every sparrow that he sees.

A salmon's belly, Helluo, was thy fate ;
 The doctor call'd, declares all help too late.

'Mercy!' cries Helluo, 'mercy on my soul ! 240
 Is there no hope?—Alas!—then bring the jowl.'

The frugal crone, whom praying priests attend,
 Still strives to save the hallow'd taper's end,
 Collects her breath, as ebbing life retires,
 For one puff more, and in that puff expires.

'Odious! in woollen!' twould a saint provoke,
 Were the last words that poor Narcissa spoke ;
 'No, let a charming chintz and Brussels lace
 Wrap my cold limbs, and shade my lifeless face ;
 One would not, sure, be frightful when one's dead—
 And—Betty—give this cheek a little red.' 251

The courtier smooth, who forty years had shined
 An humble servant to all human kind,
 Just brought out this, when scarce his tongue could stir,

'If—where I'm going—I could serve you, sir !'

'I give and I devise,' old Euclio said,
 And sigh'd, 'my lands and tenements to Ned.'

'Your money, sir?'—'My money, sir, what all ?
 Why,—if I must'—then wept, 'I give it Paul.'

'The manor, sir?'—'The manor! hold,' he cried, 260
 'Not that,—I cannot part with that,'—and died.

And you! brave Cobham, to the latest breath,
 Shall feel your ruling passion strong in death :
 Such in these moments as in all the past,

Oh, save my country, Heaven! shall be your last.

EPISTLE II.
TO A LADY.

ARGUMENT.

Of the Characters of Women.

That the particular characters of women are not so strongly marked as those of men, seldom so fixed, and still more inconsistent with themselves, ver. 1, &c. Instances of contrarieties given, even from such characters as are more strongly marked, and seemingly, therefore, most consistent: as, 1. In the affected.—2. In the soft natured.—3. In the cunning and artful.—4. In the whimsical.—5. In the lewd and vicious.—6. In the witty and refined.—7. In the stupid and simple, ver. 21 to 207. The former part having shown that the particular characters of women are more various than those of men, it is nevertheless observed that the general characteristic of the sex, as to the ruling passion, is more uniform, ver. 207. This is occasioned partly by their nature, partly by their education, and in some degree by necessity, ver. 211. What are the aims and the fate of this sex:—1. As to power.—2. As to pleasure, ver. 219. Advice for their true interest.—The picture of an estimable woman, with the best kind of contrarieties, ver. 249 to the end.

There is nothing in Mr. Pope's works more highly finished than this epistle: yet its success was in no proportion to the pains he took in composing it. Something he chanced to drop in a short advertisement prefixed to it on its first publication, may, perhaps account for the small attention given to it. He said that no one character in it was drawn from the life. The public believed him on his word, and expressed little curiosity about a satire, in which there was nothing personal.

NOTHING so true as what you once let fall,
Most women have no characters at all.'

Matter too soft a lasting mark to bear,
And best distinguish'd by black, brown, or fair.

How many pictures of one nymph we view,
All how unlike each other, all how true!
Arcadia's countess, here, in ermined pride
Is there, Pastora by a fountain side.
Here Faunia, leering on her own good man,
And there, a naked Leda with a swan. 10
Let then the fair-one beautifully cry,
In Magdalen's loose hair, and lifted eye;
Or dress'd in smiles of sweet Cecilia shine,
With simpering angels, palms, and harps divine;
Whether the charmer sinner it, or saint it,
If folly grow romantic, I must paint it.

Come then the colours and the ground prepare!
Dip in the rainbow, trick her off in air;
Choose a firm cloud, before it fail, and in it
Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute. 20

Rufa, whose eye, quick glancing o'er the park,
Attracts each light gay meteor of a spark,
Agrees as ill with Rufa studying Locke,
As Sappho's diamonds with her dirty smock;
Or Sappho at her toilet's greasy task,
With Sappho fragrant at an evening mask:
So morning insects, that in muck begun,
Shine, buzz, and fly-blow in the setting sun.

How soft is Silia! fearful to offend;
The frail-one's advocate, the weak-one's friend, 30
To her, Calista proved her conduct nice;
And good Simplicius asks of her advice.
Sudden, she storms! she raves! You tip the wink,
But spare your censure; Silia does not drink.
All eyes may see from what the change arose,
All eyes may see—a pimple on her nose.

Papilia, wedded to her amorous spark,
Sighs for the shades—'How charming is a park!
A park is purchased, but the fair he sees
All bathed in tears—'Oh odious, odious trees!'

Ladies, like variegated tulips, show,
 'Tis to their changes half their charms they owe
 Fine by defect, and delicately weak,
 Their happy spots the nice admirer take.
 'Twas thus Calypso once each heart alarm'd,
 Awed without virtue, without beauty charm'd;
 Her tongue bewitched as oddly as her eyes;
 Less wit than mimic, more a wit than wise:
 Strange graces still, and stranger flights she had,
 Was just not ugly, and was just not mad;      50
 Yet ne'er so sure our passions to create,
 As when she touch'd the brink of all we hate.
     Narcissa's nature, tolerably mild,
 To make a wash would hardly stew a child;
 Has e'en been proved to grant a lover's prayer,
 And paid a tradesman once to make him stare.
 Gave alms at Easter in a christian trim,
 And made a widow happy for a whim.
 Why then declare good-nature is her scorn,
 When 'tis by that alone she can be borne?      60
 Why pique all mortals, yet affect a name?
 A fool to pleasure, yet a slave to fame:
 Now deep in Taylor and the book of Martyrs,
 Now drinking citron with his grace and Chartres:
 Now conscience chills her, and now passion burns
 And atheism and religion take their turns;
 A very heathen in the carnal part,
 Yet still a sad good christian at her heart.
     Sec sin in state, majestically drunk,
 Proud as a peeress, prouder as a punk;      70
 Chaste to her husband, frank to all beside,
 A teeming mistress, but a barren bride.
 What then? let blood and body bear the fault,
 Her head's untouch'd, that noble seat of thought;
 Such this day's doctrine—in another fit
 She sins with poets through pure love of wit.
 What has not fired her bosom or her brain?
 Cæsar and Tall-boy, Charles and Charlemagne

As Helluo, late dictator of the feast,
 The nose of haut-gout, and the tip of taste,       80
 Critiqued your wine, and analysed your meat,
 Yet on plain pudding deign'd at home to eat:
 So Philomedé, lecturing all mankind
 On the soft passion, and the taste refined,
 The address, the delicacy—stoops at once,
 And makes her hearty meal upon a dunce.

Flavia's a wit, has too much sense to pray;
 To toast our wants and wishes, is her way;
 Nor asks of God, but of her stars, to give
 The mighty blessing, 'while we live, to live.'       90
 Then all for death, that opiate of the soul!
 Lueretia's dagger, Rosamonda's bowl.
 Say, what can cause such impotence of mind?
 A spark too fickle, or a spouse too kind.
 Wise wretch! with pleasure too refin'd to please;
 With too much spirit to be e'er at ease;
 With too much quickness ever to be taught;
 With too much thinking to have common thought:
 You purchase pain with all that joy can give,
 And die of nothing but a rage to live.       100

Turn then from wits, and look on Simo's mate:
 No ass so meek, no ass so obstinate:
 Or her that owns her faults but never mends,
 Because she's honest, and the best of friends:
 Or her whose life the church and scandal share,
 For ever in a passion or a prayer:
 Or her who laughs at hell, but (like her grace)
 Cries, 'Ah! how charming if there's no such place'
 Or who in sweet vicissitude appears,
 Of mirth and opium, ratafie and tears,       110
 The daily anodyne, and nightly draught
 To kill those foes to fair ones, time and thought.
 Woman and fool are two hard things to hit:
 For true no-meaning puzzles more than wit.
 But what are those to great Atossa's mind?
 Scarce once herself, by turns all womankind;

Who, with herself, or others, from her birth,
 Finds all her life one warfare upon earth.
 Shines in exposing knaves and painting fools,
 Yet is whate'er she hates and ridicules. 120
 No thought advances, but her eddy brain
 Whisks it about, and down it goes again.
 Full sixty years the world has been her trade,
 The wisest fool much time has ever made.
 From loveless youth to unrespected age
 No passion gratified, except her rage :
 So much the fury still outran the wit,
 That pleasure miss'd her, and the scandal hit.
 Who breaks with her, provokes revenge from hell,
 But he's a bolder man who dares be well. 130
 Her every turn with violence pursued,
 Nor more a storm her hate than gratitude :
 To that each passion turns, or soon or late ;
 Love, if it makes her yield, must make her hate .
 Superiors ? death ! and equals ? what a curse !
 But an inferior not dependent ! worse.
 Offend her, and she knows not to forgive ;
 Oblige her, and she'll hate you while you live :
 But die, and she'll adore you—Then the bust
 And temple rise—then fall again to dust. 140
 Last night, her lord was all that's good and great ;
 A knave this morning, and his will a cheat.
 Strange ! by the means defeated of the ends,
 By spirit robb'd of power, by warmth of friends,
 By wealth of followers ! without one distress
 Sick of herself, through very selfishness !
 Atossa, cursed with every granted prayer,
 Childless with all her children, wants an heir.
 To heirs unknown descends the unguarded store,
 Or wanders, Heaven-directed, to the poor !
 Pictures, like these, dear madam, to design, 150
 Asks no firm hand, and no unerring line ;
 Some wandering touches, some reflected light,
 Some flying stroke alone can hit them right :

For how should equal colours do the knack ?
 Cameleons who can paint in white and black ?
 'Yet Chloe sure was form'd without a spot.'—
 Nature in her then err'd not, but forgot.

With every pleasing, every prudent part,
 Say, what can Chloe want ?—She wants a heart. 166
 She speaks, behaves, and acts just as she ought ;
 But never, never reach'd one generous thought
 Virtue she finds too painful an endeavour,
 Content to dwell in decencies for ever.
 So very reasonable, so unmoved,
 As never yet to love, or to be loved.

She, while her lover pants upon her breast,
 Can mark the figures on an Indian chest ;
 And when she sees her friend in deep despair
 Observes how much a chintz exceeds mohair. 170

Forbid it, Heaven, a favour or a debt
 She e'er should cancel—but she may forget.
 Safe is your secret still in Chloe's ear ;
 But none of Chloe's shall you ever hear.
 Of all her dears she never slander'd one,
 But cares not if a thousand are undone.
 Would Chloe know if you're alive or dead ?
 She bids her footman put it in her head.
 Chloe is prudent—Would you too be wise ?
 Then never break your heart when Chloe dies. 186

One certain portrait may (I grant) be seen,
 Which Heaven has varnish'd out, and made a queen
 The same for ever ! and described by all
 With truth and goodness, as with crown and ball.
 Poets heap virtues, painters gems at will,
 And show their zeal, and hide their want of skill.
 'Tis well—but artists ! who can paint or write,
 To draw the naked is your true delight.
 That robe of quality so struts and swells,
 None see what parts of nature it conceals : 190
 The exactest traits of body or of mind,
 We owe to models of an humble kind.

If Queensberry to strip there's no compelling,
 'Tis from a handmaid we must take a Helen.
 From peer or bishop, 'tis no easy thing
 To draw the man who loves his God or king;
 Alas! I copy (or my draught would fail)
 From honest Mahomet or plain parson Hale.

But grant, in public men sometimes are shown,
 A woman's seen in private life alone: 200
 Our bolder talents in full light display'd,
 Your virtues open fairest in the shade.
 Bred to disguise, in public 'tis you hide;
 There, none distinguish 'twixt your shade or pride,
 Weakness or delicacy; all so nice,
 That each may seem a virtue or a vice.

In men we various ruling passions find;
 In women, two almost divide the kind:
 Those, only fix'd, they first or last obey,
 The love of pleasure, and the love of sway. 210
 That nature gives; and where the lesson taught
 Is but to please, can pleasure seem a fault?
 Experience, this; by man's oppression curs'd,
 They seek the second not to lose the first.

Men, some to business, some to pleasure take;
 But every woman is at heart a rake:
 Men, some to quiet, some to public strife,
 But every lady would be queen for life.

Yet mark the fate of a whole sex of queens!
 Power all their end, but beauty all the means: 220
 In youth they conquer with so wild a rage,
 As leaves them scarce a subject in their age:
 For foreign glory, foreign joy, they roam;
 No thought of peace or happiness at home.
 But wisdom's triumph is well-timed retreat.
 As hard a science to the fair as great!
 Beauties, like tyrants, old and friendless grown,
 Yet hate repose, and dread to be alone;
 Worn out in public, weary every eye,
 Nor leave one sigh behind them when they die. 230

Pleasures the sex, as children birds pursue,
 Still out of reach, yet never out of view ;
 Sure, if they catch, to spoil the toy at most,
 To covet flying, and regret when lost ;
 At last, to follies youth could scarce defend,
 It grows their age's prudence to pretend ;
 Ashamed to own they gave delight before,
 Reduced to feign it, when they give no more :
 As hags hold sabbaths less for joy than spite,      244
 So these their merry, miserable night ;
 Still round and round the ghosts of beauty glide,
 And haunt the places where their honour died.

See how the world its veterans rewards !
 A youth of frolics, an old age of cards ;
 Fair to no purpose, artful to no end,
 Young without lovers, old without a friend ;
 A fop their passion, but their prize a sot,
 Alive ridiculous, and dead forgot !
 Ah, friend ! to dazzle let the vain design :
 To raise the thought, and touch the heart, be thine !      250

That charm shall grow, while what fatigues the ring,
 Flaunts and goes down, an unregarded thing :
 So when the sun's broad beam has tired the sight,
 All mild ascends the moon's more sober light,
 Serene in virgin modesty she shines,
 And unobserved the glaring orb declines.

O ! bless'd with temper, whose unclouded ray
 Can make to-morrow cheerful as to-day ;
 She who can love a sister's charms, or hear
 Sighs for a daughter, with unwounded ear ;      264
 She who ne'er answers till a husband cools ;
 Or, if she rules him, never shows she rules ;
 Charms by accepting, by submitting sways,
 Yet has her humour most when she obeys ;
 Let fops or fortune fly which way they will,
 Disdains all loss of tickets or codille ;

MORAL ESSAYS.

289

Spleen, vapours, or small-pox, above them all,
And mistress of herself though china fall.

And yet, believe me, good as well as ill,
Woman's at best a contradiction still. 270

Heaven when it strives to polish all it can
Its last best work, but forms a softer man ;
Picks from each sex, to make the favourite bless'd,

Your love of pleasure, our desire of rest ;
Blends in exception to all general rules,
Your taste of follies, with our scorn of fools ;
Reserve with frankness, art with truth allied,
Courage with softness, modesty with pride ;
Fix'd principles with fancy ever new ;
Shakes all together, and produces—you. 280

Be this a woman's fame ; with this unbless'd,
Toasts live a scorn, and queens may die a jest.

This Phœbus promised, (I forget the year,)
When those blue eyes first open'd on the sphere ;
Ascendant Phœbus watch'd that hour with care,

Averted half your parents' simple prayer ;
And gave you beauty, but denied the pelf
That buys your sex a tyrant o'er itself.

The generous god, who wit and gold refines,
And ripens spirits as he ripens mines, 290
Kept dress for duchesses, the world shall know it,
To you gave sense, good-humour, and a poet.

ARGUMENT.

Of the Use of Riches

That it is known to few, most falling into one of the extremes, avarice or profusion, ver. 1, &c. The point discussed, whether the invention of money has been more commedious or pernicious to mankind, ver. 21 to

77. That riches, either to the avaricious or the prodigal, cannot afford happiness, scarcely necessaries ver. 89 to 160. That avarice is an absolute frenzy without an end or purpose, ver. 113, &c 152. Conjectures about the motives of avaricious men, ver. 121 to 153. That the conduct of men with respect to riches, can only be accounted for by the order of Providence, which works the general good out of extremes, and brings all to its great end by perpetual revolutions, ver. 161 to 178. How a miser acts upon principles which appear to him reasonable, ver. 179. How a prodigal does the same, ver. 199. The true medium, and true use of riches, ver. 219. The man of Ross, ver. 250. ---

This epistle was written after a very violent outcry against our author, on a supposition that he had ridiculed a worthy nobleman, merely for his wrong taste. He justified himself upon that article in a letter to the Earl of Burlington; at the end of which are these words: 'I have learnt that there are some who would rather be wicked than ridiculous: and therefore it may be safer to attack vices than follies. I will therefore leave my betters in the quiet possession of their idols, their groves, and their high-places, and change my subject from their pride to their meanness, from their vanities to their miseries; and as the only certain way to avoid misconstructions, to lesser offence, and not to multiply ill-natured applications, I may probably in my next make use of real names instead of fictitious ones.'

P. Who shall decide when doctors disagree,
 And soundest casuists doubt, like you and me?
 You hold the word, from Jove to Momus given,
 That man was made the standing jest of Heaven:
 And gold but sent to keep the fools in play,
 For some to heap, and some to throw away.

But I, who think more highly of our kind,
 (And, surely, Heaven and I are of a mind,)
 Opine, that nature, as in duty bound,
 Deep hid the shining mischief under ground 10
 But when, by man's audacious labour won,
 Flamed forth this rival to its sire the sun,
 Then careful Heaven supplied two sorts of men,
 To squander these, and those to hide again.

Like doctors thus, when much dispute has pass'd,
 We find our tenets just the same at last:
 Both fairly owning riches, in effect,
 No grace of Heaven, or token of the elect:
 Given to the fool, the mad, the vain, the evil,
 To Ward, to Waters, Chartres, and the devil. 20

B. What nature wants, commodious gold bestows:
 'Tis thus we eat the bread another sows.

P. But how unequal it bestows, observe;
 'Tis thus we riot, while, who sow it, starve:
 What nature wants (a phrase I much distrust)
 Extends to luxury, extends to lust:
 Useful, I grant, it serves what life requires,
 But, dreadful too, the dark assassin hires.

B. Trade it may help, society extend:

P. But lures the pirate, and corrupts the friend. 30

B. It raises armies in a nation's aid:

P. But bribes a senate, and the land's betray'd.
 In vain may heroes fight and patriots rave,
 If secret gold sap on from knave to knave.
 Once, we confess, beneath the patriot's cloak,
 From the crack'd bag the dropping guinea spoke,
 And jingling down the back stairs, told the crew,
 'Old Cato is as great a rogue as you.'

Bless'd paper credit! last and best supply!
 That lends corruption lighter wings to fly! 40

Gold, imp'd by thee, can compass hardest things,
 Can pocket states, can fetch or carry kings:

A single leaf shall waft an army o'er,
 Or ship off senates to some distant shore:

A leaf like Sybil's, scatter to and fro
 Our fates and fortunes, as the wind shall blow ;
 Pregnant with thousands flits the scrap unseen,
 And silent sells a king or buys a queen.

Oh ! that such bulky bribes as all might see,
 Still, as of old, encumber'd villany ! 50

Could France or Rome divert our brave designs,
 With all their brandies or with all their wines ?
 What could they more than knights and 'squires confound,

Or water all the quorum ten miles round ?
 A statesman's slumbers how this speech would spoil !
 'Sir, Spain has sent a thousand jars of oil ;
 Huge bales of British cloth blockade the door ;
 A hundred oxen at your levee roar.'

Poor avarice one torment more would find ;
 Nor could profusion squander all in kind. 60

Astride his cheese Sir Morgan might we meet,
 And Worldly crying coals from street to street,
 Whom with a wig so wild and mien so mazed,
 Pity mistakes for some poor tradesman crazed.
 Had Colepepper's whole wealth been hops and hogs,
 Could he himself have sent it to the dogs ?

His grace will game : to White's a bull be led,
 With spurning heels and with a butting head :
 To White's be carried, as to ancient games,
 Fair coursers, vases, and alluring dames. 70

Shall then Uxorio, if the stakes he sweep,
 Bear home six whores, and make his lady weep ?
 Or soft Adonis, so perfumed and fine,
 Drive to St. James's a whole herd of swine ?
 O filthy check on all industrious skill,
 To spoil the nation's last great trade, quadrille !
 Since then, my lord, on such a world we fall,
 What say you ? B. Say ? Why, take it, gold and all.

P. What riches gives us, let us then inquire :
 Meat, fire, and clothes. B. What more ? P Meat, clothes, and fire. 80

is this too little? would you more than live?
 Alas! 'tis more than Turner finds they give.
 Alas! 'tis more than (all his visions pass'd)
 Unhappy Wharton, waking, found at last!
 What can they give? To dying Hopkins heirs?
 To Chartres vigour? Japhet nose and ears?
 Can they in gems bid pallid Hippia glow?
 In Fulvia's buckle ease the throbs below?
 Or heal, old Narses, thy obscener ail,
 With all the embroidery plaster'd at thy tail? 90
 They might (were Harpax not too wise to spend)
 Give Harpax' self the blessing of a friend;
 Or find some doctor that would save the life
 Of wretched Shylock, spite of Shylock's wife.
 But thousands die, without or this or that,
 Die, and endow a college or a cat.
 To some, indeed, Heaven grants the happier fate,
 To enrich a bastard, or a son they hate.

Perhaps you think the poor might have their part;
 Bond damns the poor, and hates them from his heart:
 The grave Sir Gilbert holds it for a rule, 101
 That every man in want is knave or fool:
 'God cannot love,' says Blunt, with tearless eyes,
 'The wretch he starves'—and piously denies:
 But the good Bishop, with a meeker air,
 Admits, and leaves them, Providence's care.

Yet, to be just to these poor men of pelf,
 Each does but hate his neighbour as himself:
 Damn'd to the mines, an equal fate betides
 The slave that digs it, and the slave that hides. 110

B. Who suffer thus, mere charity should own,
 Must act on motives powerful, though unknown.

P. Some war, some plague, or famine, they foresee,
 Some revelation hid from you and me.

Why Shylock wants a meal, the cause is found;
 He thinks a loaf will rise to fifty pound.

What made directors cheat in South-sea year?
 To live on venison when it sold so dear.

Ask you why Phryne the who'e auction buys ?
Phryne foresees a general excise. 120

Why she and Sappho raise that monstrous sum ?
Alas ! they think a man will cost a plum.

Wise Peter sees the world's respect for gold,
And therefore hopes this nation may be sold :
Glorious ambition ! Peter, swell thy store,
And be what Rome's great Didius was before

The crown of Poland, venal twice an age,
To just three millions stinted modest Gago.
But nobler scenes Maria's dreams unfold,
Hereditary realms, and worlds of gold. 130

Congenial souls ; whose life one avarice joins,
And one fate buries in the Asturian mines.

Much-injured Blunt ! why bears he Britain's hate ?
A wizard told him in these words our fate :

' At length corruption, like a general flood
(So long by watchful ministers withstood,)
Shall deluge all ; and avarice creeping on,
Spread like a low-born mist, and blot the sun ;
Statesman and patriot ply alike the stocks,
Peeress and butler share alike the box, 140
And judges job, and bishops bite the town,
And mighty dukes pack cards for half-a-crown.

See Britain sunk in lucre's sordid charms,
And France revenged of Anne's and Edward's arms !
'Twas no court-badge, great scrivener ! fired thy brain,
Nor lordly luxury, nor city gain :
No, 'twas thy righteous end, ashamed to see
Senates degenerate, patriots disagree,
And nobly wishing party-rage to cease,
To buy both sides, and give thy country peace 150

' All this is madness,' cries a sober sage :
But who, my friend, has reason in his rage ?
The ruling passion, be it what it will,
The ruling passion, conquers reason still.'
Less mad the wildest whimsey we can frame,
Than ev'n that passion, if it has no aim :

For though such motives folly you may call,
The folly's greater to have none at all.

Hear then the truth: 'Tis Heaven each passion sends
And different men directs to different ends. 160

Extremes in nature equal good produce,
Extremes in man concur to general use.

Ask we what makes one keep, and one bestow?
That Power who bids the ocean ebb and flow;
Bids seed-time, harvest, equal course maintain,
Through reconciled extremes of drought and rain:
Builds life on death, on change duration founds,
And gives the eternal wheels to know their rounds

Riches, like insects, when conceal'd they lie,
Wait but for wings, and in their season fly. 170

Who sees pale Mammon pine amidst his store,
Sees but a backward steward for the poor;
This year a reservoir to keep and spare,
The next a fountain, spouting through his heir,
In lavish streams to quench a country's thirst,
And men and dogs shall drink him till they burst.

Old Cotta shamed his fortune and his birth,
Yet was not Cotta void of wit or worth:

What though, (the use of barbarous spits forgot,)
His kitchen vied in coolness with his grot? 180

His court with nettles, moats with cresses stored,
With soups unbought and salads bless'd his board?
If Cotta lived on pulse, it was no more
Than Bramins, saints, and sages did before:

To cram the rich was prodigal expense,
And who would take the poor from Providence?
Like some lone Chartreux stands the good old hall,
Silence without, and fasts within the wall;
No rafter'd roofs with dance and tabour sound,
No noontide bell invites the country round: 190

Tenants with sighs the smokeless towers survey,
And turn their unwilling steeds another way:
Benighted wanderers, the forest o'er,
Curse the saved candle and unopening door;

While the gaunt mastiff, growling at the gate,
Affrights the beggar whom he longs to cat.

Not so his son : he mark'd this oversight,
And then mistook reverse of wrong for right :
(For what to shun, will no great knowledge need ;
But what to follow, is a task indeed.) 200

Yet sure, of qualities deserving praise,
More go to ruin fortunes, than to raise.
What slaughter'd hecatombs, what floods of wine,
Fill the capacious 'squire, and deep divine !
Yet no mean motive this profusion draws,
His oxen perish in his country's cause ;
'Tis George and liberty that crowns the cup,
And zeal for that great house which eats him up.
The woods recede around the naked seat,
The Sylvans groan—no matter—for the fleet : 210
Next goes his wool—to clothe our valiant bands :
Last, for his country's love, he sells his lands.
To town he comes, completes the nation's hope,
And heads the bold train-bands, and burns a pope ;
And shall not Britain now reward his toils,
Britain, that pays her patriots with her spoils ?
In vain at court the bankrupt pleads his cause ;
His thankless country leaves him to her laws.

The sense to value riches, with the art
To enjoy them, and the virtue to impart, 220
Not meanly, nor ambitiously pursued,
Not sunk by sloth, nor raised by servitude ;
To balance fortune by a just expense,
Join with economy, magnificence ;
With splendour charity, with plenty health ;
O teach us, Bathurst ! yet unspoil'd by wealth !
That secret rare, between the extremes to move
Of mad good-nature, and of mean self-love.

B. To worth or want well-weigh'd, be bounty given,
And ease or emulate the care of Heaven ; 230
(Whose measure full o'erflows on human race ;)
Mend fortune's fault, and justify her grace.

Wealth in the gross is death, but life diffused ;
 As poison heals in just proportion used :
 In heaps, like ambergris, a stink it lies,
 But well dispersed, is incense to the skies.

P. Who starves by nobles, or with nobles eats ?
 The wretch that trusts them, and the rogue that cheats.
 Is there a lord, who knows a cheerful noon
 Without a fiddler, flatterer, or buffoon ? 240
 Whose table, wit or modest merit share,
 Unelbow'd by a gamester, pimp, or player ?
 Who copies yours or Oxford's better part,
 To ease the oppress'd and raise the sinking heart ?
 Where'er he shines, O Fortune, gild the scene,
 And angels guard him in the golden mean !
 There, English bounty yet awhile may stand,
 And honour linger ere it leaves the land,

But all our praises why should lords engross ?
 Rise, honest muse ! and sing the MAN OF ROSS : 250
 Pleased Vaga echoes through her winding bounds,
 And rapid Severn hoarse applause resounds.
 Who hung with woods yon mountain's sultry brow ?
 From the dry rock who bade the waters flow ?
 Not to the skies in useless columns toss'd,
 Or in proud falls magnificently lost,
 But clear and artless pouring through the plain,
 Health to the sick, and solace to the swain.
 Whose causeway parts the vale with shady rows ?
 Whose seats the weary traveller repose ? 260
 Who taught that heaven-directed spire to rise ?
 'The Man of Ross,' each lisping babe replies.
 Behold the market-place with poor o'erspread !
 The Man of Ross divides the weekly bread :
 He feeds yon alms-house, neat, but void of state,
 Where age and want sit smiling at the gate :
 Him portion'd maids, apprenticed orphans bless'd,
 The young who labour, and the old who rest.
 Is any sick ? the Man of Ross relieves,
 Prescribes, attends, the medicine makes and gives.

Is there a variance? enter but his door, 271
 Balk'd are the courts, and contest is no more.
 Despairing quacks with curses fled the place,
 And vile attorneys, now a useless race.

B. Thrice happy man! enabled to pursue
 What all so wish, but want the power to do!
 Say, O what sums that generous hand supply;
 What mines to swell that boundless charity?

P. Of debts and taxes, wife and children clear,
 This man possess'd—five hundred pounds a year.
 Blush, grandeur, blush! proud courts, withdraw your
 Ye little stars! hide your diminish'd rays. [blaze!

B. And what! no monument, inscription, stone?
 His race, his form, his name almost unknown?

P. Who builds a church to God, and not to fame,
 Will never mark the marble with his name:
 Go, search it there, where to be born and die,
 Of rich and poor makes all the history;
 Enough that virtue fill'd the space between,
 Proved by the ends of being to have been. 290

When Hopkins dies, a thousand lights attend
 The wretch who, living, saved a candle's end;
 Shouldering God's altar a vile image stands,
 Belies his features, nay, extends his hands;
 That live-long wig, which Gorgon's self might own
 Eternal buckle takes in Parian stone.

Behold what blessings wealth to life can lend!
 And see what comfort it affords our end.
 In the worst inn's worst room, with mat half hung,
 The floors of plaster, and the walls of dung, 300
 On once a flock-bed, but repair'd with straw,
 With tape-tied curtains, never meant to draw,
 The George and Garter dangling from that bed,
 Where tawdry yellow strove with dirty red,
 Great Villiers lies—alas! how chang'd from him,
 That life of Pleasure, and that soul of whim!
 Gallant and gay, in Cliveden's proud alcove,
 The bower of wanton Shrewsbury and love;

Or just as gay at council, in a ring
 Of mimic statesmen, and their merry king;      310
 No wit to flatter, left of all his store;
 No fool to laugh at, which he valu'd more,
 There, victor of his health, of fortune, friends,
 And fame, this lord of useless thousands ends!
     His Grace's fate sage Cutler could foresee,
 And well (he thought) advis'd him, 'Live like me.'
 As well his Grace replied, 'Like you, sir John?
 That I can do, when all I have is gone.'
 Resolve me, reason, which of these is worse,
 Want with a full or with an empty purse?      320
 Thy life more wretched, Cutler! was confess'd:
 Arise, and tell me, was thy death more bless'd?
 Cutler saw tenants break and houses fall;
 For very want he could not build a wall.
 His only daughter in a stranger's power,
 For very want, he could not pay a dower;
 A few gray hairs his reverend temples crown'd;
 'Twas very want that sold them for two pound
 What! e'en denied a cordial at his end,
 Banish'd the doctor, and expell'd the friend?      330
 What but a want, which you perhaps think mad,
 Yet numbers feel the want of what he had!
 Cutler and Brutus dying, both exclaim,
 'Virtue! and wealth! what are ye but a name!'
     Say, for such worth are other worlds prepared?
 Or are they both, in this, their own reward?
 A knotty point to which we now proceed,
 But you are tired—I'll tell a tale—B. Agreed.
     P. Where London's column, pointing at the skies
 Like a tall bully, lifts the head and lies,      340
 There dwelt a citizen of sober fame,
 A plain good man, and Balaam was his name;
 Religious, punctual, frugal, and so forth:
 His word would pass for more than he was worth.
 One solid dish his week-day meal affords,
 An added pudding solemnized the Lord's:

Constant at church and 'change; his gains were sure
His givings rare, save farthings to the poor.

The Devil was piqued such saintship to behold,
And long'd to tempt him, like good Job of old; 350
But Satan now is wiser than of yore,
And tempts by making rich, not making poor.

Roused by the prince of air, the whirlwinds sweep
The surge, and plunge his father in the deep;
Then full against his Cornish lands they roar,
And two rich shipwrecks bless the lucky shore.

Sir Balaam now, he lives like other folks,
He takes his chirping pint, and cracks his jokes:
'Live like yourself,' was soon my lady's word;
And, lo! two puddings smoked upon the board. 360

Asleep and naked as an Indian lay,
An honest factor stole a gem away:
He pledged it to the knight; the knight had wit,
So kept the diamond, and the rogue was bit.
Some scruple rose, but thus he eased his thought,
'I'll now give sixpence where I gave a groat;
Where once I went to church, I'll now go twice—
And am so clear too of all other vice.'

The tempter saw his time: the work he plied;
Stocks and subscriptions pour on every side, 370
Till all the demon makes his full descent
In one abundant shower of cent per cent,
Sinks deep within him, and possesses whole,
Then dubs director, and secures his soul.

Behold sir Balaam, now a man of spirit,
Ascribes his gettings to his parts and merit;
What late he call'd a blessing, now was wit,
And God's good providence, a lucky hit.
Things change their titles, as our manners turn:
His compting-house employed the Sunday morn: 380
Seldom at church ('twas such a busy life,)
But duly sent his family and wife.
There (so the devil ordain'd) one Christmas tide
My good old lady catch'd a cold, and died.

A nymph of quality admires our knight,
He marries, bows at court, and grows polite,
Leaves the dull city, and joins (to please the fair)
The well-bred cuckolds in St. James's air:
First, for his son, a gay commission buys,
Who drinks, whores, fights, and in a duel dies: 390
His daughter flaunts a viscount's tawdry wife;
She bears a coronet and p—x for life.
In Britain's senate he a seat obtains,
And one more pensioner St. Stephen gains.
My lady falls to play: so bad her chance,
He must repair it; takes a bribe from France;
The house impeach him, Coningsby harangues;
The court forsake him, and sir Balaam hangs:
Wife, son, and daughter, Satan! are thy own;
His wealth, yet dearer, forfeit to the crown: 400
The devil and the king divide the prize,
And sad sir Balaam curses God, and dies.

 EPISTLE IV.

 TO RICHARD BOYLE, EARL OF BURLINGTON.

---

ARGUMENT.

Of the Use of Riches.

The vanity of expense in people of wealth and quality.
The abuse of the word Taste, ver. 13. That the first principle and foundation in this, as in every thing else, is good sense, ver. 40. The chief proof of it is to follow nature, even in works of mere luxury and elegance. Instanced in architecture and gardening where all must be adapted to the genius and use of the place, and the beauties not forced into it, but re- sulting from it, ver. 50. How men are disappointed in their most expensive undertakings, for want of this true foundation, without which nothing can please long, if at all; and the best examples and rules will be but perverted into something burthensome and ridiculous, ver. 65 to 90. A description of the false taste of magnificence; the first grand error of which is, to imagine that greatness consists in the size and dimension, instead of the proportion and harmony of the whole, ver. 97, and the second either in joining together parts incoherent, or too minutely resembling or in the repetition of the same too frequently, ver. 105, &c. A word or two of false taste in books music, in painting, even in preaching and prayer, and lastly in entertainments, ver. 133, &c. Yet Providence is justified in giving wealth to be squandered in this manner, since it is dispersed to the poor and laborious part of mankind, ver. 169. [recurring to what is laid down in the first book, Ep. ii. and in the Epistle preceding this, ver. 159, &c.] What are the proper objects of magnificence, and a proper field for the expense of great men, ver. 177, &c. And finally the great and public works which become a prince, ver. 191, to the end.

The extremes of avarice and profusion being treated of in the foregoing Epistle, this takes up one particular branch of the latter, the vanity of expense in people of wealth and quality; and is, therefore, a corollary to the preceding, just as the Epistle on the Characters of Women is to that of the Knowledge and Characters of Men. It is equally remarkable for exactness of method with the rest. But the nature of the subject, which is less philosophical, makes it capable of being analysed in a much narrower compass.

---

'Tis strange, the miser should his cares employ
 To gain those riches he can ne'er enjoy:
 Is it less strange, the prodigal should waste
 His wealth, to purchase what he ne'er can taste?
 Not for himself he sees, or hears, or eats;
 Artists must choose his pictures, music, meats:

He buys for Topham drawings and designs ;
 For Pembroke statues, dirty gods, and coins ;
 Rare monkish manuscripts for Hearne alone ;
 And books for Mead, and butterflies for Sloane . 10
 Think we all these are for himself? no more
 Than his fine wife, alas ! or finer whore.

For what has Virro painted, built, and planted ?
 Only to show how many tastes he wanted.
 What brought sir Visto's ill-got wealth to waste ?
 Some demon whisper'd ' Visto ! have a taste.'
 Heaven visits with a taste the wealthy fool,
 And needs no rod but Ripley with a rule.
 See ! sportive fate, to punish awkward pride,
 Bids Bubo build, and sends him such a guide : 20
 A standing sermon at each year's expense,
 That never coxcomb reach'd magnificence.

You show us Rome was glorious, not profuse,
 And pompous buildings once were things of use ;
 Yet shall, my lord, your just, your noble rules
 Fill half the land with imitating fools ;
 Whose random drawings from your sheets shall take,
 And of one beauty, many blunders make ;
 Load some vain church with old theatric state,
 Turn arcs of Triumph to a garden gate ; 30
 Reverse your ornaments, and hang them all
 On some patch'd dog-hole eked with ends of wall ;
 Then clap four slices of pilaster on 't,
 That laced with bits of rustic makes a front ;
 Shall call the winds through long arcades to roar,
 Proud to catch cold at a Venetian door :
 Conscious they act a true Palladian part,
 And if they starve, they starve by rules of art.

Oft have you hinted to your brother peer, .
 A certain truth which many buy too dear ; 40
 Something there is more needful than expense,
 And something previous e'en to taste—'tis sense,
 Good sense, which only is the gift of Heaven,
 And, though no science, fairly worth the seven :

A light which in yourself you must perceive ;
Jones and Le Nôtre have it not to give.

To build, to plant, whatever you intend,
To rear the column, or the arch to bend,
To swell the terrace, or to sink the grot,
In all, let Nature never be forgot : 50
But treat the goddess like a modest fair,
Nor over-dress, nor leave her wholly bare ;
Let not each beauty every where be spied,
Where half the skill is decently to hide.
He gains all points, who pleasingly confounds,
Surprises, varies, and conceals the bounds.

Consult the genius of the place in all :
That tells the waters or to rise or fall ;
Or helps the ambitious hill the heavens to scale, 60
Or scoops in circling theatres the vale ;
Calls in the country, catches opening glades,
Joins willing woods, and varies shades from shades ;
Now breaks, or now directs, the intending lines,
Prints as you paint, and as you work designs.

Still follow sense, of every art the soul :
Parts answering parts shall slide into a whole,
Spontaneous beauties all around advance,
Start e'en from difficulty, strike from chance :
Nature shall join you ; time shall make it grow 70
A work to wonder at—perhaps a Stow.

Without it, proud Versailles ! thy glory falls ;
And Nero's terraces desert their walls ;
The vast parterres a thousand hands shall make,
Lo ! Cobham comes, and floats them with a lake :
Or cuts wide views through mountains to the plain,
You 'll wish your hill or shelter'd seat again.
E'en in an ornament its place remark,
Nor in a hermitage set Dr. Clarke.
Behold Villario's ten years' toil complete, 80
His quincunx darkens, his espaliers meet ;
The wood supports the plain, the parts unite,
And strength of shade contends with strength of light ;

A waving gloom the bloomy beds display,
 Blushing in bright diversities of day,
 With silver-quivering rills meander'd o'er—
 Enjoy them, you! Villario can no more :
 Tired of the scene parterres and fountains yield,
 He finds at last he better likes a field.

Through his young woods how pleased Sabinus
 Or sat delighted in the thickening shade, [stray'd,
 With annual joy the reddening shoots to greet,
 Or see the stretching branches long to meet !
 His son's fine taste an opener vista loves,
 Foe to the Dryads of his father's groves !
 One boundless green, or flourish'd carpet views,
 With all the mournful family of yews :
 The thriving plants ignoble broomsticks made,
 Now sweep those alleys they were born to shade.

At Timon's villa let us pass a day, 99
 Where all cries out, ' What sums are thrown away !'
 So proud, so grand ; of that stupendous air,
 Soft and agreeable come never there.
 Greatness, with Timon, dwells in such a drought
 As brings all Brobdignag before your thought.
 To compass this, his building is a town,
 His pond an ocean, his parterre a down :
 Who but must laugh, the master when he sees,
 A puny insect, shivering at a breeze !

Lo, what huge heaps of littleness around ! 110
 The whole a labour'd quarry above ground.
 Two Cupids squirt before ; a lake behind
 Improves the keenness of the northern wind.
 His gardens next your admiration call,
 On every side you look, behold the wall !
 No pleasing intricacies intervene,
 No artful wildness to perplex the scene :
 Grove nods at grove, each alley has a brother,
 And half the platform just reflects the other.
 The suffering eye inverted nature sees,
 Trees cut to statues, statues thick as trees ; 120

Where ere a fountain never to be play'd,
 And ere a summer-house that knows no shade ;
 There Amphitrite sails through myrtle bowers ;
 There gladiators fight, or die in flowers ;
 In water'd see the drooping sea-horse mourn,
 And swallows roost in Nilus' dusty urn.

My lord advances with majestic mien,
 Smit with the mighty pleasure to be seen :
 But soft—by regular approach—not yet—
 First through the length of yon hot terrace sweat! 130
 And when up ten steep slopes you've dragged your
 Just at his study door he'll bless your eyes. [thighs,

His study! with what authors is it stored?
 In books, not authors, curious is my lord ;
 To all their dated backs he turns you round ;
 These Aldus printed, those Du Sueil has bound!
 Lo, some are vellum, and the rest as good,
 For all his lordship knows, but they are wood!
 For Locke or Milton, 'tis in vain to look :
 These shelves admit not any modern book. 140

And now the chapel's silver bell you hear,
 That summons you to all the pride of prayer :
 Light quirks of music, broken and uneven,
 Make the soul dance upon a jig to heaven.
 On painted ceilings you devoutly stare,
 Where sprawl the saints of Verrio or Laguerre.
 Or gilded clouds in fair expansion lie,
 And bring all Paradise before your eye.
 To rest, the cushion and soft dean invite,
 Who never mentions hell to ears polite. 150

But, hark! the chiming clocks to dinner call
 A hundred footsteps scrape the marble hall :
 The rich buffet well-colour'd serpents grace,
 And gaping Tritons spew to wash your face.
 Is this a dinner? this a genial room?
 No, 'tis a temple, and a hecatomb.
 A solemn sacrifice perform'd in state :
 You drink by measure, and to minutes eat.

So quick requires each flying course, you 'd swear
 Sancho's dead doctor and his wand were there. 160
 Between each act the trembling salvers ring,
 From soup to sweet wine, and God bless the king.
 In plenty starving, tantalized in state,
 And complaisantly help'd to all I hate,
 Treated, caress'd, and tired, I take my leave,
 Sick of his evil pride from morn to eve ;
 I curse such lavish cost and little skill,
 And swear no day was ever pass'd so ill.

Yet hence the poor are clothed, the hungry fed ;
 Health to himself, and to his infants bread, 170
 The labourer bears : what his hard heart denies,
 His charitable vanity supplies.

Another age shall see the golden ear
 Imbrown the slope, and nod on the parterre,
 Deep harvests bury all his pride has plann'd,
 And laughing Ceres re-assume the land.

Who then shall grace, or who improve the soil ?
 Who plants like Bathurst, or who builds like Boyle.
 'Tis use alone that sanctifies expense,
 And splendour borrows all her rays from sense. 180

His father's acres who enjoys in peace,
 Or makes his neighbours glad if he increase :
 Whose cheerful tenants bless their yearly toil,
 Yet to their lord owe more than to the soil ;
 Whose ample lawns are not ashamed to feed
 The milky heifer and deserving steed ;
 Whose rising forests, not for pride or show,
 But future buildings, future navies, grow :
 Let his plantations stretch from down to down,
 First shade a country, and then raise a town. 190

You, too, proceed ! make falling arts your care,
 Erect new wonders, and the old repair ;
 Jones and Palladio to themselves restore,
 And be whate'er Vitruvius was before :
 Till kings call forth the idea of your mind,
 Proud to accomplish what such hands design'd ;)

Bid harbours open, public ways extend,
 Bid temples worthier of the God ascend ;
 Bid the broad arch the dangerous flood contain,
 The mole projected break the roaring main ;     200
 Back to his bounds their subject sea command,
 And roll obedient rivers through the land :
 These honours peace to happy Britain brings ;
 These are imperial works, and worthy kings

 EPISTLE V.

TO MR. ADDISON.

Occasioned by his Dialogues on Medals.

This was originally written in the year 1715, when Mr. Addison intended to publish his book of medals; it was some time before he was secretary of state; but not published till Mr. Tickell's edition of his works; at which time his verses on Mr. Craggs, which conclude the poem, were added, viz. in 1720.

As the third Epistle treated of the extremes of avarice and profusion; and the fourth took up one particular branch of the latter, namely, the vanity of expense in people of wealth and quality, and was therefore a corollary to the third; so this treats of one circumstance of that vanity, as it appears in the common collectors of old coin; and is, therefore, corollary to the fourth.

SEE the wild waste of all-devouring years!
 How Rome her own sad sepulchre appears!
 With nodding arches, broken temples spread!
 The very tombs now vanish'd like their dead!

Imperia, wonders raised on nations spoil'd,
 Where mix'd with slaves the groaning martyr toil'd
 Huge theatres, that now unpeopled woods,
 Now drain'd a distant country of her floods .
 Fanes, which admiring gods with pride survey ;
 Statues of men, scarce less alive than they ! .0
 Some felt the silent stroke of mouldering age,
 Some hostile fury, some religious rage :
 Barbarian blindness, Christian zeal conspire,
 And papal piety, and Gothic fire.
 Perhaps by its own ruins saved from flame,
 Some buried marble half preserves a name ;
 That name the learn'd with fierce dispute pursue,
 And give to 'Titus old Vespasian's due.

Ambition sigh'd ; she found in vain to trust
 The faithless column and the crumbling bust ; 20
 Huge moles, whose shadow stretch'd from shore to shore,

Their ruins perish'd, and their place no more !
 Convinced, she now contracts her vast design,
 And all her triumphs shrink into a coin.
 A narrow orb each crowded conquest keeps, 1
 Beneath her palm here sad Judea weeps,
 Now scantier limits the proud arch confine,
 And scarce are seen the prostrate Nile or Rhine ;
 A small Euphrates through the piece is roll'd.
 And little eagles wave their wings in gold. 30

The medal faithful to its charge of fame,
 Through climes and ages oars each form and
 name :

In one short view subjected to our eye,
 Gods, emperors, heroes, sages, beauties, lie.
 With sharpen'd sight pale antiquaries pore,
 The inscription value, but the rust adore.
 This the blue varnish, that the green endears,
 The sacred rust of twice ten hundred years !
 To gain Pescennius one employs his schemes,
 One grasps a Cecrops in ecstatic dreams. 40

310 POPE'S POETICAL WORKS.

Poor Vadius, long with learned spleen devour'd,
Can taste no pleasure since his shield was scour'd .
And Curio, restless by the fair one's side,
Sighs for an Otho, and neglects his bride.

Theirs is the vanity, the learning thine :
Touch'd by thy hand, again Rome's glories shine ;
Her gods and godlike heroes rise to view,
And all her faded garlands bloom anew.
Nor blush these studies thy regard engage :
These pleased the fathers of poetic rage : 50
The verse and sculpture bore an equal part,
And art reflected images to art.

Oh, when shall Britain, conscious of her claim,
Stand emulous of Greek and Roman fame ?
In living medals see her wars enroll'd,
And vanquish'd realms supply recording gold ?
Here, rising bold, the patriot's honest face ;
There, warriors frowning in historic brass :
Then future ages with delight shall see
How Plato's, Bacon's, Newton's looks agree ; 60
Or in fair series laurell'd bards be shown,
A Virgil there, and here an Addison.
Then shall thy Craggs (and let me call him mine)
On the cast ore, another Pollio, shine ;
With aspect open shall erect his head,
And round the orb in lasting notes be read,—
Statesman, yet friend to truth ! of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honour clear ;
Who broke no promise, served no private end,
Who gain'd no title, and who lost no friend : 70
Ennobled by himself, by all approved,
And praised, unenvied, by the muse he loved '

To the first Publication of this Epistle.

This paper is a sort of bill of complaint, begun many years since, and drawn up by snatches, as the several occasions offered. I had no thoughts of publishing it, till it pleased some persons of rank and fortune, [the authors of Verses to the imitator of Horace, and of an Epistle to a Doctor of Divinity from a Nobleman at Hampton Court] to attack, in a very extraordinary manner, not only my writings (of which, being public, the public is judge) but my person, morals, and family; whereof, to those who know me not, a truer information may be requisite. Being divided between the necessity to say something of myself, and my own laziness to undertake so awkward a task, I thought it the shortest way to put the last hand to this Epistle. If it have any thing pleasing, it will be that by which I am most desirous to please, the truth and the sentiment; and if any thing offensive, it will be only to those I am least sorry to offend, the vicious or the ungenerous. Many will know their own pictures in it, there being not a circumstance but what is true; but I have, for the most part, spared their names; and they may escape being laughed at, if they please.

I would have some of them to know, it was owing to the request of the learned and candid friend to whom it is inscribed, that I make not as free use of theirs as they have done of mine. However, I shall have this advantage and honour on my side, that whereas, by their proceeding, any abuse may be directed at any man, no injury can possibly be done by mine; since a nameless character can never be found out but by its truth and likeness.

P. 'SHUT, shut the door, good John,' fatigued, I said,

Tie up the knocker, say I'm sick, I'm dead.
 The dog-star rages! nay, 'tis past a doubt,
 All Bedlam, or Parnassus, is let out:
 Fire in each eye, and papers in each hand,
 They rave, recite, and madden round the land.
 What walls can guard me, or what shades can hide?
 They pierce my thickets, through my grot they glide;
 By land, by water, they renew the charge;
 They stop the chariot, and they board the barge.
 No place is sacred, not the church is free,
 E'en Sunday shines no sabbath-day to me;
 Then from the Mint walks forth the man of rhyme,
 Happy to catch me!—just at dinner time.

Is there a parson, much bemused in beer,
 A maudlin poetess, a rhyming peer,
 A clerk foredoom'd his father's soul to cross,
 Who pens a stanza when he should engross;
 Is there who, lock'd from ink and paper, scrawls
 With desperate charcoal round his darken'd walls;
 All fly to Twit'nam, and in humble strain
 Apply to me, to keep them mad or vain.
 Arthur, whose giddy son neglects the laws,
 Imputes to me and my damn'd works the cause:
 Poor Cornus sees his frantic wife elope,
 And curses wit, and poetry, and Pope.

Friend to my life! (which did not you prolong,
 The world had wanted many an idle song)

PROLOGUE TO THE SATIRES. 7

What drop or nostrum can this plague remove ?
 Or which must end me, a fool's wrath or love ?
 A dire dilemma ! either way I'm sped ;
 If foes, they write ; if friends, they read me dead.
 Seized and tied down to judge, how wretched I !
 Who can't be silent, and who will not lie :
 To laugh, were want of goodness and of grace ;
 And to be grave, exceeds all power of face.
 I sit with sad civility ; I read
 With honest anguish, and an aching head ;
 And drop at last, but in unwilling ears,
 This saving counsel, ' Keep your piece nine years.
 ' Nine years ! ' cries he, who, high in Drury-lane,
 Lull'd by soft zephyrs through the broken pane,
 Rhymes ere he wakes, and prints before term ends
 Obliged by hunger and request of friends :
 ' The piece, you think, is incorrect : why take it ;
 I'm all submission ; what you'd have it make it.'
 Three things another's modest wishes bound,
 My friendship, and a prologue, and ten pound.
 Pitholeon sends to me ; ' You know his grace ;
 I want a patron ; ask him for a place.'
 Pitholeon libell'd me—' but here's a letter
 Informs you, sir, 'twas when he knew no better.
 Dare you refuse him Curll invites to dine ?
 He'll write a journal, or he'll turn divine.'
 Bless me ! a packet.—' 'Tis a stranger sues :
 A virgin tragedy, an orphan muse.'
 If I dislike it, ' Furies, death, and rage !'
 If I approve, ' Commend it to the stage.'
 There (thank my stars) my whole commission ends,
 The players and I are, luckily, no friends.
 Fired that the house reject him, ' 'Sdeath ! I'll print it,
 And shame the fools—your interest, sir, with Lintot.
 ' Lintot, dull rogue ! will think your price too much :
 ' Not, sir, if you revise it, and retouch.'
 All my demurs but double his attacks :
 At last he whispers, ' Do ; and we go snacks '

Glad of a quarrel, straight I clap the door,
 ' Sir, let me see your works and you no more.'
 'Tis sung, when Midas' ears began to spring,
 (Midas, a sacred person and a king,)
 His very minister, who spied them first,
 (Some say his queen,) was forced to speak, or burst.

And is not mine, my friend, a sorer case,
 When every coxcomb perks them in my face?
 A. Good friend, forbear! you deal in dangerous things,

I'd never name queens, ministers, or kings;
 Keep close to ears, and those let asses prick,
 'Tis nothing—P. Nothing? if they bite and kick?
 Out with it, Dunciad! let the secret pass,
 That secret to each fool, that he's an ass:
 The truth once told (and wherefore should we lie?)
 The queen of Midas slept, and so may I.

You think this cruel: take it for a rule,
 No creature smarts so little as a fool.
 Let peals of laughter, Codrus! round thee break,
 Thou unconcern'd canst hear the mighty crack:
 Pit, box, and gallery, in convulsions hurl'd,
 Thou stand'st unshook amidst a bursting world.
 Who shames a scribbler? Break one cobweb through
 He spins the slight, self-pleasing thread anew:
 Destroy his fib or sophistry, in vain,
 The creature's at his dirty work again,
 Throned on the centre of his thin designs,
 Proud of a vast extent of flimsy lines:
 Whom have I hurt? has poet yet, or peer,
 Lost the arch'd eyebrow, or Parnassian sneer?
 And has not Colly still his lord and whore?
 His butchers Henly? his free-masons Moore?
 Does not one table Bavius still admit?
 Still to one bishop Phillips seem a wit?
 Still Sappho—A. Hold; for God's sake—you'll offend,
 No names—he calm—learn prudence of a friend:

PROLOGUE TO THE SATIRES.

I too could write, and I am twice as tall ;
But foes like these—P. One flatterer's worse than all
Of all mad creatures, if the learn'd are right,
It is the slaver kills, and not the bite.
A fool quite angry is quite innocent :
Alas ! 'tis ten times worse when they repent.

One dedicates in high heroic prose,
And ridicules beyond a hundred foes :
One from all Grub street will my fame defend.
And, more abusive, calls himself my friend.
This prints my letters, that expects a bribe,
And others roar aloud 'Subscribe, subscribe !'

There are, who to my person pay their court.
I cough like Horace, and, though lean, am short.
Ammon's great son one shoulder had too high.
Such Ovid's nose, and, 'Sir ! you have an eye—
Go on, obliging creatures, make me see
All that disgraced my betters met in me.
Say for my comfort, languishing in bed,
Just so immortal Maro held his head ;'
And when I die, be sure you let me know
Great Homer died three thousand years ago.

Why did I write ? what sin to me unknown
Dipp'd me in ink—my parents' or my own ?
As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I lisp'd in numbers, for the numbers came ;
I left no calling for this idle trade,
No duty broke, no father disobey'd :
The muse but served to ease some friend, not wife,
To help me through this long disease, my life
To second, Arbuthnot ! thy art and care,
And teach the being you preserved to bear.

But why then publish ? Granville the polite,
And knowing Walsh, would tell me I could write ;
Well-natured Garth inflamed with early praise,
And Congreve loved, and Swift endured, my lays,
The courtly Talbot, Somers, Sheffield read,
E'en mitred Rochester would nod the head,

And St. John's self (great Dryden's friend before)
 With open arms received one poet more.
 Happy my studies, when by these approved !
 Happier their author, when by these beloved !
 From these the world will judge of men and books,
 Not from the Burnets, Oldmixons, and Cooks.

Soft were my numbers : who could take offence
 While pure description held the place of sense ?
 Like gentle Fanny's was my flowery theme,
 ' A painted mistress, or a purling stream.'
 Yet then did Gildon draw his venal quill ;
 I wish'd the man a dinner, and sat still :
 Yet then did Dennis rave in furious fret ;
 I never answer'd ; I was not in debt ;
 If want provoked, or madness made them print,
 I waged no war with Bedlam or the Mint.

Did some more sober critic come abroad ?
 If wrong, I smiled ; if right, I kiss'd the rod :
 Pains, reading, study, are their just pretence,
 And all they want is spirit, taste, and sense.
 Commas and points they set exactly right,
 And 'twere a sin to rob them of their mite.
 Yet ne'er one sprig of laurel graced these ribalds,
 From slashing Bently down to piddling Tibbalds :
 Each wight, who reads not, and but scans and spells
 Each word-catcher, that lives on syllables,
 E'en such small critics some regard may claim,
 Preserved in Milton's or in Shakspeare's name.
 Pretty ! in amber to observe the forms
 Of hairs, or straws, or dirt, or grubs, or worms !
 The things we know are neither rich nor rare,
 But wonder how the devil they got there.

Were others angry ? I excused them too ;
 Well might they rage : I gave them but their due
 A man's true merit 'tis not hard to find ;
 But each man's secret standard in his mind,
 That casting-weight pride adds to emptiness
 This, who can gratify ? for who can guess ?

PROLOGUE TO THE SATIRES. 11

The bard whom pilfer'd pastorals renown,
 Who turns a Persian tale for half a crown ;
 Just writes to make his barrenness appear,
 And strains from hard-bound brains eight lines a year
 He who, still wanting, though he lives on theft,
 Steals much, spends little, yet has nothing left :
 And he, who, now to sense, now nonsense leaning,
 Means not, but blunders round about a meaning ;
 And he, whose fustian's so sublimely bad,
 It is not poetry, but prose run mad :
 All these my modest satire bade translate,
 And own'd that nine such poets made a Tate.
 How did they fume, and stamp, and roar, and chafe,
 And swear not Addison himself was safe.

Peace to all such ! but were there one whose fires
 True genius kindles, and fair fame inspires ;
 Bless'd with each talent and each art to please,
 And born to write, converse, and live with ease,
 Should such a man, too fond to rule alone,
 Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne,
 View him with scornful, yet with jealous eyes,
 And hate for arts that caused himself to rise ;
 Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
 And, without sneering, teach the rest to sneer ;
 Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
 Just hint a fault, and hesitate dislike ;
 Alike reserved to blame or to commend,
 A timorous foe, and a suspicious friend ;
 Dreading e'en fools, by flatterers besieged,
 And so obliging that he ne'er oblig'd ;
 Like Cato, give his little senate laws,
 And sit attentive to his own applause ;
 While wits and Templars every sentence raise,
 And wonder with a foolish face of praise—
 Who but must laugh, if such a man there be ?
 Who would not weep, if Atticus were he ?
 What though my name stood rubric on the walls
 Or plaster'd posts, with claps, in capitals ?

12 POPE'S POETICAL WORKS.

Or smoking forth, a hundred hawkers' load,
 On wings of winds came flying all abroad ?
 I sought no homage from the race that write :
 I kept, like Asian monarchs, from their sight :
 Poems I heeded (now be-rhymed so long)
 No more than thou, great George ! a birth-day song
 I ne'er with wits or witlings pass'd my days,
 To spread about the itch of verse and praise ;
 Nor like a puppy, daggled through the town,
 To fetch and carry sing-song up and down ;
 Nor at rehearsals sweat, and mouth'd, and cried,
 With handkerchief and orange at my side :
 But sick of fops, and poetry, and prate,
 To Bufo left the whole Castalian state.

Proud as Apollo on his forked hill,
 Sat full-blown Bufo, puff'd by every quill ;
 Fed with soft dedication all day long,
 Horace and he went hand and hand in song.
 His library (where busts of poets dead,
 And a true Pindar stood without a head)
 Received of wits an undistinguish'd race,
 Who first his judgment ask'd, and then a place ;
 Much they extoll'd his pictures, much his seat,
 And flatter'd every day, and some days eat ;
 Till, grown more frugal in his riper days,
 He paid some bards with port, and some with praise
 To some a dry rehearsal was assign'd,
 And others (harder still) he paid in kind.
 Dryden alone (what wonder ?) came not nigh ;
 Dryden alone escaped this judging eye :
 But still the great have kindness in reserve :
 He help'd to bury whom he help'd to starve.

May some choice patron bless each grey-goose quill
 May every Bavius have his Bufo still !
 So when a statesman wants a day's defence,
 Or envy holds a whole week's war with sense,
 Or simple pride for flattery makes demands,
 May dunce by dunce be whistled off my hands.

PROLOGUE TO THE SATIRES. 13

Bless'd be the great ! for those they take away,
 And those they left me—for they left me Gay :
 Left me to see neglected genius bloom,
 Neglected die, and tell it on his tomb :
 Of all thy blameless life the sole return
 My verse, and Queensberry weeping o'er thy urn !
 Oh, let me live my own, and die so too !
 (To live and die is all I have to do :)
 Maintain a poet's dignity and ease,
 And see what friends, and read what books I please ;
 Above a patron, though I condescend
 Sometimes to call a minister my friend.
 I was not born for courts or great affairs :
 I pay my debts, believe, and say my prayers ;
 Can sleep without a poem in my head,
 Nor know if Dennis be alive or dead.
 Why am I ask'd what next shall see the light ?
 Heavens ! was I born for nothing but to write ?
 Has life no joys for me ? or (to be grave)
 Have I no friend to serve, no soul to save ?
 ' I found him close with Swift '—' Indeed ! no doubt,
 Cries prating Balbus, ' something will come out.'
 'Tis all in vain, deny it as I will ;
 ' No, such a genius never can lie still :'
 And then for mine obligingly mistakes
 The first lampoon sir Will or Bubo makes.
 Poor, guiltless I ! and can I choose but smile,
 When every coxcomb knows me by my style ?
 Cursed be the verse, how well soe'er it flow,
 That tends to make one worthy man my foe,
 Give virtue scandal, innocence a fear,
 Or from the soft-eyed virgin steal a tear :
 But he who hurts a harmless neighbour's peace,
 Insults fallen worth, or beauty in distress,
 Who loves a lie, lame slander helps about,
 Who writes a libel, or who copies out ;
 That fop, whose pride affects a patron's name,
 Yet absent, wounds an author's honest fame ;

Who can your merit selfishly approve,
 And show the sense of it without the love ;
 Who has the vanity to call you friend,
 Yet wants the honour, injured, to defend ;
 Who tells whate'er you think, whate'er you say,
 And, if he lie not, must at least betray ;
 Who to the dean and silver bell can swear,
 And sees at Canons what was never there ;
 Who reads but with a lust to misapply,
 Makes satire a lampoon, and fiction lie :
 A lash like mine no honest man shall dread,
 But all such babbling blockheads in his stead.

Let Sporus tremble—A. What ? that thing of silk,

Sporus, that mere white curd of ass's milk ?
 Satire or sense, alas ! can Sporus feel ?
 Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel ?

P. Yet let me flap this bug with gilded wings,
 This painted child of dirt, that stinks and stings :
 Whose buzz the witty and the fair annoys,
 Yet wit ne'er tastes, and beauty ne'er enjoys :
 So well-bred spaniels civilly delight
 In mumbling of the game they dare not bite.
 Eternal smiles his emptiness betray,
 As shallow streams run dimpling all the way.
 Whether in florid impotence he speaks,
 And as the prompter breathes, the puppet squeaks,
 Or at the ear of Eve, familiar toad,
 Half froth, half venom, spits himself abroad,
 In puns, or politics, or tales, or lies,
 Or spite, or smut, or rhymes, or blasphemies :
 His wit all see-saw, between that and this,
 Now high, now low, now master up, now miss,
 And he himself one vile antithesis.
 Amphibious thing ! that, acting either part,
 The trifling head, or the corrupted heart ;
 Fop at the toilet, flatterer at the board,
 Now trips a lady, and now struts a lord.

Eve's tempter thus the rabbins have express'd,
 A cherub's face, and reptile all the rest :
 Beauty that shocks you, parts that none will trust,
 Wit that can creep, and pride that licks the dust.

Not fortune's worshipper, nor fashion fool,
 Not lucre's madman, nor ambition's tool,
 Not proud, nor servile : be one poet's praise,
 That, if he pleased, he pleased by many ways
 That flattery, e'en to kings, he held a shame,
 And thought a lie in verse or prose the same ;
 That not in fancy's maze he wander'd long,
 But stoop'd to truth, and moralized his song ;
 That not for fame, but virtue's better end,
 He stood the furious foe, the timid friend,
 The damning critic, half-approving wit,
 The coxcomb hit, or fearing to be hit :
 Laugh'd at the loss of friends he never had,
 The dull, the proud, the wicked, and the mad ;
 The distant threats of vengeance on his head,
 The blow unfelt, the tear he never shed ;
 The tale revived, the lie so oft o'erthrown,
 The imputed trash, and dulness not his own ;
 The morals blacken'd when the writings 'scape,
 The libell'd person, and the pictured shape ;
 Abuse, on all he loved, or loved him, spread,
 A friend in exile, or a father dead ;
 The whisper, that, to greatness still too near,
 Perhaps yet vibrates on his sovereign's ear—
 Welcome for thee, fair virtue ! all the past :
 For thee, fair virtue ! welcome e'en the last !

A. But why insult the poor, affront the great !

P. A knave's a knave to me, in every state ;
 Alike my scorn, if he succeed or fail,
 Sporus at court, or Japhet in a jail :
 A hireling scribbler, or a hireling peer,
 Knight of the post corrupt, or of the shire ;
 If on a pillory, or near a throne,
 He gain his prince's ear, or lose his own.

Yet soft by nature, more a dupe than wit,
 Sappho can tell you how this man was bit ;
 This dreaded satirist Dennis will confess
 Foe to his pride, but friend to his distress !
 So humble, he has knock'd at Tibbald's door,
 Has drunk with Cibber, nay, has rhymed for Moore :

Full ten years slander'd, did he once reply ?
 Three thousand suns went down on Welsted's lie
 To please a mistress one aspersed his life ;
 He lash'd him not, but let her be his wife :
 Let Budgell charge low Grub street on his quill,
 And write whate'er he pleased, except his will ;
 Let the two Curlls of town and court abuse
 His father, mother, body, soul, and muse
 Yet why ? that father held it for a rule,
 It was a sin to call our neighbour fool :
 That harmless mother thought no wife a whore :
 Hear this and spare his family, James Moore !
 Unspotted names, and memorable long,
 If there be force in virtue or in song.

Of gentle blood (part shed in honour's cause,
 While yet in Britain honour had applause)
 Each parent sprung—A. What fortune, pray ?

P. Their own,

And better got than Bestia's from the throne.
 Born to no pride, inheriting no strife,
 Nor marrying discord in a noble wife :
 Stranger to civil and religious rage,
 The good man walk'd innoxious through his age
 No courts he saw, no suits would ever try,
 Nor dared an oath, nor hazarded a lie.
 Unlearn'd, he knew no schoolman's subtle art,
 No language but the language of the heart.
 By nature honest, by experience wise ;
 Healthy by temperance and by exercise ;
 His life, though long, to sickness pass'd unknown,
 His death was instant and without a groan.

O grant me thus to live, and thus to die !
 Who sprung from kings shall know less joy than I.
 O friend ! may each domestic bliss be thine !
 Be no displeasing melancholy mine ;
 Me, let the tender office long engage,
 To rock the cradle of reposing age,
 With lenient arts extend a mother's breath,
 Make languor smile, and smooth the bed of death ;
 Explore the thought, explain the asking eye,
 And keep awhile one parent from the sky !
 On cares like these if length of days attend,
 May Heaven, to bless those days, preserve my friend !
 Preserve him social, cheerful, and serene,
 And just as rich as when he served a queen !
 A. Whether that blessing be denied or given,
 Thus far was right ; the rest belongs to Heaven.

 SATIRES AND EPISTLES

HORACE, IMITATED.

---

 ADVERTISEMENT.

The occasion of publishing these Imitations was the clamour raised on some of my Epistles. An answer from Horace was both more full, and of more dignity, than any I could have made in my own person : and the example of much greater freedom in so eminent a divine as Dr. Donne, secured a proof with what indignation and contempt a Christian may treat vice or folly, in ever so low or ever so high a station. Both these authors were acceptable to the princes and ministers under whom they lived. The satires of Dr. Donne I versified at the desire of the earl of Oxford, while he was lord treasurer, and of the duke of Shrewsbury, who had been secretary of state ; neither of whom looked upon a satire on vicious courts as any reflection on those they served in. And, indeed there is not in the world a greater error, than that which fools are so apt to fall into, and knaves with good reason to encourage, the mistaking a satirist for a libeller; whereas to a true satirist nothing is so odious as a libeller, for the same reason as to a man truly virtuous nothing is so hateful as a hypocrite.

Uni æquus virtuti atque ejus amicis.

Whoever expects a paraphrase of Horace, or a faithful copy of his genius, or manner of writing, in these imitations, will be much disappointed. Our author uses the Roman poet for little more than his canvass: and if the old design or colouring chance to suit his purpose, it is well; if not, he employs his own, without scruple or ceremony. Hence it is, he is so frequently serious where Horace is in jest, and at ease where Horace is disturbed. In a word, he regulates his movements no further on his original, than was necessary for his concurrence in promoting their common plan of reformation of manners.

Had it been his purpose merely to paraphrase an ancient satirist, he had hardly made choice of Horace: with whom, as a poet, he held little in common, besides a comprehensive knowledge of life and manners, and a certain curious felicity of expression, which consists in using the simplest language with dignity and the most ornamented with ease. For the rest, his harmony and strength of numbers, his force and splendour of colouring, his gravity and sublimity of sentiment, would have rather led him to another model. Nor was his temper less unlike that of Horace than his talents. What Horace would only smile at, Mr. Pope would treat with the grave severity of Persius; and what Mr. Pope would strike with the caustic lightning of Juvenal, Horace would content himself in turning into ridicule.

If it be asked, then, why he took any body at all to imitate, he has informed us in his advertisement. To which we may add, that this sort of imitations, which are of the nature of parodies, adds reflected grace and splendour on original wit. Besides, he deemed it more modest to give the name of imitations to his satire, than, like Despreaux, to give the name of satires to imitations.

BOOK II.—SATIRE I.

TO MR FORTESCUE.

P THERE are (I scarce can think it, but am told)
 There are to whom my satire seems too bold;
 Scarce to wise Peter complaisant enough,
 And something said of Chartres much too rough.
 The lines are weak, another's pleased to say:
 Lord Fanny spins a thousand such a day.
 Timorous by nature, of the rich in awe,
 I come to counsel learned in the law:
 You 'll give me, like a friend, both sage and free,
 Advice: and (as you use) without a fee.

F. I'd write no more.

P. Not write? but then I think,
 And for my soul I cannot sleep a wink.
 I nod in company, I wake at night,
 Fools rush into my head, and so I write.
 F. You could not do a worse thing for your life.
 Why, if the night seems tedious—take a wife:
 Or rather truly, if your point be rest,
 Lettuce and cowslip wine; probatum est.
 But talk with Celsus, Celsus will advise
 Hartshorn, or something that shall close your eyes.
 Or, if you needs must write, write Cæsar's praise,
 You 'll gain at least a knighthood, or the bays.

P. What, like sir Richard! rumbling, rough, and fierce
 With arms, and George and Brunswick crowd the verse

Rend with tremendous sound your ears asunder,
 With gun, drum, trumpet, blunderbuss, and thunder !
 Or nobly wild, with Budgell's fire and force,
 Paint angels trembling round his fallen horse ?

F. Then all your muse's softer art display ;
 Let Carolina smooth the tuneful lay ;
 Lull with Amelia's liquid name the Nine,
 And sweetly flow through all the royal line.

P. Alas ! few verses touch their nicer ear ;
 They scarce can bear their laureat twice a year :
 And justly Cæsar scorns the poet's lays ;
 It is to history he trusts for praise.

F. Better be Cibber, I'll maintain it still,
 Than ridicule all taste, blaspheme quadrille,
 Abuse the city's best good men in metre,
 And laugh at peers that put their trust in Peter ;
 E'en those you touch not, hate you.

P. What should ail 'em ?

F. A hundred smart in Timon and in Balaam ;
 The fewer still you name, you wound the more ;
 Bond is but one, but Harpax is a score.

P. Each mortal has his pleasure : none deny
 Scarsdale his bottle, Darty his ham-pie ;
 Ridotta sips and dances, till she see
 The doubling lustres dance as fast as she :
 F— loves the senate, Hockleyhole his brother
 Like in all else, as one egg to another.
 I love to pour out all myself, as plain
 As downright Shippen, or as old Montagne :
 In them, as certain to be loved as seen,
 The soul stood forth, nor kept a thought within
 In me what spots (for spots I have) appear,
 Will prove at least the medium must be clear.
 In this impartial glass, my muse intends
 Fair to expose myself, my foes, my friends ;
 Publish the present age ; but where my text
 Is vice too high, reserve it for the next :
 My foes shall wish my life a longer date,
 And every friend the less lament my fate.

My head and heart thus flowing through my quill,
 Verseman or Proseman, term me which you will,
 Papist or Protestant, or both between,
 Like good Erasmus in an honest mean,
 In moderation placing all my glory,
 While Tories call me Whig, and Whigs a Tory.

Satire's my weapon, but I'm too discreet
 To run a-muck, and tilt at all I meet ;
 I only wear it in a land of Hector's,
 Thieves, supercargoes, sharpers, and directors.
 Save but our army! and let Jove incrust
 Swords, pikes, and guns, with everlasting rust!
 Peace is my dear delight—not Fleury's more:
 But touch me, and no minister so sore.
 Whoe'er offends, at some unlucky time
 Slides into verse, and hitches in a rhyme,
 Sacred to ridicule his whole life long,
 And the sad burthen of some merry song.

Slander or poison dread from Delia's rage ;
 Hard words or hanging, if your judge be Page:
 From furious Sappho scarce a milder fate,
 P-x'd by her love, or libell'd by her hate.
 Its proper power to hurt, each creature feels ;
 Bulls aim their horns, and asses lift their heels ;
 'Tis a bear's talent not to kick, but hug ;
 And no man wonders he's not stung by pug.
 So drink with Walters, or with Chartres eat,
 They 'll never poison you, they 'll only cheat

Then, learned sir! (to cut the matter short)
 Whate'er my fate, or well or ill at court ;
 Whether old age, with faint but cheerful ray,
 Attends to gild the evening of my day,
 Or Death's black wing already be display'd,
 To wrap me in the universal shade ;
 Whether the darken'd room to muse invite,
 Or whiten'd wall provoke the skewer to write ;
 In durance, exile, Bedlam, or the Mint,
 Like Lee or Budgell, I will rhyme and print.

F. Alas, young man! your days can ne'er be long
 In flower of age you perish for a song!
 Plums and directors, Shylock and his wife,
 Will club their testers, now, to take your life!

P. What! arm'd for Virtue when I point the pen,
 Brand the bold front of shameless guilty men;
 Dash the proud gamester in his gilded car;
 Bare the mean heart that lurks beneath a star;
 Can there be wanting, to defend her cause,
 Lights of the church, or guardians of the laws?
 Could pension'd Boileau lash in honest strain
 Flatterers and bigots e'en in Louis' reign?
 Could laureat Dryden pimp and friar engage,
 Yet neither Charles nor James be in a rage?
 And I not strip the gilding off a knave,
 Unplaced, unpension'd, no man's heir or slave?
 I will, or perish in the generous cause:
 Hear this, and tremble! you who 'scape the laws.
 Yes, while I live, no rich or noble knave
 Shall walk the world in credit to his grave:
 To Virtue only and her friends a friend,
 The world beside may murmur or commend.
 Know, all the distant din that world can keep,
 Rolls o'er my grotto, and but soothes my sleep.
 There, my retreat the best companions grace,
 Chiefs out of war, and statesmen out of place.
 There St. John mingles with my friendly bowl
 The feast of reason and the flow of soul:
 And he, whose lightning pierced the Iberian lines,
 Now forms my quineunx, and now ranks my vines
 Or tames the genius of the stubborn plain,
 Almost as quickly as he conquer'd Spain.

Envy must own, I live among the great,
 No pimp of pleasure, and no spy of state:
 With eyes that pry not, tongue that ne'er repeats,
 Fond to spread friendships, but to cover heats;
 To help who want, to forward who excel;
 This, all who know me, know, who love me, tell;

And who unknown defame me, let them be
Scribblers or peers, alike are mob to me.

This is my plea, on this I rest my cause—
What saith my counsel, learned in the laws?

F. Your plea is good; but still I say, beware!

Laws are explain'd by men—so have a care
It stands on record, that in Richard's times
A man was hang'd for very honest rhymes;
Consult the statute, quart, I think it is,
Edwardi sext. or prim. et quint. Eliz.

See libels, satires—here you have it—read.

P. Libels and satires! lawless things indeed!

But grave epistles, bringing vice to light,
Such as a king might read, a bishop write,
Such as sir Robert would approve—

F. Indeed!

The case is alter'd—you may then proceed;
In such a case the plaintiff will be hiss'd,
My lords the judges laugh, and you're dismiss'd.

BOOK II.—SATIRE II.

TO MR. BETHEL.

WHAT, and how great, the virtue and the art
To live on little with a cheerful heart!

(A doctrine sage, but truly none of mine;)

Let's talk, my friends, but talk before we dine.

Not when a gilt buffet's reflected pride

Turns you from sound philosophy aside:

Not when from plate to plate your eye-balls roll,

And the brain dances to the mantling bowl.

Hear Bethel's sermon, one not versed in schools,
But strong in sense, and wise without the rules.

'Go work, hunt, exercise,' he thus began,

'Then scorn a homely dinner, if you can.

Your wine lock'd up, your butler stroll'd abroad,
 Or fish denied (the river yet unthaw'd,)
 If then plain bread and milk will do the feat,
 The pleasure lies in you, and not the meat.'

Preach as I please, I doubt our curious men
 Will choose a pheasant still before a hen .
 Yet hens of Guinea full as good I hold,
 Except you eat the feathers green and gold.
 Of carps and mullets why prefer the great,
 (Though cut in pieces ere my lord can eat,)
 Yet for small turbots such esteem profess ?
 Because God made these large, the other less
 Oldfield, with more than harpy throat endued,
 Cries, ' Send me, gods ! a whole hog barbecued !
 O blast it, south-winds ! till a stench exhale
 Rank as the ripeness of a rabbit's tail.
 By what criterion do you eat, d'ye think,
 If this is prized for sweetness, that for stink ?
 When the tired glutton labours through a treat,
 He finds no relish in the sweetest meat ;
 He calls for something bitter, something sour,
 And the rich feast concludes extremely poor :
 Cheap eggs, and herbs, and olives, still we see ;
 Thus much is left of old simplicity !
 The robin-red-breast till of late had rest,
 And children sacred held a martin's nest,
 Till beccaficos sold so devilish dear
 To one that was, or would have been, a peer.
 Let me extol a cat on oysters fed,
 I'll have a party at the Bedford head ;
 Or e'en to crack live crawfish recommend,
 I'd never doubt at court to make a friend.
 'Tis yet in vain, I own, to keep a pother
 About one vice, and fall into the other :
 Between excess and famine lies a mean ;
 Plain, but not sordid ; though not splendid, clean
 Avidien, or his wife, (no matter which,
 For him you 'll call a dog, and her a bitch,)

Sell their presented partridges and fruits,
 And humbly live on rabbits and on roots ;
 One half-pint bottle serves them both to dine ;
 And is at once their vinegar and wine.
 But on some lucky day (as when they found
 A lost bank bill, or heard their son was drown'd,)
 At such a feast, old vinegar to spare,
 Is what two souls so generous cannot bear :
 Oil, though it stink, they drop by drop impart,
 But souse the cabbage with a bounteous heart.
 He knows to live, who keeps the middle state,
 And neither leans on this side nor on that ;
 Nor stops, for one bad cork, his butler's pay,
 Swears, like Albutius, a good cook away ;
 No: lets, like Nævius, every error pass,
 The musty wine, foul cloth, or greasy glass.
 Now hear what blessings temperance can bring :
 (Thus said our friend, and what he said I sing :)
 First health: the stomach (cramm'd from every dish,
 A tomb of boil'd and roast, and flesh and fish,
 Where bile, and wind, and phlegm, and acid jar,
 And all the man is one intestine war,)
 Remembers oft the schoolboy's simple fare,
 The temperate sleeps, and spirits light as air.
 How pale each worshipful and reverend guest
 Rise from a clergy or a city feast !
 What life in all that ample body ? say,
 What heavenly particle inspires the clay ?
 The soul subsides, and wickedly inclines
 To seem but mortal e'en in sound divines.
 On morning wings how active springs the mind,
 That leaves the load of yesterday behind !
 How easy every labour it pursues !
 How coming to the poet every Muse !
 Not but we may exceed, some holy time,
 Or tired in search of truth, or search of rhyme ;
 Ill health some just indulgence may engage ;
 And more the sickness of long life, old age :

For fainting age what cordial drop remains,
If our intemperate youth the vessel drains ?

Our fathers praised rank venison. You suppose,
Perhaps, young men ! our fathers had no nose.
Not so : a buck was then a week's repast,
And 'twas their point, I ween, to make it last :
More pleased to keep it till their friends could come,
Than eat the sweetest by themselves at home.
Why had not I in those good times my birth,
Ere coxcomb-pies or coxcombs were on earth ?

Unworthy he the voice of fame to hear,
That sweetest music to an honest ear,
(For 'faith, lord Fanny ! you are in the wrong,
The world's good word is better than a song ;)
Who has not learn'd, fresh sturgeon and ham-pic
Are no rewards for want and infamy !
When luxury has lick'd up all thy pelf,
Cursed by thy neighbours, thy trustees, thyself ;
To friends, to fortune, to mankind a shame,
Think how posterity will treat thy name ;
And buy a rope, that future times may tell
Thou hast at least bestow'd one penny well.

'Right,' cries his lordship, 'for a rogue in need
To have a taste, is insolence indeed :
In me 'tis noble, suits my birth and state,
My wealth unwieldy, and my heap too great.'
Then, like the sun, let bounty spread her ray,
And shine that superfluity away.

O impudence of wealth ! with all thy store
How darest thou let one worthy man be poor !
Shall half the new-built churches round thee fall ?
Make keys, build bridges, or repair Whitehall :
Or to thy country let that heap be lent,
As M**o's was, but not at five per cent.
Who thinks that fortune cannot change her mind,
Prepares a dreadful jest for all mankind.
And who stands safest ? tell me, is it he
That spreads and swells in puff'd prosperity,

Or bless'd with little, whose preventing care
In peace provides fit arms against a war ?

Thus Bethel spoke, who always speaks his thought,
And always thinks the very thing he ought :
His equal mind I copy what I can,
And as I love, would imitate the man.
In South-sea days not happier, when surmised,
The lord of thousands, than if now excised ;
In forest planted by a father's hand,
Than in five acres now of rented land.
Content with little I can piddle here
On brocoli and mutton, round the year ;
But ancient friends (though poor, or out of play)
That touch my bell, I cannot turn away.

'Tis true, no turbots dignify my boards,
But gudgeons, flounders, what my Thames affords !
To Hounslow-heath I point, and Bansted-down,
Thence comes your mutton, and these chicks my own:
From yon old walnut tree a shower shall fall ;
And grapes long lingering on my only wall ;
And figs from standards and espalier join ;
The devil is in you if you cannot dine :
Then cheerful healths (your mistress shall have place,)

And, what's more rare, a poet shall say grace.

Fortune not much of humbling me can boast ;
Though double tax'd, how little have I lost !
My life's amusements have been just the same,
Before and after standing armies came.
My lands are sold, my father's house is gone .
I'll hire another's : is not that my own,
And yours, my friends ? through whose free opening gate

None comes too early, none departs too late ;
(For I, who hold sage Homer's rule the best,
Welcome the coming, speed the going guest.)

' Pray Heaven it last !' cries Swift, ' as you go on :
I wish to God this house had been your own .

Pity! to build, without a son or wife;
 Why, you'll enjoy it only all your life!
 Well, if the use be mine, can it concern one,
 Whether the name belong to Pope or Vernon?
 What's property? dear Swift! you see it alter
 From you to me, from me to Peter Walter;
 Or in a mortgage, prove a lawyer's share;
 Or in a jointure, vanish from the heir;
 Or in pure equity (the case not clear)
 The Chancery takes your rents for twenty year;
 At best, it falls to some ungracious son,
 Who cries, 'My father's damn'd, and all's my own
 Shades, that to Bacon could retreat afford,
 Become the portion of a booby lord;
 And Hemsley, once proud Buckingham's delight,
 Slides to a scrivener, or a city knight.
 Let lands and houses have what lords they will,
 Let us be fix'd, and our own masters still.

 BOOK I.—EPISTLE I.

TO LORD BOLINGBROKE.

ST. JOHN, whose love indulg'd my labours past,
 Matures my present, and shall bound my last!
 Why will you break the sabbath of my days?
 Now sick alike of envy and of praise.
 Public too long, ah, let me hide my age!
 See modest Cibber now has left the stage:
 Our generals now, retired to their estates,
 Hang their old trophies o'er the garden gates,
 In life's cool evening satiate of applause,
 Nor fond of bleeding, e'en in Brunswick's cause.
 A voice there is, that whispers in my ear,
 ('Tis reason's voice, which sometimes one can hear,
 'Friend Pope! be prudent, let your Muse take breath,
 And never gallop Pegasus to death;

Lest stiff and stately, void of fire or force,
 You limp, like Blackmore on a lord mayor's horse.'

Farewell then verse, and love, and every toy,
 The rhymes and rattles of the man or boy ;
 What right, what true, what fit, we justly call,
 Let this be all my care—for this is all :
 To lay this harvest up, and hoard with haste,
 What every day will want, and most the last.

But ask not to what doctors I apply ?
 Sworn to no master, of no sect am I :
 As drives the storm, at any door I knock,
 And house with Montagne now, or now with Locke :
 Sometimes a patriot, active in debate,
 Mix with the world, and battle for the state ;
 Free as young Lyttleton, her cause pursue,
 Still true to virtue, and as warm as true :
 Sometimes with Aristippus, or St. Paul,
 Indulge my candour, and grow all to all,
 Back to my native moderation slide,
 And win my way by yielding to the tide.

Long as to him who works for debt the day,
 Long as the night to her whose love's away ;
 Long as the year's dull circle seems to run,
 When the brisk minor pants for twenty-one ;
 So slow the unprofitable moments roll,
 That lock up all the functions of my soul ;
 That keep me from myself ; and still delay
 Life's instant business to a future day :
 That task which as we follow or despise,
 The eldest is a fool, the youngest wise :
 Which done, the poorest can no wants endure ;
 And which not done, the richest must be poor.

Late as it is, I put myself to school,
 And feel some comfort, not to be a fool.
 Weak though I am of limb, and short of sight,
 Far from a lynx, and not a giant quite ;
 I'll do what Mead and Cheselden advise,
 To keep these limbs, and to preserve these eyes

Not to go back, is somewhat to advance,
And men must walk at least before they dance.

Say, does thy blood rebel, thy bosom move
With wretched avarice, or as wretched love ?
Know there are words and spells which can control,
Between the fits, the fever of the soul ;
Know there are rhymes, which fresh and fresh applied,
Will cure the arrant'st puppy of his pride.
Be furious, envious, slothful, mad or drunk,
Slave to a wife, or vassal to a punk,
A Switz, a High-Dutch, or a Low-Dutch bear :
All that we ask is but a patient ear.

'Tis the first virtue, vices to abhor ;
And the first wisdom, to be fool no more.
But to the world no bugbear is so great,
As want of figure, and a small estate.
To either India see the merchant fly,
Scared at the spectre of pale poverty ;
See him, with pains of body, pangs of soul,
Burn through the tropic, freeze beneath the pole .
Wilt thou do nothing for a noble end,
Nothing to make philosophy thy friend ?
To stop thy foolish views, thy long desires,
And ease thy heart of all that it admires ?
Here wisdom calls : ' Seek virtue first, be bold !
As gold to silver, virtue is to gold.'
There, London's voice, ' Get money, money still !
And then let Virtue follow, if she will.'
This, this the saving doctrine, preach'd to all,
From low St. James's up to high St. Paul !
From him whose quills stand quiver'd at his ear,
To him who notches sticks at Westminster.

Barnard in spirit, sense, and truth abounds ;
Pray then what wants he ? Fourscore thousand
A pension, or such harness for a slave [pounds
As Bug now has, and Dorimant would have.
Barnard, thou art a cit with all thy worth ;
But Bug and D*, their honours, and so forth.

Yet every child another song will sing,
 Virtue, brave boys! 'tis virtue makes a king;
 True, conscious honour, is to feel no sin,
 He's arm'd without that 's innocent within;
 Be this thy screen, and this thy wall of brass;
 Compared to this, a minister 's an ass.

And say, to which shall our applause belong,
 This new court-jargon, or the good old song?
 The modern language of corrupted peers,
 Or what was spoke at Cressy or Poitiers?
 Who counsels best? who whispers, 'Be but great,
 With praise or infamy, leave that to fate;
 Get place and wealth, if possible, with grace;
 If not, by any means get wealth and place.'
 For what? to have a box where eunuchs sing,
 And foremost in the circle eye a king:
 Or he, who bids thee face with steady view
 Proud fortune, and look shallow greatness through:
 And, while he bids thee, sets the example too?
 If such a doctrine, in St. James's air,
 Should chance to make the well-dress'd rabble stare;

In honest S<sup>t</sup>'s take scandal at a spark,
 That less admires the palace than the park:
 'Faith I shall give the answer Reynard gave:
 I cannot like, dread sire, your royal cave;
 Because I see, by all the tracks about,
 Full many a beast goes in, but none come out'
 Adieu to Virtue, if you 're once a slave:
 Send her to court, you send her to her grave.

Well, if a king 's a lion, at the least
 The people are a many-headed beast;
 Can they direct what measures to pursue,
 Who know themselves so little what to do?
 Alike in nothing but one lust of gold,
 Just half the land would buy, and half be sold.
 Their country's wealth our mightier misers drain,
 Or cross, to plunder provinces, the main;

The rest, some farm the poor-box, some the pews;
 Some keep assemblies, and would keep the stews;
 Some with fat bucks on childless dotards fawn;
 Some win rich widows by their chine and brawn;
 While with the silent growth of ten per cent,
 In dirt and darkness, hundreds stink content.

Of all these ways, if each pursues his own,
 Satire, be kind, and let the wretch alone:

But show me one who has it in his power
 To act consistent with himself an hour.

St. Job sail'd forth, the evening bright and still:
 'No place on earth, he cried, 'like Greenwich-hill'

Up starts a palace; lo, the obedient base
 Slopes at its foot, the woods its sides embrace,
 The silver Thames reflects its marble face.

Now let some whimsy, or that devil within,
 Which guides all those who know not what they mean,

But give the knight (or give his lady) spleen;
 'Away, away! take all your scaffolds down,
 For snug's the word: my dear, we'll live in town:

At amorous Flavio is the stocking thrown?
 That very night he longs to lie alone.
 The fool whose wife elopes some thrice a quarter,
 For matrimonial solace dies a martyr.

Did ever Proteus, Merlin, any witch,
 Transform themselves so strangely as the rich?
 Well, but the poor—the poor have the same itch
 They change their weekly barber, weekly news,
 Prefer a new japanner to their shoes;

Discharge their garrets, move their beds, and run
 (They know not whither) in a chaise and one;
 They hire their sculler, and when once aboard,
 Grow sick, and damn the climate—like a lord.

You laugh, half-beau half-sloven if I stand,
 My wig all powder, and all snuff my band:
 You laugh, if coat and breeches strangely vary,
 White gloves, and linnen worthy lady Mary!

But when no prelate's lawn, with hair-shirt lined,
 Is half so incoherent as my mind,
 When (each opinion with the next at strife ;
 One ebb and flow of follies all my life,)
 I plant, root up ; I build and then confound ;
 Turn round to square, and square again to round ;
 You never change one muscle of your face,
 You think this madness but a common case,
 Nor once to Chancery, nor to Hale apply ;
 Yet hang your lip to see a seam awry !
 Careless how ill I with myself agree,
 Kind to my dress, my figure, not to me.
 Is this my guide, philosopher, and friend ?
 This he, who loves me, and who ought to mend ?
 Who ought to make me (what he can, or none)
 That man divine whom Wisdom calls her own ;
 Great without title, without fortune bless'd ;
 Rich e'en when plunder'd, honour'd while oppress'd ;
 Loved without youth, and follow'd without power :
 At home, though exiled ; free, though in the Tower ;
 In short, that reasoning, high immortal thing,
 Just less than Jove, and much above a king ;
 Nay, half in heaven—except (what's mighty odd)
 A fit of vapours clouds this demi-god !

◆ BOOK I.—EPISTLE VI.

TO MR. MURRAY.

This piece is the most finished of all his imitations, and executed in the high manner the Italian painters
 call con amore ; by which they mean, the exertion of that principle which puts the faculties on the stretch, and produces the supreme degree of excellence. For the poet had all the warmth of affection for the great lawyer to whom it is addressed ; and, indeed, no man ever more deserved to have a poet for his friend. In the obtaining of which, as neither vanity, party, nor fear, had any share, so he supported his title to it by all the offices of true friendship.

34 POPE'S POETICAL WORKS.

---

'Not to admire, is all the art I know,
To make men happy, and to keep them so.'
(Plain truth, dear Murray, needs no flowers of speech,
So take it in the very words of Creech.)

This vault of air, this congregated ball,
Self-centred sun, and stars that rise and fall,
There are, my friend! whose philosophic eyes
Look through, and trust the Ruler with his skies,
To him commit the hour, the day, the year,
And view this dreadful all without a fear.

Admire we then what earth's low entrails hold,
Arabian shores, or Indian seas infold ;
All the mad trade of fools and slaves for gold ?
Or popularity ? or stars and strings ?
The mob's applauses, or the gifts of kings ?
Say with what eyes we ought at courts to gaze,
And pay the great our homage of amaze ?

If weak the pleasure that from these can spring
The fear to want them is as weak a thing :
Whether we dread, or whether we desire,
In either case, believe me, we admire ;
Whether we joy or grieve, the same the curse,
Surprised at better, or surprised at worse.
Thus good or bad, to one extreme betray
The unbalanced mind, and snatch the man away
For virtue's self may too much zeal be had ;
The worst of madmen is a saint run mad.

Go then, and if you can, admire the state
Of beaming diamonds, and reflected plate ;
Procure a taste to double the surprise,
And gaze on Parian charms with learned eyes .
Be struck with bright brocade, or Tyrian dye,
Or birth-day nobles' splendid livery .

If not so pleased, at council-board rejoice
 To see their judgments hang upon thy voice ;
 From morn to night, at senate, rolls, and hall,
 Plead much, read more, dine late, or not at all.
 But wherefore all this labour, all this strife ?
 For fame, for riches, for a noble wife ?
 Shall one whom nature, learning, birth conspired
 To form, not to admire, but be admired,
 Sigh while his Chloe, blind to wit and worth,
 Weds the rich dulness of some son of earth ?
 Yet time ennobles, or degrades each line :
 It brighten'd Craggs's, and may darken thine.
 And what is fame ? the meanest have their day :
 The greatest can but blaze, and pass away.
 Graced as thou art, with all the power of words,
 So known, so honour'd, at the house of lords :
 Conspicuous scene ! another yet is nigh
 'More silent far,) where kings and poets lie :
 Where Murray (long enough his country's pride)
 Shall be no more than Tully or than Hyde !

Rack'd with sciatics, martyr'd with the stone,
 Will any mortal let himself alone ?
 See Ward by batter'd beaux invited over,
 And desperate misery lays hold on Dover.
 The case is easier in the mind's disease ;
 There all men may be cured whene'er they please
 Would ye be bless'd ? despise low joys, low gains ;
 Disdain whatever Cornbury disdains ;
 Be virtuous, and be happy for your pains.

But art thou one, whom new opinions sway ?
 One who believes as Tindal leads the way,
 Who virtue and a church alike disowns,
 Thinks that but words, and this but brick and stones ?

Fly then on all the wings of wild desire,
 Admire whate'er the maddest can admire.
 Is wealth thy passion ? Hence ! from pole to pole,
 Where winds can carry, or where waves can roll ;

For Indian spices, for Peruvian gold,
 Prevent the greedy, or outbid the bold :
 Advance thy golden mountain to the skies ;
 On the broad base of fifty thousand rise,
 Add one round hundred, and (if that's not fair)
 Add fifty more, and bring it to a square :
 For, mark the advantage ; just so many score
 Will gain a wife with half as many more ;
 Procure her beauty, make that beauty chaste,
 And then such friends—as cannot fail to last.
 A man of wealth is dubb'd a man of worth,
 Venus shall give him form, and Anstis birth.
 (Believe me, many a German prince is worse,
 Who proud of pedigree is poor of purse.)
 His wealth brave Timon gloriously confounds,
 Ask'd for a groat, he gives a hundred pounds ;
 Or if three ladies like a luckless play,
 Take the whole house upon the poet's day
 Now, in such exigences not to need,
 Upon my word, you must be rich indeed ;
 A noble superfluity it craves,
 Not for yourself, but for your fools and knaves ,
 Something, which for your honour they may cheat,
 And which it much becomes you to forget.
 If wealth alone then make and keep us bless'd,
 Still, still be getting, never, never rest.
 But if to power and place your passion lie,
 If in the pomp of life consist the joy ;
 Then hire a slave, or (if you will) a lord,
 To do the honours, and to give the word ;
 Tell at your levee, as the crowds approach,
 To whom to nod, whom take into your coach,
 Whom honour with your hand : to make remarks,
 Who rules in Cornwall, or who rules in Berks :
 This may be troublesome, is near the chair ;
 That makes three members, this can choose a mayor
 Instructed thus, you bow, embrace, protest,
 Adopt him son, or cousin at the least,
 Then turn about, and laugh at your own jest

Or if your life be one continued treat,
 If to live well means nothing but to eat;
 Up, up! cries gluttony, 'tis break of day,
 Go drive the deer, and drag the finny prey;
 With hounds and horns go hunt an appetite—
 So Russel did, but could not eat at night,
 Call'd happy dog! the beggar at his door,
 And envied thirst and hunger to the poor.
 Or shall we every decency confound;
 Through taverns, stews, and bagnios take our round;
 Go dine with Chartres, in each vice outdo
 K—I's lewd cargo, or Ty—y's crew;
 From Latian sirens, French Circæan feasts,
 Return well travell'd, and transform'd to beasts;
 Or for a tided punk, or foreign flame,
 Renounce our country, and degrade our name?
 If, after all, we must with Wilmot own,
 The cordial drop of life is love alone,
 And Swift cry wisely, Vive la bagatelle!
 The man that loves and laughs, must sure do well.
 Adieu—if this advice appear the worst,
 E'en take the counsel which I gave you first:
 Or better precepts if you can impart,
 Why do; I'll follow them with all my heart.

 BOOK II.—EPISTLE I.

 TO AUGUSTUS.

ADVERTISEMENT.

The reflections of Horace, and the judgments passed in his Epistle to Augustus, seemed so seasonable to the present times, that I could not help applying them to the use of my own country. The author thought them considerable enough to address them to his prince, whom he paints with all the great and good qualities of a monarch, upon whom the Romans depended for the increase of an absolute empire. But to make the poem entirely English, I was willing to add one or two of those which contribute to the happiness of a free people, and are more consistent with the welfare of our neighbours.

This Epistle will show the learned world to have fallen into two mistakes: one, that Augustus was the patron of poets in general; whereas he not only prohibited all but the best writers to name him, but recommended that care even to the civil magistrate. Admonebat prætores, ne paterentur nomen suum obsolescere, &c. The other, that this piece was only a general discourse of poetry; whereas it was an apology for the poets, in order to render Augustus more their patron. Horace here pleads the cause of his contemporaries, first against the taste of the town, whose humour it was to magnify the authors of the preceding age; secondly, against the court and nobility, who encourage only the writers for the theatre; and lastly, against the emperor himself, who had conceived them of little use to the government. He shows (by a view of the progress of learning, and the change of taste among the Romans) that the introduction of the polite arts of Greece had given the writers of his time great advantages over their predecessors; that their morals were much improved, and the licence of those ancient poets restrained; that satire and comedy were become more just and useful; that whatever extravagances were left on the stage, were owing to the ill taste of the nobility; that poets, under due regulations, were in many respects useful to the state; and concludes, that it was upon them the emperor himself must depend for his fame with posterity.

We may further learn from this Epistle, that Horace made his court to this great prince, by writing with a decent freedom towards him, with a just contempt of his low flatterers, and with a manly regard to his own character

WHILE you, great patron of mankind ! sustain
 The balanced world, and open all the main ;
 Your country, chief in arms, abroad defend ;
 At home, with morals, arts, and laws amend ;
 How shall the Muse, from such a monarch steal
 An hour, and not defraud the public weal ?

Edward and Henry, now the boast of fame,
 And virtuous Alfred, a more sacred name,
 After a life of generous toils endured,
 The Gaul subdued, or property secured,
 Ambition humbled, mighty cities storm'd,
 Or law establish'd, and the world reform'd,
 Closed their long glories with a sigh, to find
 The unwilling gratitude of base mankind !
 All human virtue to its latest breath
 Finds envy never conquer'd but by death.
 The great Alcides, every labour past,
 Had still this monster to subdue at last :
 Sure fate of all, beneath whose rising ray
 Each star of meaner merit fades away !
 Oppress'd we feel the beam directly beat ;
 Those suns of glory please not till they set.

To thee the world its present homage pays,
 The harvest early, but mature the praise :
 Great friend of liberty ! in kings a name
 Above all Greek, above all Roman fame ;
 Whose word is truth, as sacred and revered,
 As Heaven's own oracles from altars heard :
 Wonder of kings ! like whom, to mortal eyes,
 None e'er has risen, and none e'er shall rise.

Just in one instance, be it yet confess'd,
 Your people, sir, are partial in the rest :
 Foes to all living worth except your own,
 And advocates for folly dead and gone.
 Authors, like coins, grow dear as they grow old ;
 It is the rust we value, not the gold.
 Chaucer's worst ribaldry is learn'd by rote,
 And beastly Skelton heads of houses quote :

40 POPE'S POETICAL WORKS.

One likes no language but the Fairy Queen :
 A Scot will fight for Christ's Kirk o' the Green ;
 And each true Briton is to Ben so civil,
 He swears the Muses met him at the Devil.

*Though justly Greece her eldest sons admires,
 Why should not we be wiser than our sires ?
 In every public virtue we excel ;
 We build, we paint, we sing, we dance as well ;
 And learned Athens to our art must stoop,
 Could she behold us tumbling through a hoop.

If time improve our wits as well as wine,
 Say at what age a poet grows divine ?
 Shall we, or shall we not, account him so,
 Who died perhaps, a hundred years ago ?
 End all dispute ; and fix the year precise
 When British bards begin to immortalize ?

'Who lasts a century can have no flaw ;
 I hold that wit a classic, good in law.'

Suppose he wants a year, will you compound ?
 And shall we deem him ancient, right, and sound,
 Or damn to all eternity at once,
 At ninety-nine a modern and a dunce ?

'We shall not quarrel for a year or two ;
 By courtesy of England he may do.'

Then by the rule that made the horse-tail bare,
 I pluck out year by year, as hair by hair,
 And melt down ancients like a heap of snow
 While you, to measure merits, look in Stowe,
 And estimating authors by the year,
 Bestow a garland only on a bier.

Shakspeare (whom you and every playhouse-did Style the divine, the matchless, what you will)
 For gain, not glory, wing'd his roving flight,
 And grew immortal in his own despite.
 Ben, old and poor, as little seem'd to heed
 The life to come in every poet's creed.
 Who now reads Cowley ? if he pleases ye
 His moral pleases, not his pointed wit ;

Forgot his epic, nay Pindaric art,
 But still I love the language of his heart.
 ' Yet surely, surely, these were famous men !
 What boy but hears the savings of old Ben ?
 In all debates where critics bear a part,
 Not one but nods, and talks of Jonson's art,
 Of Shakspeare's nature, and of Cowley's wit ;
 How Beaumont's judgment check'd what Fletcher
 How Shadwell hasty, Wycherley was slow ; [writ ;
 But, for the passions, Southern, sure, and Rowe.
 These, only these, support the crowded stage,
 From eldest Heywood down to Cibber's age.'

All this may be ; the people's voice is odd,
 It is, and it is not, the voice of God.
 To Gammer Gurton if it give the bays,
 And yet deny the Careless Husband praise,
 Or say our fathers never broke a rule ;
 Why then, I say, the public is a fool.
 But let them own, that greater faults than we
 They had, and greater virtues, I'll agree.
 Spencer himself affects the obsolete,
 And Sydney's verse halts ill on Roman feet :
 Milton's strong pinion now not Heaven can bound,
 Now serpent-like in prose he sweeps the ground ;
 In quibbles, angel and archangel join,
 And God the Father turns a school divine.
 Not that I'd lop the beauties from his book,
 Like slashing Bentley with his desperate hook ;
 Or damn all Shakspeare, like the affected fool
 At court, who hates whate'er he read at school

But for the wits of either Charles's days,
 The mob of gentlemen who wrote with ease ;
 Sprat, Carew, Sedly, and a hundred more
 (Like twinkling stars, the miscellanies o'er,)
 One simile, that solitary shines
 In the dry desert of a thousand lines,
 Or lengthen'd thought that gleams through many a
 Has sanctified whole poems for an age. [page

I lose my patience, and I own it too,
 When works are censured, not as bad, but new ;
 While, if our elders break all reason's laws,
 These fools demand not pardon but applause.

On Avon's bank, where flowers eternal blow,
 If I but ask if any weed can grow ;
 One tragie sentence if I dare deride,
 Which Betterton's grave action dignified,
 Or well-mouth'd Booth with emphasis proclaims
 (Though but, perhaps, a muster-roll of names,)
 How will our fathers rise up in a rage,
 And swear all shame is lost in George's age!
 You'd think no fools disgraced the former reign,
 Did not some grave examples yet remain,
 Who scorn a lad should teach his father skill,
 And having once been wrong, will be so still.
 He, who to seem more deep than you or I,
 Extols old bards, or Merlin's prophecy,
 Mistake him not ; he envies, not admires,
 And to debase the sons exalts the sires.
 Had ancient times conspired to disallow
 What then was new, what had been ancient now ?
 Or what remain'd, so worthy to be read
 By learned eritics, of the mighty dead ?

In days of ease, when now the weary sword
 Was sheath'd, and luxury with Charles restored :
 In every taste of foreign courts improved,
 All, by the king's example lived and loved.
 Then peers grew proud in horsemanship to excel,
 Newmarket's glory rose, as Britain's fell ;
 The soldier breathed the gallantries of France,
 And every flowery courtier writ romance.
 Then marble, soften'd into life, grew warm,
 And yielding metal flow'd to human form :
 Lely on animated canvass stole
 The sleepy eye, that spoke the melting soul.
 No wonder then, when all was love and sport,
 The willing Muses were debauch'd at court :

On each enervate string they-taught the note
To pant, or tremble through an eunuch's throat.

But Britain, changeful as a child at play,
Now calls in princes, and now turns away.
Now Whig, now Tory, what we love we hate ;
Now all for pleasure, now for church or state ;
Now for prerogative, and now for laws ;
Effects unhappy ! from a noble cause.

Time was, a sober Englishman would knock
His servants up, and rise by five o'clock ;
Instruct his family in every rule,
And send his wife to church, his son to school.
To worship like his fathers, was his care ;
To teach their frugal virtues to his heir ;
To prove that luxury could never hold ;
And place on good security, his gold.
Now times are changed, and one poetic itch
Has seized the court and city, poor and rich ;
Sons, sires, and grandsires, all will bear the bays :
Our wives read Milton, and our daughters plays ;
To theatres and to rehearsals throng,
And all our grace at table is a song.
I, who so oft renounce the Muses, lie,
Not ***'s self e'er tells more fibs than I ;
When sick of Muse, our follies we deplore,
And promise our best friends to rhyme no more ,
We wake next morning in a raging fit,
And call for pen and ink to show our wit.

He served a 'prenticeship, who sets up shop ;
Ward tried on puppies, and the poor, his drop ;
E'en Radeliffe's doctors travel first to France,
Nor dare to practise till they've learn'd to dance.
Who builds a bridge that never drove a pile ?
(Should Ripley venture, all the world would smile
But those that cannot write, and those who ean,
All rhyme, and scrawl, and scribble to a man.

Yet, sir, reflect, the mischief is not great ;
These madmen néver hurt the church or state.

Sometimes the folly benefits mankind ;
 And rarely avarice taints the tuneful mind.
 Allow him but his plaything of a pen,
 He ne'er rebels, or plots, like other men .
 Flights of eashiers, or mobs he'll never mind,
 And knows no losses while the Muse is kind.
 To cheat a friend, or ward, he leaves to Peter ;
 The good man heaps up nothing but mere metre,
 Enjoys his garden and his book in quiet ;
 And then—a perfect hermit in his diet.

Of little use the man you may suppose,
 Who says in verse, what others say in prose :
 Yet let me show a poet's of some weight,
 And (though no soldier) useful to the state.
 What will a child learn sooner than a song ?
 What better teach a foreigner the tongue ?
 What's long or short, each accent where to place,
 And speak in public with some sort of grace ?
 I scarce can think him such a worthless thing,
 Unless he praise some monster for a king :
 Or virtue, or religion turn to sport,
 To please a lewd or unbelieving court.
 Unhappy Dryden !—In all Charles's days,
 Roscommon only boasts unspotted bays ;
 And in our own (excuse some courtly strains)
 No whiter page than Addison remains.
 He from the taste obscene reclaims our youth,
 And sets the passions on the side of truth,
 Forms the soft bosom with the gentlest art,
 And pours each human virtue in the heart.
 Let Ireland tell how wit upheld her cause,
 Her trade supported, and supplied her laws ;
 And leave on Swift this grateful verse engraved,
 ' The rights a court attack'd, a poet saved.'
 Behold the hand that wrought a nation's cure,
 Stretch'd to relieve the idiot and the poor,
 Proud vice to brand, or injured worth adorn,
 And stretch the ray to ages yet unborn.

Not but there are, who merit other palms ;
Hopkins and Sternhold glad the heart with psalms,
The boys and girls whom charity maintains,
Implore your help in these pathetic strains :
How could devotion touch the country pews,
Unless the gods bestowed a proper muse ?
Verse cheers their leisure, verse assists their work,
Verse prays for peace, or sings down pope and Turk.
The silenced preacher yields to potent strain,
And feels that grace his prayer besought in vain ;
The blessing thrills through all the labouring throng,
And heaven is won by violence of song.

Our rural ancestors, with little bless'd
Patient of labour when the end was rest,
Indulged the day that housed their annual grain,
With feasts, and offerings, and a thankful strain ;
The joy their wives, their sons, and servants share,
Ease of their toil, and partners of their care :
The laugh, the jest, attendants on the bowl,
Smoothed every brow, and open'd every soul :
With growing years the pleasing licence grew,
And taunts alternate innocently flew.
But times corrupt, and nature ill-inclined,
Produced the point that left a sting behind ;
Till, friend with friend, and families at strife,
Triumphant malice raged through private life.
Who felt the wrong, or fear'd it, took the alarm,
Appeal'd to law, and justice lent her arm.
At length by wholesome dread of statutes bound,
The poets learn'd to please, and not to wound ;
Most warp'd to flattery's side ; but some more nice,
Preserved the freedom and forbore the vice.
Hence satire rose, that just the medium hit,
And heals with morals what it hurts with wit.

We conquer'd France, but felt our captive's charms
Her arts victorious triumph'd o'er our arms ;
Britain to soft refinements less a foe,
Wit grew polite, and numbers learn'd to flow.

Waller was smooth ; but Dryden taught to join
 The varying verse, the full resounding line,
 The long majestic march, and energy divine :
 Though still some traces of our rustic vein
 And splayfoot verse remain'd, and will remain
 Late, very late, correctness grew our care,
 When the tired nation breathed from civil war,
 Exact Racine, and Corneille's noble fire,
 Show'd us that France had something to admire
 Not but the tragic spirit was our own,
 And full in Shakspeare, fair in Otway, shone .
 But Otway fail'd to polish or refine,
 And fluent Shakspeare scarce effaced a line.
 E'en copious Dryden wanted, or forgot,
 The last and greatest art, the art to blot.

Some doubt, if equal pains, or equal fire,
 The humbler muse of comedy require.
 But in known images of life, I guess
 The labour greater, as the indulgence less.
 Observe how seldom e'en the best succeed :
 Tell me if Congreve's fools are fools indeed ?
 What pert low dialogue has Farquhar writ !
 How Van wants grace, who never wanted wit .
 The stage how loosely does Astræa tread,
 Who fairly puts all characters to bed !
 And idie Cibber, how he breaks the laws,
 To make poor Pinkey eat with vast applause !
 But fill their purse, our poets' work is done,
 Alike to them, by pathos or by pun.

O you ! whom vanity's light bark conveys
 On fame's mad voyage by the wind of praise,
 With what a shifting gale your course you ply,
 For ever sunk too low, or borne too high ;
 Who pants for glory finds but short repose ;
 A breath revives him, or a breath o'erthrows
 Farewell the stage ! if, just as thrives the play
 The silly bard grows fat, or falls away.

There still remains, to mortify a wit,
 The many-headed monster of the pit :

A senseless, worthless, and unhonour'd crowd :
 Who, to disturb their betters mighty proud,
 Clattering their sticks before ten lines are spoke,
 Call for the farce, the bear, or the black-joke.
 What dear delight to Britons farce affords !
 Ever the taste of mobs, but now of lords !
 (Taste, that eternal wanderer, which flies
 From heads to ears, and now from ears to eyes :)
 The play stands still ; damn action and discourse,
 Back fly the scenes, and enter foot and horse ;
 Pageants on pageants, in long order drawn,
 Peers, heralds, bishops, ermine, gold, and lawn
 The champion too ! and to complete the jest,
 Old Edward's armour beams on Cibber's breast
 With laughter sure Democritus had died,
 Had he beheld an audience gape so wide.
 Let bear or elephant be e'er so white,
 The people sure, the people are the sight !
 Ah luckless poet ! stretch thy lungs and roar,
 That bear or elephant shall heed thee more ;
 While all its throats the gallery extends,
 And all the thunder of the pit ascends !
 Loud as the wolves, on Orca's stormy steer,
 Howl to the roarings of the northern deep.
 Such is the shout, the long-applauding note,
 At Quin's high plume, or Oldfield's petticoat ;
 Or when from court a birthday suit bestow'd,
 Sinks the lost actor in the tawdry load.
 Booth enters—hark ! the universal peal !
 ' But has he spoken ? ' Not a syllable.
 What shook the stage, and made the people stare ;
 Cato's long wig, flower'd gown, and lacquer'd chair
 Yet, lest you think I rally more than teach,
 Or praise malignly arts I cannot reach,
 Let me for once presume to instruct the times
 To know the poet from the man of rhymes :
 ' Tis he who gives my breast a thousand pains,
 Can make me feel each passion that he feigns ;

Enrage, compose, with more than magic art
 With pity, and with terror, tear my heart,
 And snatch me o'er the earth, or through the air
 To Thebes, to Athens, when he will, and where.

But not this part of the poetic state
 Alone, deserves the favour of the great :
 Think of those authors, sir, who would rely
 More on a reader's sense than gazer's eye.
 Or who shall wander where the Muses sing ?
 Who climb their mountain, or who taste their spring
 How shall we fill a library with wit,
 When Merlin's cave is half unfurnish'd yet ?

My liege ! why writers little claim your thought,
 I guess ; and, with your leave, will tell the fault ;
 We poets are (upon a poet's word)
 Of all mankind, the creatures most absurd :
 The season when to come, and when to go,
 To sing, or cease to sing, we never know ;
 And if we will recite nine hours in ten,
 You lose your patience just like other men.
 Then too we hurt ourselves, when, to defend
 A single verse, we quarrel with a friend ;
 Repeat unask'd ; lament the wit's too fine
 For vulgar eyes, and point out every line ;
 But most, when, straining with too weak a wing,
 We needs will write epistles to the king ;
 And from the moment we oblige the town,
 Expect a place or pension from the crown ;
 Or, dubb'd historians by express command,
 To enrol your triumphs o'er the seas and land,
 Be call'd to court to plan some work divine,
 As once for Louis, Boileau and Racine.

Yet think, great sir ! (so many virtues shown)
 Ah ! think what poet best may make them known
 Or choose at least some minister of grace,
 Fit to bestow the laureat's weighty place.

Charles, to late times to be transmitted fair,
 Assign'd his figure to Bernini's care ;

IMITATIONS OF HORACE.

And great Nassau to Kneller's hand decreed
 To fix him graceful on the bounding steed ;
 So well in paint and stone they judge of merit :
 But kings in wit may want discerning spirit.
 The hero William, and the martyr Charles,
 One knighted Blackmore, and one pension'd Quarles;
 Which made old Ben and surly Dennis swear,
 'No Lord's anointed, but a Russian bear.'

Not with such majesty, such bold relief,
 The forms august, of king, or conquering chief,
 E'er swell'd on marble, as in verse have shined
 (In polish'd verse) the manners and the mind.
 O! could I mount on the Mæonian wing,
 Your arms, your actions, your repose to sing ;
 What seas you traversed, and what fields you fought !
 Your country's peace, how oft, how dearly bought !
 How barbarous rage subsided at your word,
 And nations wonder'd while they dropp'd the sword !
 How, when you nodded, o'er the land and deep,
 Peace stole her wing, and wrapp'd the world in sleep
 Till earth's extremes your meditation own,
 And Asia's tyrants tremble at your throne—
 But verse, alas ! your majesty disdains ;
 And I'm not used to panegyric strains :
 The zeal of fools offends at any time,
 But most of all, the zeal of fools in rhyme.
 Besides, a fate attends on all I write,
 That when I aim at praise they say I bite.
 A vile encomium doubly ridiculous :
 There's nothing blackens like the ink of fools
 If true, a woful likeness ; and if lies,
 'Praise undeserved is scandal in disguise ;'
 Well may he blush, who gives it or receives ;
 And when I flatter, let my dirty leaves
 (Like journals, odes, and such forgotten things
 As Eusden, Philips, Settle, writ of kings)
 Clothe spice, line trunks, or, fluttering in a row,
 Befringe the rails of Bedlam and Soho

BOOK II.—EPISTLE II.

Ludentis speciem dabit, et torquebitur.—HOR

DEAR colonel, Cobham's and your country's friend<sup>d</sup>
You love a verse, take such as I can send.

A Frenchman comes, presents you with his boy,
Bows, and begins—'This lad, sir, is of Blois:
Observe his shape how clean! his locks how curl'd!
My only son; I'd have him see the world:
His French is pure; his voice too—you shall hear;
Sir, he 's your slave, for twenty pounds a-year.
Mere wax as yet, you fashion him with ease,
Your barber, cook, upholsterer, what you please:
A perfect genius at an opera song—
To say too much might do my honour wrong.
Take him with all his virtues, on my word;
His whole ambition was to serve a lord:
But, sir, to you, with what would I not part?
Though, 'faith, I fear, 'twill break his mother's heart
Once (and but once) I caught him in a lie,
And then, unwhipp'd, he had the grace to cry:
The fault he has I fairly shall reveal,
(Could you o'erlook but that) it is, to steal.

If, after this, you took the graceless lad,
Could you complain, my friend, he proved so bad?
'Faith, in such case, if you should prosecute,
I think, sir Godfrey should decide the suit;
Who sent the thief that stole the cash, away,
And punish'd him that put it in his way.

Consider then, and judge me in this light:
I told you when I went, I could not write;
You said the same; and are you discontent
With laws to which you gave your own assent?
Nay worse, to ask for verse at such a time!
Do ye think me good for nothing but to rhyme!

In Anna's wars, a soldier poor and old
Had dearly earn'd a little purse of gold;

Tired with a tedious march, one luckless night,
 He slept, poor dog! and lost it to a doit.
 This put the man in such a desperate mind,
 Between revenge and grief, and hunger join'd,
 Against the foe, himself, and all mankind,
 He leap'd the trenches, scaled a castle wall,
 Tore down a standard, took the fort and all.

Prodigious well! his great commander cried,
 Gave him much praise, and some reward beside,
 Next, pleased his excellence a town to batter,
 (Its name I know not, and 'tis no great matter :)
 'Go on my friend,' he cried, 'see yonder walls!
 Advance and conquer! go where glory calls!
 More honours, more rewards, attend the brave.'
 Don't you remember what reply he gave?
 'Do you think me, noble general, such a sot?
 Let him take castles who has ne'er a groat.'

Bred up at home, full early I begun
 To read in Greek the wrath of Peleus' son.
 Besides, my father taught me from a lad,
 The better art, to know the good from bad:
 (And little sure imported to remove,
 To hunt for truth in Maudlin's learned grove.)
 But knottier points, he knew not half so well,
 Deprived us soon of our paternal cell:
 And certain laws, by sufferers thought unjust,
 Denied all posts of profit or of trust:
 Hopes after hopes of pious papists fail'd,
 While mighty William's thundering arm prevail'd
 For right hereditary tax'd and fined,
 He stuck to poverty with peace of mind:
 And me the Muses help'd to undergo it;
 Convict a papist he, and I a poet.
 But (thanks to Homer) since I live and thrive,
 Indebted to no prince or peer alive,
 Sure I should want the care of ten Monroes,
 If I would scribble, rather than repose.

Years following years steal something every day
 At last they steal us from ourselves away;

In one our frolics, one amusements end,
 In one a mistress drops, in one a friend :
 This subtle thief of life, this paltry time,
 What will it leave me, if it snatch my rhyme ?
 If every wheel of that unwearied mill,
 That turn'd ten thousand verses, now stand still ?
 But after all, what would you have me do,
 When out of twenty I can please not two ?
 When this heroics only deigns to praise,
 Sharp satire that, and that Pindaric lays ?
 One likes the pheasant's wing, and one the leg ;
 The vulgar boil, the learned roast an egg :
 Hard task ! to hit the palates of such guests,
 When Oldfield loves what Dartineuf detests.
 But grant I may relapse, for want of grace,
 Again to rhyme : can London be the place ?
 Who there his muse, or self, or soul attends,
 In crowds, and courts, law, business, feasts, and friends ?

My counsel sends to execute a deed :
 A poet begs me I will hear him read :
 In Palace-yard at nine you'll find me there—
 At ten for certain, sir, in Bloomsbury-square—
 Before the lords at twelve my cause comes on—
 There's a rehearsal, sir, exact at one.
 ' O ! but a wit can study in the streets,
 And raise his mind above the mob he meets.'
 Not quite so well, however, as one ought ;
 A hackney coach may chance to spoil a thought ,
 And then a nodding beam, or pig of lead,
 God knows, may hurt the very ablest head.
 Have you not seen, at Guildhall's narrow pass,
 Two aldermen dispute it with an ass ?
 And peers give way, exalted as they are,
 E'en to their own s-r-v—nce in a car ?
 Go, lofty poet ! and in such a crowd,
 Sing thy sonorous verse—but not aloud.
 Alas ! to grottoes and to groves we run,
 To ease and silence, every Muse's son :

Blackmore himself, for any grand effort,
 Would drink and doze at Tooting or Earl's-Court.
 How shall I rhyme in this eternal roar?
 How match the bards whom none e'er match'd before!

The man, who, stretch'd in Isis' calm retreat,
 To books and study gives seven years complete,
 See! strow'd with learned dust, his nightcap on,
 He walks an object new beneath the sun!
 The boys flock round him, and the people stare:
 So stiff, so mute! some statue, you would swear,
 Stepp'd from its pedestal to take the air!
 And here, while town, and court, and city roars,
 With mobs, and duns, and soldiers at their doors;
 Shall I, in London, act this idle part,
 Composing songs for fools to get by heart?

The Temple late two brother sergeants saw,
 Who deem'd each other oracles of law;
 With equal talents, these congenial souls,
 One lull'd the Exechequer, and one stunn'd the Rolls
 Each had a gravity would make you split,
 And shook his head at Murray as a wit.
 'Twas, 'Sir, your law'—and 'Sir, your eloquence,' Yours, Cowper's manner'—'and yours, Talbot's sense.'

Thus we dispose of all poetic merit,
 Yours Milton's genius, and mine Homer's spirit.
 Call Tibbald Shakspeare, and he'll swear the Nine,
 Dear Cibber! never match'd one ode of thine.
 Lord! how we strut through Merlin's Cave, to see
 No poets there, but Stephen, you, and me.
 Walk with respect behind, while we at ease
 Weave laurel crowns, and take what names we please.

My dear Tibullus! If that will not do,
 Let me be Horace, and be Ovid you;
 Or, I'm content, allow me Dryden's strains,
 And you shall raise up Otway for your pains.

Much do I suffer, much to keep in peace
 This jealous, waspish, wrong-head, rhyming race ;
 And much must flatter, if the whim should bite,
 To court applause by printing what I write :
 But let the fit pass o'er, I'm wise enough
 To stop my ears to their confounded stuff.

In vain bad rhymers all mankind reject,
 They treat themselves with most profound respect ,
 'Tis to small purpose that you hold your tongue,
 Each, praised within, is happy all day long :
 But how severely with themselves proceed
 The men who write such verse as we can read ?
 Their own strict judges, not a word they spare
 That wants or force, or light, or weight, or care,
 Howe'er unwillingly it quits its place,
 Nay, though at court, perhaps, it may find grace :
 Such they'll degrade ; and sometimes, in its stead,
 In downright charity revive the dead ;
 Mark where a bold, expressive phrase appears,
 Bright through the rubbish of some hundred years
 Command old words that long have slept, to wake,
 Words that wise Bacon or brave Raleigh spake ;
 Or bid the new be English ages hence ;
 (For use will father what's begot by sense,)
 Pour the full tide of eloquence along,
 Serenely pure, and yet divinely strong,
 Rich with the treasures of each foreign tongue ;
 Prune the luxuriant, the uncouth refine,
 But show no mercy to an empty line :
 Then polish all, with so much life and ease,
 You think 'tis nature, and a knack to please ;
 ' But ease in writing flows from art, not chance ;
 As those move easiest who have learn'd to dance
 If such the plague and pains to write by rule,
 Better, say I, be pleased, and play the fool ;
 Call, if you will, bad rhyming a disease,
 It gives men happiness, or-leaves them ease.
 There lived in primo Georgiæ (they record)
 A worthy member, no small fool, a lord ;

Who, though the house was up, delighted sate,
 Heard, noted, answer'd, as in full debate :
 In all but this, a man of sober life,
 Fond of his friend, and civil to his wife ;
 Not quite a madman, though a pasty fell ;
 And much too wise to walk into a well.
 Him, the damn'd doctors and his friends immured,
 They bled, they cupp'd, they purged ; in short, they cured :

Whereat the gentleman began to stare—
 'My friends!' he cried, 'p-x take you for your care !

That from a patriot of distinguish'd note,
 Have bled and purged me to a simple vote.'

Well, on the whole, plain prose must be my fate :
 Wisdom (curse on it) will come soon or late.
 There is a time when poets will grow dull :
 I'll e'en leave verses to the boys at school ;
 To rules of poetry no more confin'd,
 I'll learn to smooth and harmonize my mind,
 Teach every thought within its bounds to roll,
 And keep the equal measure of the soul.

Soon as I enter at my country door,
 My mind resumes the thread it dropp'd before ;
 Thoughts which at Hyde-park corner I forgot,
 Meet and rejoin me, in the pensive grot ;
 There all alone, and compliments apart,

I ask these sober questions of my heart :

If, when the more you drink, the more you crave,
 You tell the doctor ; when the more you have,
 The more you want, why not with equal ease
 Confess as well your folly as disease ?
 The heart resolves this matter in a trice,

'Men only feel the smart, but not the vice.'

When golden angels cease to cure the evil,
 You give all royal witchcraft to the devil :
 When servile chaplains cry, that birth and place
 Endue a peer with honour, truth and grace,

Look in that breast, most dirty dean ! be fair,
 Say, can you find out one such lodger there ?
 Yet still, not heeding what your heart can teach,
 You go to church to hear these flatterers preach.

Indeed, could wealth bestow or wit or merit,
 A grain of courage, or a spark of spirit,
 The wisest man might blush, I must agree,
 If D*** loved sixpence more than he.

If there be truth in law, and use can give
 A property, that's yours on which you live.
 Delightful Abs-court, if its fields afford
 Their fruits to you, confesses you its lord :
 All Worldly's hens, nay, partridge, sold to town,
 His venison too a guinea makes your own :
 He bought at thousands, what with better wit,
 You purchase as you want, and bit by bit :
 Now, or long since, what difference will be found ?
 You pay a penny, and he paid a pound.

Heathcote himself, and such large-acred men,
 Lords of fat E'sham, or of Lincoln fen,
 Buy every stick of wood that lends them heat ;
 Buy every pullet they afford to eat.
 Yet these are wights, who fondly call their own
 Half that the devil o'erlooks from Lincoln-town.
 The laws of God, as well as of the land,
 Abhor a perpetuity should stand :
 Estates have wings, and hang in fortune's power,
 Loose on the point of every wavering hour,
 Ready, by force, or of your own accord,
 By sale, at least by death, to change their lord.
 Man ? and for ever ? wretch ! what wouldst thou have !
 Heir urges heir, like wave impelling wave.
 All vast possessions (just the same the case
 Whether you call them villa, park, or chase,)
 Alas, my Bathurst ! what will they avail ?
 Join Cotswood's hills to Saperton's fair dale,
 Let rising granaries and temples here,
 There mingled farms and pyramids appear,

Link towns to towns with avenues of oak,
 Enclose whole downs in walls, 'tis all a joke !
 inexorable death shall level all,
 And trees, and stones, and farm, and farmer fall.
 Gold, silver, ivory, vases sculptured high,
 Paint, marble, gems, and robes of Persian dye,
 There are who have not—and, thank Heaven! there are
 Who if they have not, think not worth their care.
 Talk what you will of taste, my friend, you'll find
 Two of a face, as soon as of a mind.
 Why of two brothers, rich and restless one
 Ploughs, burns, manures, and toils from sun to sun.
 The other slights, for women, sports, and wines,
 All Townshend's turnips, and all Grosvenor's mines :
 Why one like Bu** with pay and scorn content,
 Bows and votes on in court and parliament ;
 One, driven by strong benevolence of soul,
 Shall fly like Oglethorpe, from pole to pole ;
 Is known alone to that Directing Power,
 Who forms the genius in the natal hour ;
 That God of nature, who within us still,
 Inclines our action, not constrains our will ;
 Various of temper, as of face or frame,
 Each individual : His great end the same.
 Yes, sir, how small soever be my heap,
 A part I will enjoy, as well as keep.
 My heir may sigh, and think it want of grace,
 A man so poor would live without a place :
 But sure no statute in his favour says,
 How free or frugal I shall pass my days :
 I who at some times spend, at others spare,
 Divided between carelessness and care.
 'Tis one thing madly to disperse my store ;
 Another, not to heed to treasure more :
 Glad, like a boy, to snatch the first good day
 And pleased, if sordid want be far away.
 What is 't to me (a passenger God wot)
 Whether my vessel be first-rate or not ?

The ship itself may make a better figure ;
But I that sail am neither less nor bigger :
I neither strut with every favouring breath,
Nor strive with all the tempest in my teeth.
In power, wit, figure, virtue, fortune, placed
Behind the foremost, and before the last.

'But why all this of avarice ? I have none.'

I wish you joy, sir, of a tyrant gone !
But does no other lord it at this hour,
As wild and mad ? the avarice of power ?
Does neither rage inflame, nor fear appal ?
Not the black fear of death that saddens all ?
With terrors round, can reason hold her throne,
Despise the known, nor tremble at the unknown ?
Survey both worlds, intrepid and entire,
In spite of witches, devils, dreams and fire ?
Pleased to look forward, pleased to look behind,
And count each birth-day with a grateful mind ?
Has life no sourness, drawn so near its end ?
Canst thou endure a foe, forgive a friend ?
Has age but melted the rough parts away,
As winter-fruits grow mild ere they decay ?
Or will you think, my friend, your business done,
When, of a hundred thorns, you pull out one ?
Learn to live well, or fairly make your will ;
You've play'd, and loved, and ate, and drank your fill
Walk sober off, before a sprightlier age
Comes tittering on, and shoves you from the stage
Leave such to trifle with more grace and ease,
Whom folly pleases, and whose follies please

THE

SATIRES OF DR. JOHN DONNE,
DEAN OF ST. PAUL'S,
VERSIFIED.

Quid vetat et nosmet Lucili scripta legentes
Quaerere num illius, num rerum dura negarit
Versiculos natura magis factos, et euntes
Mollius? Hor.

SATIRE II.

YES; thank my stars! as early as I knew
This town, I had the sense to hate it too:
Yet here, as e'en in hell, there must be still
One giant-vice, so excellently ill,
That all beside one pities, not abhors:
As who knows Sappho, smiles at other whores.
I grant that poetry's a crying sin;
It brought (no doubt) the excise and army in:
Catch'd like the plague, or love, the Lord knows how
But that the cure is starving, all allow.
Yet like the papist's, is the poet's state,
Poor and disarm'd, and hardly worth your hate?
Here a lean bard, whose wit could never give Himself a dinner, makes an actor live:

SATIRE II.

SIR; though (I thank God for it) I do hate
Perfectly all this town: yet there's one state
In all ill things, so excellently best,
That hate tow'rds them, breeds pity tow'rds the rest.
Though poetry, indeed, be such a sin,
As I think, that brings dearth and Spaniards in:
Though like the pestilence and old-fashion'd love,
Ridlingly it catch men, and doth remove
Never, till it be starved out; yet their state
Is poor, disarm'd, like papists, not worth hate.
One (like a wretch, which at the bar judged as dead,
Yet prompts him which stands next, and cannot read
And saves his life) gives idiot actors means
(Starving himself) to live by's labour'd scenes.

The thief condemn'd, in law already dead,
 So prompts, and saves a rogue who cannot read.
 Thus as the pipes of some carved organ move,
 The gilded puppets dance and mount above.
 Heaved by the breath the inspiring bellows blow :
 The inspiring bellows lie and pant below

One sings the fair : but songs no longer move :
 No rat is rhymed to death, nor maid to love :
 In love's, in nature's spite, the siege they hold,
 And scorn the flesh, the devil, and all but gold.

These write to lords, some mean reward to get,
 As needy beggars sing at doors for meat.
 Those write because all write, and so have still
 Excuse for writing, and for writing ill.
 Wretched indeed ! but far more wretched yet
 Is he who makes his meal on others' wit :
 'Tis changed, no doubt, from what it was before ;
 His rank digestion makes it wit no more :
 Sense, pass'd through him, no longer is the same ;
 For food digested takes another name.

As in some organs puppets dance above,
 And as bellows pant below, which then do move,
 One would move love by rhymes ; but witchcraft's charms

Bring not now their old fears, nor their old harms :
 Rams and slings now are silly battery,
 Pistolets are the best artillery.

And they who write to lords, rewards to get,
 Are they not like singers at doors for meat ?
 And they who write, because all write, have still
 That 'scuse for writing, and for writing ill.

But he is worst, who beggarly doth chaw
 Other wits' fruits, and in his ravenous maw
 Rankly digested, doth those things out-spue,
 As his own things ; and they're his own, 'tis true ;

For if one eat my meat, though it be known
 The meat was mine, the excrement 's his own.

I pass o'er all those confessors and martyrs,
 Who live like S—t—n, or who die like Chartres,
 Out-cant old Esdras, or out-drink his heir ;
 Out-usure Jews, or Irishmen out-swear ;
 Wicked as pages, who in early years
 Act sins which Prisca's confessor scarce hears.
 E'en those I pardon, for whose sinful sake
 Schoolmen new tenements in hell must make ;
 Of whose strange crimes no canonist can tell
 In what commandment's large contents they dwell.
 One, one man only breeds my just offence ;
 Whom crimes gave wealth, and wealth gave impu-
 dence :

Time, that at last matures a clap to pox,
 Whose gentle progress makes a calf an ox,
 And brings all natural events to pass,
 Hath made him an attorney of an ass.
 No young divine, new-beneficed, can be
 More pert, more proud, more positive than he.
 What further could I wish the fop to do,
 But turn a wit, and scribble verses too ?
 Pierce the soft labyrinth of a lady's ear
 With rhymes of this per cent, and that per year ?

---

But these do me no harm, nor they which use,
 * * * * * to out-usure Jews,
 To out-drink the sea, t' outswear the letanie,
 Who with sins all kinds as familiar be
 As confessors, and for whose sinful sake
 Schoolmen new tenements in hell must make ;
 Whose strange sins canonists could hardly tell
 In which commandment's large receipt they dwell.
 But these punish themselves. The insolence
 Of Coscus, only, breeds my just offence,
 Who time (which rots all, and makes botches pox,
 And plodding on, must make a calf an ox)
 Hath made a lawyer ; which (alas) of late ;
 But scarce a poet : jollier of this state,
 Than are new beneficed ministers, he throws
 Like nets or lime-twigs whereso'er he goes

Or court a wife, spread out his wily parts,
 Like nets, or lime-twigs, for rich widows' hearts;
 Call himself barrister to every wench,
 And woo in language of the Pleas and Bench?
 Language, which Boreas might to Auster hold,
 More rough than forty Germans when they scold.

Curs'd be the wretch, so venal and so vain:
 Paltry and proud, as drabs in Drury-lane.
 'Tis such a bounty as was never known,
 If Peter deigns to help you to your own:
 What thanks, what praise, if Peter but supplies!
 And what a solemn face, if he denies!
 Grave, as when prisoners shake the head and swear
 'Twas only suretyship that brought them there.
 His office keeps your parchment fates entire,
 He starves with cold to save them from the fire:
 For you he walks the streets through rain or dust,
 For not in chariots Peter puts his trust;
 For you he sweats and labours at the laws,
 Takes God to witness he affects your cause,
 And lies to every lord in every thing,
 Like a king's favourite—or like a king.

---

His title of barrister on every wench,
 And woos in language of the Pleas and Bench. * *
 * * * Words, words which would tear
 The tender labyrinth of a maid's soft ear:
 More, more than ten Selavonians scolding, more
 Than when winds in our ruin'd abbeys roar.
 Then sick with poetry, and possess'd with muse
 Thou wast, and mad I hoped; but men which chuse
 Law practice for mere gain: bold soul repute
 Worse than imbrothel'd strumpets prostitute.
 Now like an owl-like watchman he must walk,
 His hand still at a bill; now he must talk
 Idly, like prisoners, which whole months will swear;
 That only suretyship had brought them there,
 And to every suitor lye in every thing,
 Like a king's favourite—or like a king.

These are the talents that adorn them all,
 From wicked Waters e'en to godly **
 Not more of simony beneath black gowns,
 Not more of bastardy in heirs to crowns.
 In shillings and in pence at first they deal ;
 And steal so little, few perceive they steal :
 Till, like the sea, they compass all the land,
 From Scots to Wight, from Mount to Dover strand
 And when rank widows purchase luscious nights,
 Or when a duke to Jansen punts at White's,
 Or city heir in mortgage melts away,
 Satan himself feels far less joy than they.
 Piecemeal they win this acre first, then that,
 Glean on, and gather up the whole estate ;
 Then strongly fencing ill-got wealth by law,
 Indentures, covenants, articles they draw,
 Large as the fields themselves, and larger far
 Than civil codes, with all their glosses, are ;
 So vast, our new divines, we must confess,
 Are fathers of the church for writing less.

---

Like a wedge in a block, wring to the barre,
 Bearing like asses, and more shameless farre
 Than carted whores, lye to the grave judge : for Bastardy abounds not in king's titles, nor
 Simony and Sodomy in churchmen's lives,
 As these things do in him ; by these he thrives.
 Shortly (as th' sea) he'll compass all the land,
 From Scots to Wight, from Mount to Dover strand
 And spying heirs melting with luxury,
 Satan will not joy at their sins as he ;
 For (as a thrifty wench scrapes kitchen-stuffe,
 And barrelling the droppings and the snuffe
 Of wasting candles, which in thirty year,
 Reliquely kept, perchance buys wedding cheer)
 Piecemeal he gets lands, and spends as much time
 Wringing each acre, as maids pulling prime.
 In parchment then, large as the fields, he draws
 Assurances, big as gloss'd civil laws,
 So huge that men (in our times forwardness)
 Are fathers of the church for writing less.

So Luther thought the Pater-noster long,
 When doom'd to say his beads and even-song,
 But having cast his cowl, and left those laws,
 Adds to Christ's prayer, the power and glory clause
 But let them write for you, each rogue impairs
 The deeds, and dexterously omits ses heires :
 No commentator can more silyly pass
 Over a learn'd unintelligible place :
 Or, in quotation, shrewd divines leave out
 Those words that would against them clear the doubt.

The lands are bought ; but where are to be found
 Those ancient woods, that shaded all the ground ?
 We see no new-built palaces aspire,
 No kitchens emulate the vestal fire.
 Where are those troops of poor, that throng'd of yore

The good old landlord's hospitable door ?
 Well, I could wish, that still in lordly domes
 Some beasts were kill'd, though not whole hecatombs
 That both extremes were banish'd from their walls,
 Carthusian fasts, and fulsome bacchanals ;

These he writes not ; nor for these written payes,
 Therefore spares no length (as in those first dayes
 When Luther was profess'd, he did desire
 Short Pater-nosters, saying as a fryer
 Each day his beads : but having left those laws,
 Adds to Christ's prayer, the power and glory clause
 But when he sells or changes land, he impaires
 The writings, and (unwatch'd) leaves out ses heires
 As silyly as any commentator goes by
 Hard words, or sense ; or, in divinity,
 As controverters in vouch'd texts, leave out
 Shrewd words, which might against them clear the doubt.

Where are these spread woods which clothed heretofore
 Those bought lands? not built, nor burnt within door
 Where the old landlords troops and almes? In halls
 Carthusian fasts, and fulsome bacchanals

And all mankind might that just mean observe,
 In which none e'er could surfeit, none could starve.
 These as good works, 'tis true, we all allow,
 But, oh! these works are not in fashion now
 Like rich old wardrobes, things extremely rare,
 Extremely fine, but what no man will wear.

Thus much I've said, I trust, without offence;
 Let no court sycophant pervert my sense,
 Nor sly informer watch these words to draw
 Within the reach of treason, or the law.

SATIRE IV.

WELL, if it be my time to quit the stage,
 Adieu to all the follies of the age!
 I die in charity with fool and knave,
 Secure of peace at least beyond the grave.
 I've had my purgatory here betimes,
 And paid for all my satires, all my rhymes.
 The poet's hell, its tortures, fiends, and flames,
 To this were trifles, toys, and empty names.

With foolish pride my heart was never fired,
 Nor the vain itch to admire, or be admired:
 I hoped for no commission from his grace;
 I bought no benefice, I begg'd no place:

---

Equally I hate. Means bless'd. In rich men's homes
 I bid kill some beasts, but no hecatombs;
 None starve, none surfeit so. But (oh) we allow
 Good works as good, but out of fashion now,
 Like old rich wardrobes. But my words none draws
 Within the vast reach of the huge statute's jaws.

SATIRE IV.

WELL; I may now receive, and die. My sin
 Indeed is great; but yet I have been in
 A purgatory, such as fear'd Hell is
 A recreation, and scant map of this.

My mind, neither with pride's itch, nor hath been
 Poyson'd with love to see or to be seen;

Had no new verses, nor new suit to show,
 Yet went to court!—the devil would have it so
 But, as the fool that in reforming days
 Would go to mass in jest (as story says)
 Could not but think, to pay his fine was odd,
 Since 'twas no form'd design of serving God,
 So was I punish'd, as if full as proud,
 As prone to ill, as negligent of good,
 As deep in debt, without a thought to pay,
 As vain, as idle, and as false, as they
 Who live at court, for going once that way
 Scarce was I enter'd, when, behold! there came
 A thing which Adam had been posed to name;
 Noah had refused it lodging in his ark,
 Where all the race of reptiles might embark:
 A verier monster, than on Afric's shore,
 The sun e'er got, or slimy Nilus bore,
 Or Sloan or Woodward's wondrous shelves contain,
 Nay, all that lying travellers can feign.
 The watch would hardly let him pass at noon,
 At night would swear him dropp'd out of the moon;

I had no suit there, nor new suit to show,
 Yet went to court; but as Glare which did go
 To mass in jest, catch'd, was fain to disburse
 Two hundred markes which is the statutes curse,
 Before he scaped; so it pleased my destiny
 'Guilty of my sin of going) to think me
 As prone to all ill, and good as forgetful, as proud, lustful, and as much in debt,
 As vain, as witless, and as false, as they
 Which dwell in court, for once going that way.

Therefore I suffer'd this: towards me did run
 A thing more strange, than on Nile's slime the sun
 E'er bred, or all which into Noah's ark came;
 A thing which would have posed Adam to name:
 Stranger than seven antiquaries' studies,
 Than Africk monsters, Guianaes rarities,
 Stranger than strangers: one who, for a Dane,
 In the Danes' massacre had sure been slain,
 If he had lived then; and without help dies,

One, whom the mob, when next we find or make
 A popish plot, shall for a Jesuit take,
 And the wise justice starting from his chair
 Cry, 'By your priesthood tell me what you are?'

Such was the wight: the apparel on his back,
 Tho' coarse, was reverend, and though bare, was black.
 The suit, if by the fashion one might guess,
 Was velvet in the youth of good queen Bess,
 But mere tuff-taffety what now remain'd;
 So time, that changes all things, had ordain'd!
 Our sons shall see it leisurely decay,
 First turn plain rash, then vanish quite away.

This thing has travell'd, speaks each language too,
 And knows what's fit for every state to do;
 Of whose best phrase and courtly accent join'd,
 He forms one tongue, exotic and refined.
 Talkers I've learn'd to bear; Morteux I knew,
 Henley himself I've heard, and Budget too.
 The doctor's wormwood style, the hash of tongues
 A pedant makes, the storm of Gonson's lungs,
 The whole artillery of the terms of war,
 And (all those plagues in one) the bawling bar;

When next the 'prentices 'gainst strangers rise;
 One, whom the watch at noon scarce lets go by:
 One, to whom the examining justice sure would cry
 Sir, by your priesthood, tell me what you are?'

His clothes were strange, though coarse, and black,
 though bare,
 Sleeveless his jerkin was, and had it been
 Velvet, but 'twas now, (so much ground was seen)
 Become tuff-taffety; and our children shall
 See it plain rash a while, then nought at all.

The thing hath travail'd, and faith, speaks all tongues
 And only knoweth what to all states belongs,
 Made of the accents, and best phrase of all these
 He speaks one language. If strange meats displease,
 Art can deceive, or hunger force my taste;
 But pedants motly tongue, soldiers bumbast,
 Mountebanks drug-tongue, nor the terms of law,
 Are strong enough preparatives to draw

These I could bear; but not a rogue so civil,
Whose tongue will compliment you to the devil.
A tongue that can cheat widows, cancel scores,
Make Scots speak treason, cozen subtlest whores,
With royal favourites in flattery vie,
And Oldmixon und Burnet both outlie.

He spies me out; I whisper, 'Gracious God!
What sin of mine could merit such a rod?
That all the shot of dulness now must be
From this thy blunderbuss discharged on me!'

'Permit,' he cries, 'no stranger to your fame
To crave your sentiment, if ——'s your name.
What speech esteem you most?' 'The king's,' said I
'But the best words?'—'O, sir, the dictionary.'
'You miss my aim! I mean the most acute
And perfect speaker?'—'Onslow, past dispute.'
'But, sir, of writers?'—'Swift, for closer style,
But Hoadly for a period of a mile.'
'Why yes, 'tis granted, these indeed may pass;
Good common linguists, and so Panurge was;'

Me to hear this; yet I must be content
With his tongue, in his tongue call'd complement:
In which he can win widows, and pay scores,
Make men speak treason, couzen subtlest whores,
Outflatter favourites, or outlie either
Jovius, or Surlius, or both together.

He names me, and comes to me; I whisper, God,
How have I sinn'd that thy wrath's furious rod,
This fellow, chooseth me! he saith, 'Sir,
I love your judgment, whom do you prefer
For the best linguist?' and I seechfully
Said that I thought Calepine's dictionary.
'Nay, but of men, most sweet sir?' Beza then,
Some Jesuits, and two reverend men
Of our two academies I named. Here
He stopp'd me, and said, 'Nay your apostles wert
Good pretty linguists; so Panurgus was,
Yet a poor gentleman; all these may pass

Nay, troth, the apostles (though perhaps too rough)
 Had once a pretty gift of tongues enough :
 Yet these were all poor gentlemen ! I dare
 Affirm, 'twas travel made them what they were.'

Thus, others' talents having nicely shown,
 He came by sure transition to his own :
 Till I cried out, ' You prove yourself so able.
 Pity ! you was not Druggerman at Babel ;
 For had they found a linguist half so good,
 I make no question but the tower had stood.'

' Obliging sir ! for courts you sure were made :
 Why then for ever buried in the shade ?
 Spirits like you, should see and should be seen,
 The king would smile on you—at least the queen.

Ah, gentle sir ! your courtiers so cajole us—
 But Tully has it, Nunquam minus solus :
 And as for courts, forgive me, if I say
 No lessons now are taught the Spartan way :
 Though in his pictures lust be full display'd,
 Few are the converts Aretine has made ;
 And though the court show vice exceeding clear,
 None should, by my advice, learn virtue there.'

At this entranced, he lifts his hands and eyes,
 Squeaks like a high-stretch'd lutestring, and replies
 ' Oh, 'tis the sweetest of all earthly things
 To gaze on princes, and to talk of kings !'

By travail.' Then, as if he would sold
 His tongue, he praised it, and such wonders told,
 That I was fain to say, ' If you had lived, sir,
 Time enough to have been interpreter
 To Babel's bricklayers, sure the tower had stood.'

He adds, ' If of court life you knew the good,
 You would leave loneless.' I said, ' Not alone
 My loneless is ; but Spartanes fashion
 To teach by painting drunkards doth not last
 Now, Aretine's pictures have made few chaste ;
 No more can princes courts (though there be few Better pictures of vice) teach me virtue.'

He like to a high-stretch'd lutestring squeaks, ' O sir
 'Tis sweet to talk of kings.' ' At Westminster'

'Then happy man who shows the tombs!' said I,
 'He dwells amidst the royal family;
 He every day from king to king can walk,
 Of all our Harrys, all our Edwards talk;
 And get, by speaking truth of monarchs dead,
 What few can of the living—ease and bread.'
 'Lord, sir, a mere mechanic! strangely low,
 And coarse of phrase,—your English all are so
 How elegant your Frenchmen!' 'Mine d'ye mean'
 I have but one; I hope the fellow's clean.'
 'O! sir, politely so! nay, let me die,
 Your only wearing is your paduasoy.'
 'Not, sir, my only, I have better still,
 And this you see is but my deshabelle—
 Wild to get loose, his patience I provoke,
 Mistake, confound, object at all he spoke.
 But as coarse iron, sharpen'd, mangles more,
 And itch most hurts when anger'd to a sore;
 So when you plague a fool, 'tis still the curse,
 You only make the matter worse and worse.
 He pass'd it o'er; affects an easy smile
 At all my peevishness, and turns his style.

---

Said I, 'the man that keeps the Abbey-tombs
 And for his price, doth with whoever comes
 Of all our Harrys and our Edwards talk,
 From king to king, and all their kin can walk:
 Your ears shall hear nought but kings; your eyes meet
 Kings only: the way to it is King-street.'
 He smack'd, and cried, 'He's base, mechanic coarse,
 So are all your Englishmen in their discourse.
 Are not your Frenchmen neat?' 'Mine, as you see,
 I have but one, sir, look, he follows me.'
 Certes they are neatly cloathed. I of this mind am
 Your only wearing is your grogram.'
 'Not so, sir, I have more.' Under this pitch
 He would not fly: I chaff'd him: but as itch
 Scratch'd into smart, and as blunt iron ground
 Into an edge, hurts worse: So, I (fool) found,
 Crossing hurt me. To fit my sullenness,
 He to another key his style doth dress:

SATIRES OF DONNE.

He asks, 'What news?' I tell him of new plays,
 New eunuchs, harlequins, and operas.
 He hears, and as a still with simples in it,
 Between each drop it gives, stays half a minute,
 Loath to enrich me with too quick replies,
 By little, and by little, drops his lies.
 Mere household trash! of birthnights, balls, and shows,
 More than ten Hollinsheds, or Halls, or Stowes.
 When the queen frown'd, or smiled, he knows; and what

A subtle minister may make of that :
 Who sins with whom : who got his pension rug,
 Or quicken'd a reversion by a drug :
 Whose place is quarter'd out, three parts in four,
 And whether to a bishop, or a whore :
 Who, having lost his credit, pawn'd his rent,
 Is therefore fit to have a government :
 Who, in the secret, deals in stocks secure,
 And cheats the unknowing widow and the poor :
 Who makes a trust of charity a job,
 And gets an act of parliament to rob :
 Why turnpikes rise, and now no cit nor clown
 Can gratis see the country, or the town :

---

And asks what news; I tell him of new playes.
 He takes my hand, and as a still, which staves
 A sembrief 'twixt each drop, he niggardly,
 As loth to enrich me, so tells many a ly.
 More than ten Hollensheds, or Halls, or Stows,
 Of trivial household trash, he knows. He knows
 When the queen frown'd or smiled! and he knows
     what

A subtle statesman may gather of that :
 He knows who loves whom : and who by poison
 Hastes to an officer's reversion ;
 Who wastes in meat, in clothes, in horse, he notes ;
 Who loveth whores * * * * *
 He knows who hath sold his lands, and now doth beg
 A licence, old iron, boots, shoes, and egge-
 Shells to transport ; * * * * *

Shortly no lad shall chuck, or lady vole,
 But some excising courtier will have toll.
 He tells what strumpet places sells for life,
 What 'squire his lands, what citizen his wife :
 At last (which proves him wiser still than all)
 What lady's face is not a whited wall.

As one of Woodward's patients, sick and sore,
 I puke, I nauseate,—yet he thrusts in more :
 Trims Europe's balance, tops the statesman's part,
 And talks gazettes and postboys o'er by heart.
 Like a big wife at sight of loathsome meat,
 Ready to cast, I yawn, I sigh, I sweat.
 Then as a licensed spy, who nothing can
 Silence or hurt, he libels every man ;
 Swears every place entail'd for years to come,
 In sure succession to the day of doom :
 He names the price of every office paid,
 And says our wars thrive ill, because delay'd :

* * * * * shortly boys shall not play
 At span-counter, or blow-point, but shall pay
 Toll to some courtier ; and wiser than all us,
 He knows what lady is not painted. Thus
 He with home meats cloy's me. I belch, spue spit,
 Look pale and sickly, like a patient, yet
 He thrusts on more, and as he had undertook,
 To say Gallo Belgicus without book,
 Speaks of all states and deeds that have been s non
 The Spaniards came to the loss of Amyens.
 Like a big wife, at sight of loathed meat,
 Ready to travail : so I sigh, and sweat
 To hear this makaron talk : in vain, for yet,
 Either my humour, or his own to fit,
 He, like a privileged spie, whom nothing can
 Discredit, rebels now gainst each great man.
 He names the price of every office paid ;
 He saith our wars thrive ill, because delaid :
 That offices are entail'd, and that there are Perpetuities of them, lasting as far

Nay hints, 'tis by connivance of the court,
 That Spain robs on, and Dunkirk's still a port.
 Not more amazement seized on Circe's guests,
 To see themselves fall headlong into beasts,
 Than mine to find a subject staid and wise
 Already half turn'd traitor by surprize.
 I felt the infection slide from him to me ;
 As in the pox, some give it to get free ;
 And quick to swallow me, methought I saw
 One of our giant statutes ope its jaw.

In that nice moment, as another lie
 Stood just a-tilt, the minister came by.
 To him he flies, and bows, and bows again,
 Then, close as Umbra, joins the dirty train.
 Not Fannius' self more impudently near,
 When half his nose is in his prince's ear.

As the last day ; and that great officers
 Do with the Spaniards share, and Dunkirkers.
 I more amazed than Circe's prisoners, when
 They felt themselves turn beasts, felt myself then Becoming traytor, and methought I saw
 One of our giant statutes ope its jaw
 To suck me in for hearing him : I found
 That as burnt venomous leachers do grow sound
 By giving others their sores, I might grow
 Guilty, and be free : therefore I did show
 All signs of loathing ; but since I am in,
 I must pay mine, and my forefathers sin
 To the last farthing. Therefore to my power
 Toughly and stubbornly I bear ; but the hower
 Of mercy now was come . he tries to bring
 Me to pay a fine to 'scape a torturing ;
 And says, 'Sir, can you spare me—?' I said, 'Willingly'
 'Nay, sir, can you spare me a crown ?' Thankfully I Gave it, as ransom : but as fiddlers, still,
 Though they be paid to be gone, yet needs will Thrust one more jigg upon you ; so did he
 With his long complimented thanks vex me.
 But he is gone, thanks to his needy want,
 And the prerogative of my crown : scant

I quaked at heart : and, still afraid to see
 All the court fill'd with stranger things than he,
 Ran out as fast as one that pays his bail,
 And dreads more actions, hurries from a jail.

Bear me, some god ! oh quickly bear me hence
 To wholesome solitude, the nurse of sense !
 Where contemplation prunes her ruffled wings,
 And the free soul looks down to pity kings !
 'There sober thought pursued the amazing theme,
 Till fancy colour'd it, and form'd a dream.
 A vision hermits can to hell transport,
 And forced e'en me to see the damn'd at court.
 Not Dante, dreaming all the infernal state,
 Beheld such scenes of envy, sin, and hate.
 Base fear becomes the guilty, not the free ;
 Suits tyrants, plunderers, but suits not me:
 Shall I, the terror of this sinful town,
 Care, if a liveried lord or smile or frown ?
 Who cannot flatter, and detest who can,
 Tremble before a noble serving-man ?
 O my fair mistress, Truth ! shall I quit thee
 For huffing, braggart, puffed nobility ?
 Thou, who since yesterday hast roll'd o'er all
 The busy, idle blockheads of the ball,

---

His thanks were ended, when I (which did see
 All the court fill'd with more strange things than he Ran from thence with such, or more haste than one
 Who fears more actions, doth hast from prison.

At home in wholesome solitariness
 My piteous soul began the wretchedness
 Of suitors at court to mourn ; and a trance
 Like his, who dreamt he saw hell, did advance
 Itself o'er me ; such men as he saw there
 I saw at court, and worse and more. Lo fear
 Becomes the guilty, not the accuser : Then,
 Shall I, none's slave, of highborn or raised men
 Fear frowns ; and my mistress Truth, betray thee
 For the huffing, bragart, puffed nobility ?
 No, no, thou which since yesterday has been Almost about the whole world, hast thou seen,

Hast thou, oh Sun! beheld an emptier sort,
 Than such as swell this bladder of a court?
 Now pox on those that show a court in wax!
 It ought to bring all courtiers on their backs:
 Such painted puppets! such a varnish'd race
 Of hollow gewgaws, only dress and face!
 Such waxen noses, stately staring things—
 No wonder some folks bow, and think them kings.

See! where the British youth, engaged no more,
 At Fig's, at White's, with felons, or a whore,
 Pay their last duty to the court, and come
 All fresh and fragrant, to the drawing-room;
 In hues as gay, and odours as divine,
 As the fair fields they sold to look so fine.
 'That 's velvet for a king!' the flatterer swears;
 'Tis true; for ten days hence 'twill be king Lear's.
 Our court may justly to our stage give rules,
 That helps it both to fools' coats and to fools.
 And why not players strut in courtiers' clothes?
 For these are actors too, as well as those:

O Sun, in all thy journey, vanity,
 Such as swells the bladder of our court? I Think he which made your waxen garden, and Transported it from Italy, to stand
 With us, at London, flouts our courtiers; for Just such gay painted things, which no sap, nor Taste have in them, ours are: and natural
 Some of the stocks are; their fruits bastard all.

'Tis ten o'clock and past; all whom the mues,
 Baloun, or tennis, diet, or the stews
 Had all the morning held, now the second
 Time made ready, that day, in flocks are found
 In the presence; and I (God pardon me)
 As fresh and sweet their apparels be, as be
 Their fields they sold to buy them. For a king
 Those hose are, cried the flatterers: and bring Them next week to the theatre to sell.
 Wants reach all states: me seems they do as well
 At stage, as courts: all are players. Whoe'er looks (For themselves dare not go) o'er Cheapside books,

Wants reach all states : they beg hut better dress'd,
And all is splendid poverty at best.

Painted for sight, and essenced for the smell,
Like frigates fraught with spice and cochineal,
Sail in the ladies : how each pirate eyes
So weak a vessel, and so rich a prize !
Top-gallant he, and she in all her trim,
He boarding her, she striking sail to him :

Dear countess ! you have charms all hearts to hit
And ' Sweet sir Fopling ! you have so much wit !'
Such wits and beauties are not praised for nought,
For both the beauty and the wit are bought.
'Twould burst e'en Heraclitus with the spleen,
To see those antics, Fopling and Courtin :
The presence seems, with things so richly odd,
The mosque of Mahound, or some queer pagod.
See them survey their limbs by Durer's rules,
Of all beau-kind the best proportion'd fools !

---

Shall find their wardrobes inventory. Now
The ladies come. As pirates (which do know
That there came weak ships fraught with cutchanel)
The men board them : and praise (as they think)
well,
Their beauties ; they the men's wits : both are bought.

Why good wits ne'er wear scarlet gowns, I thought
This cause, these men, mens wits for speeches buy,
And women buy all red which scarlets dye.
He call'd her beauty lime-twigs, her hair net :
She fears her drugs ill lay'd, her hair loose set :
Wouldn't Heraclitus laugh to see Macrine
From hat to shoe, himself at door refine,
As if the presence were a mosque ; and lift
His skirts and hose, and call his clothes to shrift,
Making them confess not only mortal
Great stains and holes in them, but venial
Feathers and dust, wherewith they fornicate ;
And then by Durer's rules survey the state
Of his each limb, and with strings the odds tries
Of his neck to his leg, and waste to thighs.

Adjust their clothes, and to confession draw,
 Those venial sins, an atom, or a straw :
 But, oh ! what terrors must distract the soul
 Convicted of that mortal crime, a hole :
 Or should one pound of powder less bespread
 Those monkey-tails that wag behind their head.
 Thus finish'd, and corrected to a hair,
 They march, to prate their hour before the fair.
 So first to preach a white-gloved chaplain goes,
 With band of lily, and with cheek of rose,
 Sweeter than Sharon, in immaculate trim,
 Neatness itself impertinent in him.
 Let but the ladies smile, and they are bless'd :
 Prodigious ! how the things protest ! protest !
 Peace, fools, or Gouson will for papist seize you,
 If once he catch you at your Jesu ! Jesu !

Nature made every fop to plague his brother,
 Just as one beauty mortifies another.
 But here's the captain that will plague them both,
 Whose air cries, Arm ! whose very look 's an oath :
 The captain 's honest, sirs, and that 's enough,
 'Though his soul 's bullet, and his body buff.

---

So in immaculate clothes and symmetry
 Perfect as circles, with such nicety
 As a young preacher at his first time goes
 To preach, he enters, and a lady which owes
 Him not so much as good-will, he arrests,
 And unto her protests, protests, protests,
 So much as at Rome would serve to have thrown
 Ten cardinals into the Inquisition :
 And whispers by Jesu so oft, that a
 Pursuevant would have ravish'd him away
 For saying our lady's Psalter. But 'tis fit
 That they each other plague, they merit it.
 But here comes Glorious that will plague 'em both
 Who in the other extreme only doth
 Call a rough carelessness good fashion :
 Whose cloak his spurs tear, or whom he spits on,
 He cares not, he. His ill words do no harm
 To him ; he rushes in, as if Arm, arm,

He spits fore-right ; his haughty chest before,
 Like battering rams, beats open every door :
 And with a face as red, and as awry,
 As Herod's hangdogs in old tapestry,
 Scarecrow to boys, the breeding woman's curse,
 Has yet a strange ambition to look worse :
 Confounds the civil, keeps the rude in awe,
 Jest's like a licensed fool, commands like law.

Frighted, I quit the room, but leave it so
 As men from jails to execution go ;
 For hung with deadly sins I see the wall,
 And lined with giants deadlier than them all :
 Each man an Askapart, of strength to toss
 For quoits, both Temple-bar and Charing-cross.
 Scared at the grizly forms, I sweat, I fly,
 And shake all o'er, like a discover'd spy.

Courts are too much for wits so weak as mine ;
 Charge them with heaven's artillery, bold divine !
 From such alone the great rebukes endure,
 Whose satire 's sacred, and whose rage secure ;

---

He meant to cry : and though his face be as ill
 As theirs which in old hangings whip Christ, still
 He strives to look worse ; he keeps all in awe ;
 Jest's like a licensed fool, commands like law.

Tired, now, I leave this place, and but pleased
 As men from gaols to execution go,
 Go, through the great chamber (why is it hung
 With these seven deadly sins ?) being among
 Those Askaparts, men big enough to throw
 Charing-cross, for a bar, men that do know
 No token of worth, but queens man, and fine
 Living : barrels of beef, flaggons of wine,
 I shook like a spied spy—Preachers which are
 Seas of wit and art, you can, then dare,
 Drown the sins of this place ; but as for me
 Which am but a scant brook, enough shall be
 To wash the stains away : although I yet
 (With Maccabees' modesty) the known merit
 Of my work lessen, yet some wise men shall,
 I hope, esteem my writs Canonical.

EPILOGUE TO THE SATIRES. 79

Tis mine to wash a few light stains ; but theirs
To deluge sin, and drown a court in tears.
Howe'er, what's now Apocrypha, my wit,
In time to come may pass for Holy Writ.

EPILOGUE TO THE SATIRES.
IN TWO DIALOGUES.

WRITTEN IN MDCCXXXVIII.

DIALOGUE I.

Fr. NOT twice a twelvemonth you appear in print,
And when it comes the court sees nothing in't.
You grow correct, that once with rapture writ,
And are, besides, too moral for a wit.
Decay of parts, alas ! we all must feel—
Why now, this moment, don't I see you steal ?
'Tis all from Horace : Horace long before ye
Said, 'Tories call'd him Whig, and Whigs a Tory ;'
And taught his Romans in much better metre,
To laugh at fools who put their trust in Peter.'
But Horace, sir, was delicate, was nice ;
Bubo observes, he lash'd no sort of vice :
Horace would say, Sir Billy served the crown,
Blunt could do business, Higgins knew the town ;
In Sappho touch the failings of the sex,
In reverend bishops note some small neglects,
And own the Spaniard did a waggish thing,
Who cropp'd our ears, and sent them to the king.
His sly, polite, insinuating style
Could please at court, and make Augustus smile :
An artful manager, that crept between
His friend and shame, and was a kind of screen.
But 'faith your very friends will soon be sore ;
Patriots there are, who wish you'd jest no more—

And where's the glory ? 'twill be only thought
 The great man never offer'd you a goat.
 Go see Sir Robert—

P. See Sir Robert !—hum—

And never laugh—for all my life to come ?
 Seen him I have, but in his happier hour
 Of social pleasure, ill-exchanged for power ;
 Seen him, uncumber'd with a venal tribe,
 Smile without art, and win without a bribe
 Would he oblige me ? let me only find,
 He does not think me what he thinks mankind.
 Come, come, at all I laugh he laughs, no doubt,
 The only difference is, I dare laugh out.

F. Why yes : with Scripture still you may be free
 A horse-laugh, if you please, at honesty ;
 A joke on Jekyll, or some odd old Whig,
 Who never changed his principle, or wig ;
 A patriot is a fool in every age,
 Whom all lord chamberlains allow the stage :
 These nothing hurts : they keep their fashion still,
 And wear their strange old virtue as they will.

If any ask you, ' Who 's the man so near
 His prince, that writes in verse, and has his ear ?'
 Why answer, Lyttleton ; and I'll engage
 The worthy youth shall ne'er be in a rage :
 But were his verses vile, his whisper base,
 You'd quickly find him in lord Fanny's case.
 Sejanus, Wolsey, hurt not honest Fleury,
 But well may put some statesmen in a fury.

Laugh then at any, but at fools or foes ;
 These you but anger, and you mend not those.
 Laugh at your friends, and, if your friends are sore,
 So much the better, you may laugh the more.
 To vice and folly to confine the jest,
 Sets half the world, God knows, against the rest ;
 Did not the sneer of more impartial men
 At sense and virtue balance all again.
 Judicious wits spread wide the ridicule,
 And charitably comfort knave and fool.

P. Dear sir, forgive the prejudice of youth :
 Adieu distinction, satire, warmth, and truth !
 Come, harmless characters that no one hit ;
 Come, Henley's oratory, Osborn's wit !
 The honey dropping from Favonio's tongue,
 The flowers of Bubo, and the flow of Young !
 The gracious dew of pulpit eloquence,
 And all the well-whipp'd cream of courtly sense,
 That first was H—vy's, F—'s next, and then,
 The S—te's, and then H—vy's once again.
 O come, that easy Ciceronian style,
 So Latin, yet so English all the while,
 As, though the pride of Middleton and Bland,
 All boys may read, and girls may understand !
 Then might I sing, without the least offence,
 And all I sung should be the nation's sense ;
 Or teach the melancholy muse to mourn,
 Hang the sad verse on Carolina's urn,
 And hail her passage to the realms of rest,
 All parts perform'd, and all her children bless'd !
 So—satire is no more—I feel it die—
 No gazetteer more innocent than I—
 And let, a God's name, every fool and knave
 Be graced through life, and flatter'd in his grave.

F. Why so? if satire knows its time and place,
 You still may lash the greatest—in disgrace :
 For merit will by turns forsake them all ;
 Would you know when ? exactly when they fall.
 But let all satire in all changes spare
 Immortal S—k, and grave D—re.
 Silent and soft, as saints removed to heaven,
 All ties dissolved, and every sin forgiven,
 These may some gentle ministerial wing
 Receive, and place for ever near a king !
 There, where no passion, pride, or shame transport,
 Lull'd with the sweet nepenthe of a court ;
 There, where no father's, brother's, friend's disgrace
 Once break their rest, or stir them from their place ;

But past the sense of human miseries,
 All tears are wiped for ever from all eyes ;
 No cheek is known to blush, no heart to throb,
 Save when they lose a question, or a job.

P. Good Heaven forbid, that I should blast their glory,
 Who know how like Whig ministers to Tory ;
 And when three sovereigns died could scarce be vex'd,
 Considering what a gracious prince was next.
 Have I, in silent wonder, seen such things
 As pride in slaves, and avarice in kings ;
 And at a peer or peeress, shall I fret,
 Who starves a sister, or forswears a debt ?
 Virtue, I grant you, is an empty boast ;
 But shall the dignity of vice be lost ?
 Ye Gods ! shall Cibber's son, without rebuke,
 Swear like a lord, or Rich outwhore a duke ?
 A favourite's porter with his master vie,
 Be bribed as often, and as often lie ?
 Shall Ward draw contracts with a statesman's skill ?
 Or Japhet pocket, like his grace, a will ?
 Is it for Bond or Peter (paltry things)
 To pay their debts, or keep their faith like kings ?
 If Blunt dispatch'd himself, he play'd the man ;
 And so may'st thou, illustrious Passeran !
 But shall a printer, weary of his life,
 Learn, from their books, to hang himself and wife ?
 This, this, my friend, I cannot, must not bear :
 Vice thus abused, demands a nation's care :
 This calls the church to deprecate our sin,
 And hurls the thunder of the laws on gin.

Let modest Foster, if he will, excel
 Ten metropolitans in preaching well ;
 A simple quaker, or a quaker's wife,
 Outdo Landaff in doctrine,—yea in life :
 Let humble Allen, with an awkward shame,
 Do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame .
 Virtue may choose the high or low degree,
 Tis just alike to virtue and to me ;

Dwell in a monk, or light upon a king,
She's still the same beloved, contented thing.
Vice is undone, if she forgets her birth,
And stoops from angels to the dregs of earth
But 'tis the fall degrades her to a whore ;
Let greatness own her, and she's mean no more .
Her birth, her beauty, crowds and courts confess,
Chaste matrons praise her, and grave bishops bless ,
In golden chains the willing world she draws,
And hers the Gospel is, and hers the laws ;
Mounts the tribunal, lifts her scarlet head,
And sees pale Virtue carted in her stead.
Lo ! at the wheels of her triumphal car,
Old England's genius, rough with many a scar
Dragg'd in the dust ! his arms hang idly round,
His flag inverted trails along the ground !
Our youth, all liveried o'er with foreign gold,
Before her dance : behind her crawl the old !
See thronging millions to the pagod run,
And offer country, parent, wife, or son !
Hear her black trumpet through the land proclaim,
That not to be corrupted is the shame.
In soldier, churchman, patriot, man in power,
'Tis avarice all, ambition is no more !
See, all our nobles begging to be slaves !
See, all our fools aspiring to be knaves !
The wit of cheats, the courage of a whore,
Are what ten thousand envy and adore :
All, all look up, with reverential awe,
At crimes that 'scape or triumph o'er the law
While truth, worth, wisdom, daily they decry—
Nothing is sacred now but villany.'
Yet may this verse (if such a verse remain)
Show there was one who held it in disdain

DIALOGUE II.

Fr. 'Tis all a libel!—Paxton, sir, will say.

P. Not yet my friend! to-morrow, 'faith it may
 And for that very cause I print to-day.
 How should I fret to mangle every line,
 In reverence to the sins of thirty-nine!
 Vice with such giant-strides comes on amain,
 Invention strives to be before in vain;
 Feign what I will, and paint it e'er so strong,
 Some rising genius sins up to my song.

F. Yet none but you by name the guilty lash;
 E'en Guthry saves half Newgate by a dash.
 Spare then the person, and expose the vice.

P. How, sir! not damn the sharper, but the dice,
 Come on then, satire! general unconfined,
 Spread thy broad wing, and souse on all the kind.
 Ye statesmen, priests, of one religion all!
 Ye tradesmen, vile, in army, court, or hall!
 Ye reverend atheists.—F. Scandal! name them, who

P. Why that's the thing you bid me not to do.
 Who starved a sister, who forswore a debt,
 I never named: the town's inquiring yet.
 The poisoning dame—F. You mean—P. I don't.—

F. You do.

P. See, now I keep the secret, and not you!
 The bribing statesman—F. Hold: too high you go.

P. The bribed elector—F. There you stoop too low

P. I fain would please you, if I knew with what Tell me, which knave is lawful game, which not?
 Must great offenders, once escaped the crown,
 Like royal harts, be never more run down?
 Admit your law to spare the knight requires,
 As beasts of nature, may we hunt the 'squires?
 Suppose I censure—you know what I mean—
 To save a bishop, may I name a dean?

F. A dean, sir? no; his fortune is not made;
 You hurt a man that's rising in the trade.

P. If not the tradesman who sets up to-day,
 Much less the 'prentice who to-morrow may.
 Down, down, proud satire ! though a realm be spoil'd,
 Arraign no mightier thief than wretched Wild :
 Or, if a court or country's made a job,
 Go drench a pickpocket, and join the mob.

But, sir, I beg you, (for the love of vice !)
 The matter's weighty, pray consider twice .
 Have you less pity for the needy cheat,
 The poor and friendless villain, than the great ?
 Alas ! the small discredit of a bribe
 Scarce hurts the lawyer, but undoes the scribe.
 Then better sure it charity becomes
 To tax directors, who (thank God) have plums,
 Still better, ministers ; or, if the thing
 May pinch e'en there—why lay it on a king.

F. Stop ! stop !

P. Must satire, then, nor rise nor fall ?
 Speak out, and bid me blame no rogues at all.

F. Yes, strike that Wild, I'll justify the blow.

P. Strike ? why the man was hang'd ten years ago—
 Who now that obsolete example fears ?
 E'en Peter trembles only for his ears.

F. What, always Peter ? Peter thinks you mad ;
 You make men desperate, if they once are bad,
 Else might he take to virtue some years hence—

P. As S—k, if he lives, will love the prince.

F. Strange spleen to S—k !

P. Do I wrong the man ?

God knows, I praise a courtier where I can.
 When I confess there is who feels for fame,
 And melts to goodness, need I Scarborough name ?
 Pleased let me own, in Esher's peaceful grove
 (Where Kent and nature vie for Pelham's love,)
 The scene, the master, opening to my view,
 I sit and dream I see my Craggs anew !

Ev'n in a bishop I can spy desert ;
 Secker is decent, Rundel has a heart ;

Manners with candour are to Benson given ;
 To Berkley every virtue under heaven.
 But does the court a worthy man remove ?
 That instant, I declare, he has my love :
 I shun his zenith, court his mild decline ;
 Thus Somers once, and Halifax, were mine.
 Oft, in the clear still mirror of retreat,
 I studied Shrewsbury, the wise and great ;
 Carleton's calm sense, and Stanhope's noble flame
 Compared, and knew their generous end the same :
 How pleasing Atterbury's softer hour !
 How shined the soul, unconquer'd in the Tower !
 How can I Pulteney, Chesterfield, forget,
 While Roman spirit charms, and Attic wit ?
 Argyle, the state's whole thunder born to wield,
 And shake alike the senate and the field ?
 Or Wyndham, just to freedom and the throne,
 The master of our passions, and his own ?
 Names, which I long have loved, nor loved in vain, Rank'd with their friends, and number'd with their train.

And if yet higher the proud list should end,
 Still let me say, no follower, but a friend.

Yet think not, friendship only prompts my lays,
 I follow virtue ; where she shines, I praise ;
 Points she to priest or elder, Whig or Tory,
 Or round a quaker's beaver cast a glory.
 I never (to my sorrow I declare)

Dined with the Man of Ross, or my Lord Mayor.
 Some in their choice of friends (nay look not grave)

Have still a secret bias to a knave :

To find an honest man I beat about,

- And love him, court him, praise him, in or out.

F Then why so few commended ?

P. Not so fierce ;

Find you the virtue, and I'll find the verse.

But random praise—the task can ne'er be done :

Each mother asks it for her booby son ;

Each widow asks it for the best of men,
 For him she weeps, for him she weds again.
 Praise cannot stoop, like satire, to the ground :
 The number may be hang'd, but not be crown'd.
 Enough for half the greatest of these days,
 To escape my censure, not expect my praise.
 Are they not rich ? what more can they pretend ?
 Dare they to hope a poet for their friend ?
 What Richlieu-wanted, Louis scarce could gain,
 And what young Ammon wish'd, but wish'd in vain.
 No power the muse's friendship can command ;
 No power, when virtue claims it, can withstand :
 To Cato, Virgil paid one honest line :
 O let my country's friends illumine mine !—
 What are you thinking ? F. 'Faith the thought's no sin,
 I think your friends are out, and would be in.

P. If merely to come in, sir, they go out,
 The way they take is strangely round about.

F. They too may be corrupted, you'll allow.

P. I only call those knaves who are so now
 Is that too little ? Come then, I'll comply—

Spirit of Arnall ! aid me while I lie :
 Cobham's a coward, Polwarth is a slave,
 And Lyttleton a dark, designing knave ;
 St John has ever been a wealthy fool—
 But let me add, Sir Robert's mighty dull,
 Has never made a friend in private life,
 And was, besides, a tyrant to his wife.

But pray when others praise him, do I blame ?
 Call Verres, Wolsey, any odious name !

Why rail they then, if but a wreath of mine,
 O all-accomplish'd St. John ! deck thy shrine ?

What ! shall each spur-gall'd hackney of the day
 When Paxton gives him double pots and pay,
 Or each new-pension'd sycophant, pretend
 To break my windows, if I treat a friend,
 Then wisely plead, to me they meant no hurt,
 But 'twas my guest at whom they threw the dirt ?

Sure, if I spare the minister, no rules
Of honour bind me, not to maul his tools ;
Sure, if they cannot cut, it may be said
His saws are toothless, and his hatchets lead.

It anger'd Turenne, once upon a day,
To see a footman kick'd that took his pay ;
But when he heard the affront the fellow gave,
Knew one a man of honour, one a knave ;
The prudent general turn'd it to a jest,
And begg'd he'd take the pains to kick the rest.
Which not at present having time to do—

F. Hold, sir! for God's sake, where's the affront
Against your worship when had S—k writ ? [to you !
Or P—ge pour'd forth the torrent of his wit ?
Or grant the bard whose distich all commend
[In power a servant, out of power a friend]
To W—le guilty of some venial sin ;
What's that to you who ne'er was out nor in ?

The priest whose flattery bedropt the crown,
How hurt he you ? he only stain'd the gown.
And how did, pray, the florid youth offend,
Whose speech you took, and gave it to a friend ?

P. 'Faith, it imports not much from whom it came,
Whoever borrow'd could not be to blame,
Since the whole house did afterwards the same.
Let courtly wits to wits afford supply,
As hog to hog in huts of Westphaly :
If one, through nature's bounty or his lord's,
Has what the frugal, dirty soil affords,
From him the next receives it, thick or thin,
As pure a mess almost as it came in ;
The blessed benefit, not there confined,
Drops to the third, who nuzzles close behind.
From tail to mouth, they feed and they carouse,
The last full fairly gives it to the house

F. This filthy simile, this beastly line
Quite turns my stomach—

P. So does flattery mine :

And all your courtly civet-cats can vent,
 Perfume to you, to me is excrement.
 But hear me further—Japhet, 'tis agreed,
 Writ not, and Chartres scarce could write or read,
 In all the courts of Pindus guiltless quite :
 But pens can forge, my friend, that cannot write ;
 And must no egg in Japhet's face be thrown,
 Because the deed he forged was not my own ?
 Must never patriot then declaim at gin,
 Unless, good man ! he has been fairly in ?
 No zealous pastor blame a failing spouse,
 Without a staring reason on his brows ?
 And each blasphem'er quite escape the rod,
 Because the insult 's not on man, but God ?
 Ask you what provocation I have had ?
 The strong antipathy of good to bad.
 When truth and virtue an affront endures,
 The affront is mine, my friend, and should be yours
 Mine, as a foe profess'd to false pretence,
 Who think a coxcomb's honour like his sense ;
 Mine, as a friend to every worthy mind ;
 And mine as man, who feel for all mankind.

F. You're strangely proud.

P. So proud, I am no slave ;

So impudent, I own myself no knave ;
 So odd, my country's ruin makes me grave.
 Yes, I am proud : I must be proud to see
 Men not afraid of God, afraid of me :
 Safe from the bar, the pulpit, and the throne,
 Yet touch'd and shamed by ridicule alone.
 O sacred weapon ! left for Truth's defence,
 Sole dread of folly, vice, and insolence !
 T' all but heaven-directed hands denied,
 The muse may give thee, but the gods must guide
 Reverent I touch thee ! but with honest zeal ;
 To rouse the watchmen of the public weal,
 To virtue's work provoke the tardy hall,
 And goad the prelate slumbering in his stall.

Ye tinsel insects! whom a court maintains,
 That counts your beauties only by your stains,
 Spin all your cobwebs o'er the eye of day!
 The muse's wing shall brush you all away:
 All his grace preaches, all his lordship sings,
 All that makes saints of queens, and gods of kings;
 All, all but truth, drops dead-born from the press,
 Like the last gazette, or the last address.

When black ambition stains a public cause,
 A monarch's sword when mad vain-glory draws,
 Not Waller's wreath can hide a nation's scar,
 Not Boileau turn the feather to a star.

Not so, when, diadem'd with rays divine,
 Touch'd with the flame that breaks from virtue's shrine,

Her priestess muse forbids the good to die,
 And opes the temple of eternity.
 There, other trophies deck the truly brave,
 Than such as Anstis casts into the grave;
 Far other stars than * and ** wear,
 And may descend to Mordington from Stair;
 (Such as on Hough's unsullied mitre shine,
 Or beam, good Digby, from a heart like thine)
 Let envy howl, while heaven's whole chorus sings,

And bark at honour not conferr'd by kings;
 Let flattery sickening see the incense rise,
 Sweet to the world, and grateful to the skies:
 Truth guards the poet, sanctifies the line,
 And makes immortal verse as mean as mine.

Yes, the last pen for freedom let me draw,
 When truth stands trembling on the edge of law;
 Here, last of Britons! let your names be read:
 Are none, none living? let me praise the dead,
 And for that cause which made your fathers shine,
 Fall by the votes of their degenerate line.

F. Alas, alas! pray end what you began,
 And write next winter more Essays on Man.

IMITATIONS OF HORACE.

EPISTLE VII.

Imitated in the Manner of Dr. Swift.

'Tis true, my lord, I gave my word,
 I would be with you June the third ;
 Changed it to August, and (in short)
 Have kept it—as you do at court.
 You humour me when I am sick,
 Why not when I am splenetic ?
 In town, what objects could I meet ?
 The shops shut up in every street,
 And funerals blackening all the doors,
 And yet more melancholy whores :
 And what a dust in every place !
 And a thin court that wants your face
 And fevers raging up and down,
 And W* and H** both in town !
 'The dog-days are no more the case
 'Tis true, but winter comes apace :
 Then southward let your bard retire,
 Hold out some months 'twixt sun and fire,
 And you shall see, the first warm weather,
 Me and the butterflies together.
 My lord, your favours well I know :
 'Tis with distinction you bestow ;
 And not to every one that comes,
 Just as a Scotsman does his plums.
 'Pray take them, sir—Enough 's a feast :
 Eat some, and pocket up the rest'—
 What, rob your boys ? those pretty rogues !
 'No, sir, you'll leave them to the hogs.'
 Thus fools with compliments besiege ye,
 Contriving never to oblige ye.
 Scatter your favours on a fop,
 Ingratitude 's the certain crop,

And 'tis but just, I'll tell you wherefore,
 You give the things you never care for.
 A wise man always is or should
 Be mighty ready to do good ;
 But makes a difference in his thought
 Betwix a guinea and a groat.

Now this I'll say, you'll find in me
 A safe companion and a free ;
 But if you'd have me always near—
 A word, pray, in your honour's ear :
 I hope it is your resolution
 To give me back my constitution !
 The sprightly wit, the lively eye,
 The engaging smile, the gaiety,
 That laugh'd down many a summer sun,
 And kept you up so oft till one !
 And all that voluntary vein,
 As when Belinda raised my strain.

A weasel once made shift to slink
 In at a corn loft through a chink ;
 But having amply stuff'd his skin,
 Could not get out as he got in ;
 Which one belonging to the house
 ('Twas not a man, it was a mouse)
 Observing, cried, ' You 'scape not so ;
 Lean as you came, sir, you must go.'

Sir, you may spare your application,
 I'm no such beast, nor his relation ;
 Not one that temperance advance,
 Cramm'd to the throat with ortolans ;
 Extremely ready to resign
 All that may make me none of mine ;
 South-sea subscriptions take who please,
 Leave me but liberty and ease.
 'Twas what I said to Craggs and Child,
 Who praised my modesty, and smiled.
 ' Give me,' I cried (enough for me),
 ' My bread, and independency !'

So bought an annual rent or two,
 And lived—just as you see I do;
 Near fifty, and without a wife,
 I trust that sinking fund, my life.
 Can I retrench? Yes, mighty well,
 Shrink back to my paternal cell,
 A little house, with trees a-row,
 And, like its master, very low.
 There died my father, no man's debtor,
 And there I'll die, nor worse nor better.
 To set this matter full before ye,
 Our old friend Swift will tell his story.
 'Harley, the nation's great support—'
 But you may read it, I stop short.

THE LATTER PART OF SATIRE VI. B. II.*

O CHARMING noons! and nights divine!
 Or when I sup, or when I dine,
 My friends above, my folks below,
 Chatting and laughing all a-row,
 The beans and bacon set before 'em,
 The grace-cup served with all decorum:
 Each willing to be pleased, and please,
 And e'en the very dogs at ease!
 Here no man prates of idle things,
 How this or that Italian sings,
 A neighbour's madness, or his spouse's,
 Or what 's in either of the houses:
 But something much more our concern,
 And quite a scandal not to learn:
 Which is the happier, or the wiser,
 A man of merit, or a miser?
 Whether we ought to choose our friends,
 For their own worth, or our own ends?

---

* See the first part in Swift's Poems

What good, or better, we may call,
 And what the very best of all ?
 Our friend Dan Prior, told (you know)
 A tale extremely 'à-propos :'
 Name a town life, and in a trice
 He had a story of two mice.
 Once on a time (so runs the fable)
 A country mouse, right hospitable,
 Received a town mouse at his board,
 Just as a farmer might a lord.
 A frugal mouse upon the whole,
 Yet loved his friend, and had a soul,
 Knew what was handsome, and would do't,
 On just occasion, 'côte qui coute.'
 He brought him bacon, (nothing lean ;)
 Pudding that might have pleased a dean ;
 Cheese, such as men in Suffolk make,
 But wish'd it Stilton for his sake ;
 Yet, to his guest though no way sparing,
 He ate himself the rind and paring.
 Our courtier scarce could touch a bit,
 But show'd his breeding and his wit ;
 He did his best to seem to eat,
 And cried, ' I vow you're mighty neat ;
 But, lord, my friend, this savage scene !
 For God's sake come, and live with men .
 Consider, mice, like men, must die,
 Both small and great, both you and I :
 Then spend your life in joy and sport ;
 (This doctrine, friend, I learn'd at court.)'
 The veriest hermit in the nation
 May yield, God knows, to strong temptation
 Away they come, through thick and thin
 To a tall house near Lincoln's-inn :
 ('Twas on the night of a debate,
 When all their lordships had sat late.)
 Behold the place, where if a poet
 Shined in description, he might show it

Tell how the moon-beam trembling falls,
And tips with silver all the walls ;
Palladian walls, Venetian doors,
Grotesco roofs, and stucco floors :
But let it (in a word) be said,
The moon was up, and men a-bed,
The napkins white, the carpet red ;
The guests withdrawn had left the treat,
And down the mice sat, ' tête à tête.'

Our courtier walks from dish to dish,
Tastes for his friend of fowl and fish ;
'Tells all their names, lays down the law :

Que ça est bon ! Ah, goûtez ça !
That jelly's rich, this malmssey healing,
Pray dip your whiskers and your tail in.
Was ever such a happy swain ?

He stuffs, and swills, and stuffs again.

I'm quite ashamed—'tis mighty rude

To eat so much—but all's so good.

I have a thousand thanks to give—

My lord alone knows how to live.'

No sooner said, but from the hall

Rush chaplain, butler, dogs and all :

'A rat, a rat ! clap to the door—'

The cat comes bouncing on the floor

O for the heart of Homer's mice,

Or gods to save them in a trice !

(It was by Providence they think,

For your damn'd stucco has no chink.)

'An't please your honour,' quoth the peasant,

'This same desert is not so pleasant :

Give me again my hollow tree,

A crust of bread, and liberty !'

BOOK IV.—ODE I.

TO VENUS.

AGAIN? new tumults in my breast?
 Ah spare me, Venus! let me, let me rest!
 I am not now, alas! the man
 As in the gentle reign of my queen Anne.
 Ah! sound no more thy soft alarms,
 Nor circle sober fifty with thy charms!
 Mother too fierce of dear desires!
 Turn, turn to willing hearts your wanton fires:
 To number five direct your doves,
 There spread round Murray all your blooming loves
 Noble and young, who strikes the heart
 With every sprightly, every decent part;
 Equal the injured to defend,
 To charm the mistress, or to fix the friend.
 He, with a hundred arts refined,
 Shall stretch thy conquests over half the kind:
 To him each rival shall submit,
 Make but his riches equal to his wit.
 Then shall thy form the marble grace,
 (Thy Grecian form) and Chloe lend the face;
 His house, embosom'd in the grove,
 Sacred to social life and social love,
 Shall glitter o'er the pendent green,
 Where Thames reflects the visionary scene:
 Thither the silver-sounding lyres
 Shall call the smiling loves and young desires
 There, every grace and muse shall throng,
 Exalt the dance, or animate the song;
 There youths and nymphs, in concert gay,
 Shall hail the rising, close the parting day
 With me, alas! those joys are o'er;
 For me the vernal garlands bloom no more
 Adieu! fond hope of mutual fire,
 The still-believing, still renew'd desire:

Adieu! the heart-expanding bowl,
 And all the kind deceivers of the soul!
 But why? ah tell me, ah too dear!
 Steals down my cheek the involuntary tear?
 Why words so flowing, thoughts so free,
 Stop, or turn nonsense, at one glance of thee?
 Thee, dress'd in Fancy's airy beam,
 Absent I follow through the extended dream;
 Now, now I cease, I clasp thy charms,
 And now you burst (ah cruel) from my arms!
 And swiftly shoot along the Mall,
 Or softly glide by the canal;
 Now shown by Cynthia's silver ray,
 And now on rolling waters snatch'd away

ART OF ODE IX. OF BOOK IV

A FRAGMENT.

LEST you should think that verse shall die,
 Which sounds the silver Thames along,
 Taught on the wings of truth to fly
 Above the reach of vulgar song;
 Though daring Milton sits sublime,
 In Spenser native muses play;
 Nor yet shall Waller yield to time,
 Nor pensive Cowley's moral lay—
 Sages and chiefs, long since had birth
 Ere Cæsar was, or Newton named;
 These raised new empires o'er the earth,
 And those new heavens and systems framed.
 Vain was the chief's, the sage's pride!
 They had no poet, and they died;
 In vain they schemed, in vain they bled!
 They had no poet, and are dead

MISCELLANIES.

On Receiving from the Right Hon. Lady Frances Shirley, a Standish and two Pens.

YES, I beheld the Athenian queen
Descend in all her sober charms ;
And, 'Take,' she said, and smiled serene,
'Take at this hand celestial arms :
Secure the radiant weapons wield ;
This golden lance shall guard desert,
And if a vice dares keep the field,
This steel shall stab it to the heart.'
Awed, on my bended knees I fell,
Received the weapons of the sky,
And dipp'd them in the sable well,
The fount of fame or infamy.
What well ? what weapon ?' Flavia cries
'A standish, steel and golden pen ;
It came from Bertrand's, not the skies ;
I gave it you to write again.
'But, friend, take heed whom you attack ,
You'll bring a house, I mean of peers,
Red, blue, and green, nay, white and black
L***** and all about your ears.
'You'd write as smooth again on glass,
And run on ivory so glib,
As not to stick at fool or ass,
Nor stop at flattery or fib.
'Athenian queen ! and sober charms !
I tell you, fool, there 's nothing in 't :
'Tis Venus, Venus gives these arms ;
In Dryden's Virgil see the print.
Come, if you 'll be a quiet soul,
That dares tell neither truth nor lies,
I'll list you in the harmless roll
Of those that sing of these poor eyes.

EPISTLE TO ROBERT, EARL OF OXFORD,
AND EARL MORTIMER.

Sent to the Earl of Oxford, with Dr. Parnell's Poems, published by our Author, after the said Earl's imprisonment in the Tower and Retreat into the Country, in the Year 1721.

SUCH were the notes thy once-loved poet sung,
Fill death untimely stopp'd his tuneful tongue.
Oh, just beheld, and lost : admired, and mourn'd !
With softest manners, gentlest arts adorn'd !
Bless'd in each science, bless'd in every strain !
Dear to the muse ! to Harley dear—in vain !
For him, thou oft hast bid the world attend,
Fond to forget the statesman in the friend ;
For Swift and him, despised the farce of state,
The sober follies of the wise and great ;
Dexterous, the craving, fawning crowd to quit,
And pleased to escape from flattery to wit.

Absent or dead, still let a friend be dear,
(A sigh the absent claims, the dead a tear,)
Recall those nights that closed thy toilsome days,
Still hear thy Parnell in his living lays,
Who, careless now of interest, fame, or fate,
Perhaps forgets that Oxford e'er was great ;
Or, deeming meanest what we greatest call,
Beholds thee glorious only in thy fall.

And sure, if aught below the seats divine
Can touch immortals, 'tis a soul like thine :
A soul supreme, in each hard instance tried,
Above all pain, and passion, and all pride,
The rage of power, the blast of public breath,
The lust of lucre and the dread of death.

In vain to deserts thy retreat is made ;
The muse attends thee to thy silent shade :
'Tis hers the brave man's latest steps to trace,
Re-judge his acts, and dignify disgrace.

When interest calls off all her sneaking train,
 And all the obliged desert, and all the vain ;
 She waits, or to the scaffold, or the cell,
 When the last lingering friend has bid farewell.
 E'en now she shades thy evening walk with bays
 (No hireling she, no prostitute to praise ;)
 E'en now, observant of the parting ray,
 Eyes the calm sunset of thy various day,
 Through fortune's cloud one truly great can see,
 Nor fears to tell that Mortimer is he.

EPISTLE TO JAMES CRAGGS, ESQ

Secretary of State in the Year 1720.

A SOUL as full of worth, as void of pride,
 Which nothing seeks to show, or needs to hide :
 Which nor to guilt nor fear its caution owes,
 And boasts a warmth that from no passion flows
 A face untaught to feign ; a judging eye,
 That darts severe upon a rising lie,
 And strikes a blush through frontless flattery :
 All this thou wert ; and being this before,
 Know, kings and fortune cannot make thee more
 Then scorn to gain a friend by servile ways,
 Nor wish to lose a foe these virtues raise ;
 But candid, free, sincere as you began,
 Proceed—a minister, but still a man.
 Be not (exalted to whate'er degree)
 Ashamed of any friend, not e'en of me :
 The patriot's plain, but untrod, path pursue ;
 If not, 'tis I must be ashamed of you.

EPISTLE TO MR. JERVAS ;

With Mr. Dryden's Translation of Fresnoy'. And of Painting.

This Epistle, and the two following, were written some years before the rest, and originally printed in 1717.

THIS verse be thine, my friend, nor thou refuse
This, from no venal or ungrateful muse.

Whether thy hand strike out some free design,
Where life awakes and dawns at every line ;
Or blend in beauteous tints the colour'd mass,
And from the canvass call the mimic face :
Read these instructive leaves, in which conspire
Fresnoy's close art, and Dryden's native fire :
And reading wish, like theirs our fate and fame,
So mix'd our studies, and so join'd our name :
Like them to shine through long succeeding age,
So just thy skill, so regular my rage.

Smit with the love of sister arts we came,
And met congenial, mingling flame with flame ;
Like friendly colours found them both unite,
And each from each contract new strength and light.

How oft in pleasing tasks we wear the day,
While summer suns roll unperceived away !
How oft our slowly-growing works impart,
While images reflect from art to art !
How oft review ; each finding, like a friend,
something to blame and something to commend !

What flattering scenes our wandering fancy wrought,

Rome's pompous glories rising to our thought !
Together o'er the Alps methinks we fly,
Fired with ideas of fair Italy.
With thee on Raphael's monument I mourn,
Or wait inspiring dreams at Maro's urn :
With thee repose where Tully once was laid,
Or seek some ruin's formidable shade :
While fancy brings the vanish'd piles to view,
And builds imaginary Rome anew.
Here thy well-studied marbles fix our eye ;
A fading fresco here demands a sigh :
Each heavenly piece unwearied we compare,
Match Raphael's grace with thy loved Guido's air

Caracci's strength, Correggio's softer line,
Paulo's free stroke, and Titian's warmth divine.

How finish'd with illustrious toil appears
This small well-polish'd gem, the work of years .
Yet still how faint by precept is express'd
The living image in the painter's breast!
Thence endless streams of fair ideas flow,
Strike in the sketch, or in the picture glow ;
Thence beauty, waking all her forms, supplies
An angel's sweetness, or Bridgewater's eyes.

Muse ! at that name thy sacred sorrows shed,
Those tears eternal that embalm the dead !
Call round her tomb each object of desire,
Each purer frame inform'd with purer fire :
Bid her be all that cheers or softens life,
The tender sister, daughter, friend, and wife :
Bid her be all that makes mankind adore ;
Then view this marble, and be vain no more !

Yet still her charms in breathing paint engage ;
Her modest cheek shall warm a future age.
Beauty, frail flower that every season fears,
Blooms in thy colours for a thousand years.
Thus Churchill's race shall other hearts surprise,
And other beauties envy Worsley's eyes ;
Each pleasing Blount shall endless smiles bestow
And soft Belinda's blush for ever glow.

Oh, lasting as those colours may they shine,
Free as thy stroke, yet faultless as thy line ;
New graces yearly like thy works display,
Soft without weakness, without glaring gay ;
Led by some rule, that guides, but not constrains
And finish'd more through happiness than pains !
The kindred arts shall in their praise conspire,
One dip the pencil, and one string the lyre.
Yet should the Graces all thy figures place,
And breathe an air divine on every face ;
Yet should the Muses bid my numbers roll
Strong as their charms, and gentle as their soul ;

With Zeuxis' Helen thy Bridgewater vie,
 And these be sung till Granville's Myra die ;
 Alas! how little from the grave we claim!
 Thou but preserv'st a face, and I a name.

EPISTLE TO MISS BLOUNT ;

With the Works of Voiture.

IN these gay thoughts the loves and graces shine
 And all the writer lives in every line :
 His easy art may happy nature seem,
 Trifles themselves are elegant in him.
 Sure to charm all was his peculiar fate,
 Who without flattery pleased the fair and great ;
 Still with esteem no less conversed than read ;
 With wit well-natured, and with books well-bred :
 His heart, his mistress and his friend did share ;
 His time, the muse, the witty, and the fair.
 Thus wisely careless, innocently gay,
 Cheerful he play'd the trifle, life, away ;
 Till fate, scarce felt, his gentle breath suppress'd,
 As smiling infants sport themselves to rest.
 E'en rival wits did Voiture's death deplore,
 And the gay mourn'd who never mourn'd before ;
 The truest hearts for Voiture heaved with sighs,
 Voiture was wept by all the brightest eyes :
 The smiles and loves had died in Voiture's death,
 But that for ever in his lines they breathe.

Let the strict life of graver mortals be
 A long, exact, and serious comedy ;
 In every scene some moral let it teach,
 And, if it can, at once both please and preach.
 Let mine, an innocent gay farce appear,
 And more diverting still than regular,
 Have humour, wit, a native ease and grace,
 Though not too strictly bound to time and place :

104 POPE'S POETICAL WORKS.

Critics in wit, or life, are hard to please ;
Few write to those and none can live to these.

Too much your sex are by their forms confined,
Severe to all, but most to womankind ;
Custom, grown blind with age, must be your guide
Your pleasure is a vice, but not your pride ;
By nature yielding, stubborn but for fame ;
Made slaves by honour, and made fools by shame.
Marriage may all those petty tyrants chase,
But sets up one, a greater, in their place :
Well might you wish for change by those accursed,
But the last tyrant ever proves the worst.
Still in constraint your suffering sex remains,
Or bound in formal, or in real chains :
Whole years neglected, for some months adored,
The fawning servant turns a haughty lord.
Ah, quit not the free innocence of life,
For the dull glory of a virtuous wife ;
Nor let false shows, nor empty titles please :
Aim not at joy, but rest content with ease.

The gods, to curse Pamela with her prayers,
Gave the gilt coach and dappled Flanders mares,
The shining robes, rich jewels, beds of state,
And, to complete her bliss, a fool for mate.
She glares in balls, front boxes, and the ring,
A vain, unquiet, glittering, wretched thing !
Pride, pomp, and state, but reach her outward part
She sighs, and is no dutchess at her heart.

But, madam, if the fates withstand, and you
Are destined Hymen's willing victim too ;
Trust not too much your now resistless charms,
Those, age or sickness, soon or late, disarms :
Good-humour only teaches charms to last,
Still makes new conquests, and maintains the past
Love raised on beauty will, like that, decay,
Our hearts may bear its slender chain a day ;
As flowery bands in wantonness are worn,
A morning's pleasure, and at evening torn ;

This binds in ties more easy, yet more strong,
The willing heart, and only holds it long.

Thus Voiture's* early care still shone the same,
And Monthausier was only changed in name;
By this, e'en now they live, e'en now they charm,
Their wit still sparkling, and their flames still warm.

Now crown'd with myrtle on the Elysian coast,
Amid those lovers, joys his gentle ghost:
Pleased, while with smiles his happy lines you view,

And finds a fairer Rambouillet in you.
The brightest eyes in France inspired his muse;
The brightest eyes in Britain now peruse;
And dead, as living, 'tis our author's pride
Still to charm those who charm the world beside.

EPISTLE TO THE SAME,

On her leaving the Town after the Coronation, 1715

As some fond virgin, whom her mother's care
Drags from the town to wholesome country air,
Just when she learns to roll a melting eye,
And hear a spark, yet think no danger nigh;
From the dear man unwilling she must sever,
Yet takes one kiss before she parts for ever;
Thus from the world fair Zephalinda flew,
Saw others happy, and with sighs withdrew;
Not that their pleasures caused her discontent,
She sigh'd, not that they stay'd but that she went.

She went to plain-work, and to purling brooks,
Old-fashion'd halls, dull aunts, and croaking rooks:
She went from opera, park, assembly, play,
To morning walks, and prayers three hours a-day;
To part her time 'twixt reading and bohea,
To muse, and spill her solitary tea;

---

* Mademoiselle Paulet.

Or o'er cold coffee trifle with the spoon,
 Count the slow clock, and dine exact at noon ;
 Divert her eyes with pictures in the fire,
 Hum half a tune, tell stories to the 'squire ;
 Up to her godly garret after seven,
 There starve and pray, for that 's the way to heaven
 Some 'squire, perhaps, you take delight to rack ;
 Whose game is whist, whose treat a toast in sack :
 Who visits with a gun, presents you birds,
 Then gives a smacking buss, and cries,—' No words !
 Or with his hounds comes hallooing from the stable,
 Makes love with nods, and knees beneath a table ;
 Whose laughs are hearty, though his jests are coarse,

And loves you best of all things—but his horse.

In some fair evening, on your elbow laid,
 You dream of triumphs in the rural shade ;
 In pensive thought recall the fancied scene,
 See coronations rise on every green ;
 Before you pass the imaginary sights
 Of lords, and earls, and dukes, and garter'd knights,
 While the spread fan o'ershades your closing eyes ;
 Then give one flirt, and all the vision flies.

Thus vanish sceptres, coronets, and balls,
 And leave you in lone woods, or empty walls !

So when your slave, at some dear idle time,
 Not plagued with headaches, or the want of rhyme,
 Stands in the streets, abstracted from the crew,
 And while he seems to study, thinks of you ;
 Just when his fancy paints your sprightly eyes,
 Or sees the blush of soft Parthenia rise,
 Gay pats my shoulder, and you vanish quite,
 Streets, chairs, and coxcombs, rush upon my sight,
 Vex'd to be still in town I knit my brow,
 Look sour, and hum a tune, as you may now.

THE BASSET-TABLE,
AN ECLOGUE.

CARDELIA. SMILINDA.

CARDELIA.

THE basset-table spread, the tallier come ;
Why stays Smilinda in the dressing-room ?
Rise, pensive nymph ; the tallier waits for you.

SMILINDA.

Ah, madam, since my Sharper is untrue,
joyless make my once adored alphiw.
I saw him stand behind Ombrelia's chair,
And whisper with that soft deluding air,
And those feign'd sighs which cheat the list'ning fair

CARDELIA.

Is this the cause of your romantic strains ?
A mightier grief my heavy heart sustains.
As you by love, so I by fortune cross'd ;
One, one bad deal, three septlevas have lost.

SMILINDA

Is that the grief which you compare with mine ?
With ease the smiles of fortune I resign :
Would all my gold in one bad deal were gone,
Were lovely Sharper mine, and mine alone.

CARDELIA.

A lover lost, is but a common care ;
And prudent nymphs against that change prepare :
The knave of clubs thrice lost ; oh ! who could guess
This fatal stroke, this unforeseen distress ?

SMILINDA.

See Betty Lovet ! very a-propos,
She all the cares of love and play does know :
Dear Betty shall the important point decide ;
Betty who oft the pain of each has tried :

Impartial, she shall say who suffers most,
By cards, ill-usage, or by lovers lost.

LOVET.

Tell, tell your griefs ; attentive will I stay,
Though time is precious, and I want some tea

CARDELIA.

Behold this equipage, by Mathers wrought,
With fifty guineas (a great penn'worth) bought.
See, on the tooth-pick Mars and Cupid strive ;
And both the struggling figures seem alive.
Upon the bottom shines the queen's bright face :
A myrtle foliage round the thimble-case.
Jove, Jove himself does on the scissars shine ;
The metal, and the workmanship, divine !

SMILINDA.

This snuff-box ; once the pledge of Sharper's love.
When rival beauties for the present strove ;
At Corticelli's he the raffle won ;
Then first his passion was in public shown .
Hazardia blush'd, and turn'd her head aside,
A rival's envy (all in vain) to hide.
This snuff-box,—on the hinge see brilliants shine !
This snuff-box will I stake ; the prize is mine.

CARDELIA.

Alas ! far lesser losses than I bear,
Have made a soldier sigh, a lover swear.
And, oh ! what makes the disappointment hard,
'Twas my own lord that drew the fatal card.
In complaisance I took the queen he gave ;
Though my own secret wish was for the knave
The knave won sonica, which I had chose
And the next pull, my septleva I lose.

SMILINDA.

But, ah ! what aggravates the killing smart,
The cruel thought, that stabs me to the heart ;
This cursed Umbrelia, this undoing fair,
By whose vile arts this heavy grief I bear ;

She, at whose name I shed these spiteful tears,
 She owes to me the very charms she wears.
 An awkward thing when first she came to town ;
 Her shape unfashion'd, and her face unknown :
 She was my friend ; I taught her first to spread
 Upon her sallow cheeks enlivening red :
 I introduced her to the park and plays ;
 And by my interest, Cozens made her stays.
 Ungrateful wretch, with mimic airs grown pert,
 She dares to steal my favourite lover's heart !

CARDELIA.

Wretch that I was ! how often have I swore,
 When Winnall tallied, I would punt no more !
 I know the bite, yet to my ruin run ;
 And see the folly, which I cannot shun.

SMILINDA.

How many maids have Sharper's vows deceived .
 How many cursed the moment they believed !
 Yet his known falsehoods could no warning prove .
 Ah ! what is warning to a maid in love ?

CARDELIA.

But of what marble must that breast be form'd,
 To gaze on Basset, and remain unwarm'd ?
 When kings, queens, knaves, are set in decent rank ,
 Exposed in glorious heaps the tempting bank,
 Guineas, half-guineas, all the shining train ;
 The winner's pleasure, and the loser's pain :
 In bright confusion open rouleaus lie,
 They strike the soul, and glitter in the eye.
 Fired by the sight, all reason I disdain ;
 My passions rise, and will not bear the rein.
 Look upon Basset, you who reason boast ;
 And see if reason must not there be lost.

SMILINDA.

What more than marble must that heart compose,
 Can hearken coldly to my Sharper's vows ?

Then, when he trembles ! when his blushes rise
 When awful love seems melting in his eyes !
 With eager beats his Mechlin cravat moves :
 He loves,—I whisper to myself, ' He loves !'
 Such unfeign'd passion in his looks appears,
 I lose all memory of my former fears ;
 My panting heart confesses all his charms,
 I yield at once, and sink into his arms.
 Think of that moment, you who prudence boast,
 For such a moment, prudence well were lost.

CARDELIA.

At the Groom-porter's batter'd bullies play,
 Some dukes at Marybone bowl time away.
 But who the bowl, or rattling dice compares
 To Basset's heavenly joys, and pleasing cares ?

SMILINDA.

Soft Simplicetta dotes upon a beau ;
 Prudina likes a man, and laughs at show.
 Their several graces in my Sharper meet ;
 Strong as the footman, as the master sweet.

LOVET.

Cease your contention, which has been too long,
 I grow impatient, and the tea's too strong.
 Attend, and yield to what I now decide ;
 The equipage shall grace Smilinda's side :
 The snuff-box to Cardelia I decree ;
 Now leave complaining, and begin your tea.

VERBATIM FROM BOILEAU.

Un jour, dit un auteur, &c.

ONCE (says an author, where I need not say)
 Two travellers found an oyster in their way ;
 Both fierce, both hungry, the dispute grew strong
 While, scale in hand, dame Justice pass'd along.
 Before her each with clamour pleads the laws ;
 Explain'd the matter, and would win the cause.

Dame Justice weighing long the doubtful right,
 Takes, opens, swallows it, before their sight.
 The cause of strife removed so rarely well,
 'There, take,' says Justice, 'take you each a shell .
 We thrive at Westminster on fools like you :
 'Twas a fat oyster—Live in peace—Adieu.'

---

ANSWER TO THE FOLLOWING QUES-
 TION OF MRS. HOWE.

'WHAT is prudery?'—'Tis a beldam,
 Seen with wit and beauty seldom.
 'Tis a fear that starts at shadows :
 'Tis (no, 'tis n't) like miss Meadows ;
 'Tis a virgin hard of feature,
 Old, and void of all good-nature ;
 Lean and fretful ; would seem wise ;
 Yet plays the fool before she dies.
 'Tis an ugly, envious shrew,
 That rails at dear Lepell and you.

Occasioned by some Verses of

HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM.

MUSE, 'tis enough : at length thy labour ends,
 And thou shalt live, for Buckingham commends.
 Let crowds of critics now my verse assail,
 Let Dennis write, and nameless numbers rail :
 This more than pays whole years of thankless pain,
 Time, health, and fortune, are not lost in vain.
 Sheffield approves, consenting Phœbus bends,
 And I and malice from this hour are friends.

PROLOGUE BY MR. POPE,

To a Play for Mr. Dennis's Benefit, in 1733, when he was old, blind, and in great distress, a little before his Death.

As when the hero, who in each campaign
Had braved the Goth, and many a Vandal slain,
Lay fortune-struck, a spectacle of woe !
Wept by each friend, forgiven by every foe :
Was there a generous, a reflecting mind,
But pitied Belisarius old and blind ?
Was there a chief but melted at the sight ?
A common soldier, but who clubb'd his mite ?
Such, such emotions should in Britons rise,
When press'd by want and weakness Dennis lies
Dennis, who long had warr'd with modern Huns
Their quibbles routed, and defied their puns ;
A desperate bulwark, sturdy, firm, and fierce,
Against the Gothic sons of frozen verse :
How changed from him who made the boxes groan
And shook the stage with thunder all his own !
Stood up to dash each vain pretender's hope,
Maul the French tyrant, or pull down the pope !
If there's a Briton then, true bred and born,
Who holds dragoons and wooden shoes in scorn ;
If there's a critic of distinguish'd rage ;
If there's a senior, who contemns this age ;
Let him to night his just assistance lend,
And be the critic's, Briton's, old man's friend.

PROLOGUE TO SOPHONISBA.

*By Pope and Mallet.**

WHEN earning, after the long Gothic night,
Fair, o'er the western world renew'd its light,

---

* I have been told by Savage, that of the Prologue to Sophonisba, the first part was written by Pope, who could

With arts arising, Sophonisba rose :
 The tragic muse, returning, wept her woes.
 With her the Italian scene first learn'd to glow ;
 And the first tears for her were taught to flow.
 Her charms the Gallie muses next inspired :
 Corneille himself saw, wonder'd, and was fired.

What foreign theatres with pride have shown,
 Britain, by juster title, makes her own.
 When freedom is the cause, 'tis hers to fight ;
 And hers, when freedom is the theme, to write :
 For this a British author bids again
 The heroine rise, to grace the British scene.
 Here, as in life, she breathes her genuine flame ;
 She asks what bosom has not felt the same ?
 Ask of the British youth—Is silence there ?
 She dares to ask it of the British fair.

To night our home-spun author would be true,
 At once to nature, history, and you.
 Well-pleas'd to give our neighbours due applause,
 He owns their learning, but disdains their laws.
 Not to his patient touch, or happy flame,
 'Tis to his British heart he trusts for fame.
 If France excel him in one free-born thought,
 The man, as well as poet, is in fault.

Nature ! informer of the poet's art,
 Whose force alone can raise or melt the heart,
 Thou art his guide ; each passion, every line,
 Whate'er he draws to please, must all be thine.
 Be thou his judge : in every candid breast,
 Thy silent whisper is the sacred test.

---

MACER :—A CHARACTER.

WHEN simple Macer, now of high renown,
 First sought a poet's fortune in the town,

---

not be persuaded to finish it ; and that the concluding lines were written by Mallet —Dr. Johnson.

'Twas all the ambition his high soul could feel,
 To wear red stockings, and to dine with Steele.
 Some ends of verse his betters might afford ;
 And gave the harmless fellow a good word.
 Set up with these, he ventured on the town,
 And with a borrow'd play outdid poor Crown.
 There he stopp'd short, nor since has writ a tittle,
 But has the wit to make the most of little :
 Like stunted hide-bound trees, that just have got Sufficient sap at once to bear and rot.
 Now he begs verse, and what he gets commends,
 Not of the wits his foes, but fools his friends.

So some coarse country-wench, almost decay'd,
 Trudges to town, and first turns chambermaid ;
 Awkward and supple, each devoir to pay,
 She flatters her good lady twice a-day ;
 Thought wondrous honest, though of mean degree,
 And strangely liked for her simplicity :
 In a translated suit, then tries the town,
 With borrow'd pins, and patches not her own ;
 But just endured the winter she began,
 And in four months a batter'd harridan.
 Now nothing left, but wither'd, pale, and shrunk,
 To bawd for others, and go shares with punk.

TO MR. JOHN MOORE,

Author of the celebrated Worm-Powder

How much, egregious Moore, are we Deceived by shows and forms !
 Whate'er we think, whate'er we see,
 All human kind are worms.
 Man is a very worm by birth,
 Vile, reptile, weak, and vain !
 A while he crawls upon the earth.
 Then shrinks to earth again

That woman is a worm, we find
E'er since our grandame's evil;
She first conversed with her own kind,
That ancient worm, the devil.

The learn'd themselves we book-worms name;
The blockhead is a slow-worm;
The nymph whose tail is all on flame,
Is aptly term'd a glow-worm.

The fops are painted butterflies,
That flutter for a day;
First from a worm they take their rise,
And in a worm decay.

The flatterer an earwig grows;
Thus worms suit all conditions:
Misers are muck-worms, silk-worms beaux,
And death-watches physicians.

That statesmen have the worm, is seen
By all their winding play;
Their conscience is a worm within,
That gnaws them night and day.

Ah, Moore! thy skill were well employ'd,
And greater gain would rise,
If thou couldst make the courtier void
The worm that never dies.

O learned friend of Abchurch-lane,
Who setst our entrails free;
Vain is thy art, thy powder vain,
Since worms shall eat e'en thee.

Our fate thou only canst adjourn
Some few short years, no more!
E'en Button's wits to worms shall turn,
Who maggots were before.

SONG BY A PERSON OF QUALITY

Written in the Year 1733.

FLUTTERING spread thy purple pinions,
 Gentle Cupid, o'er my heart ;
 I a slave in thy dominions ;
 Nature must give way to art.

Mild Arcadians, ever blooming,
 Nightly nodding o'er your flocks,
 See my weary days consuming,
 All beneath yon flowery rocks.

Thus the Cyprian goddess weeping,
 Mourn'd Adonis, darling youth ;
 Him the boar, in silence creeping,
 Gored with unrelenting tooth.

Cynthia, tune harmonious numbers ;
 Fair discretion, string the lyre ;
 Soothe my ever-waking slumbers :
 Bright Apollo, lend thy choir.

Gloomy Pluto, king of terrors,
 Arm'd in adamantine chains,
 Lead me to the crystal mirrors,
 Watering soft Elysian plains.

Mournful cypress, verdant willow,
 Gilding my Aurelia's brows,
 Morpheus hovering o'er my pillow,
 Hear me pay my dying vows.

Melancholy smooth Mæander,
 Swiftly purling in a round,
 On thy margin lovers wander,
 With thy flowery chaplets crown'd.

Thus when Philomela drooping,
 Softly seeks her silent mate,
 See the bird of Juno stooping :
 Melody resigns to fate.

ON A CERTAIN LADY AT COURT.

I KNOW the thing that 's most uncommon ;
 (Envy, be silent and attend !)
 I know a reasonable woman,
 Handsome and witty, yet a friend.
 Not warp'd by passion, awed by rumour,
 Not grave through pride, nor gay through folly :
 An equal mixture of good-humour,
 And sensible soft melancholy.
 ' Has she no faults, then,' Envy says, ' sir ?'
 Yes, she has one, I must aver :
 When all the world conspires to praise her,
 The woman 's deaf, and does not hear.

ON HIS GROTTO AT TWICKENHAM,

Composed of Marble, Spars, Gems, Ores, and Minerals.

THOU who shalt drop, where Thames translucent wave
 Shines a broad mirror through the shadowy cave ;
 Where lingering drops from mineral roofs distil,
 And pointed crystals break the sparkling rill,
 Unpolish'd gems no ray on pride bestow,
 And latent metals innocently glow :
 Approach. Great Nature studiously behold !
 And eye the mine, without a wish for gold.
 Approach ; but awful ! lo ! the Ægerian grot,
 Where, nobly pensive, St. John sat and thought ;
 Where British sighs from dying Wyndham stole,
 And the bright flame was shot through Marchmont's
 Let such, such only, tread this sacred floor, [soul
 Who dare to love their country, and the poor.

TO MRS. M. B. ON HER BIRTH-DAY.

OH, be thou bless'd with all that Heaven can send,
 Long health, long youth, long pleasure, and a friend
 Not with those toys the female world admire,
 Riches that vex, and vanities that tire.
 With added years, if life bring nothing new,
 But like a sieve let every blessing through,
 Some joy still lost, as each vain year runs o'er,
 And all we gain, some sad reflection more ;
 Is that a birth day ? 'tis, alas ! too clear,
 'Tis but the funeral of the former year.

Let joy or ease, let affluence or content,
 And the gay conscience of a life well spent,
 Calm every thought, inspirit every grace,
 Glow in thy heart, and smile upon thy face.
 Let day improve on day, and year on year,
 Without a pain, a trouble, or a fear ;
 Till death unfelt that tender frame destroy,
 In some soft dream, or ecstasy of joy.
 Peaceful sleep out the sabbath of the tomb,
 And wake to raptures in a life to come.

TO MR. THOMAS SOUTHERN,

On his Birth-day, 1742.

RESIGN'D to live, prepared to die,
 With not one sin but poetry,
 This day Tom's fair account has run
 (Without a blot) to eighty-one.
 Kind Boyle, before his poet, lays
 A table, with a cloth of bays ;
 And Ireland, mother of sweet singers,
 Presents her harp still to his fingers.
 The feast, his towering genius marks
 In yonder wild-goose and the larks !
 The mushrooms show his wit was sudden !
 And for his judgment, lo ! a pudden !

Roast beef, though old, proclaims him stout,
 And grace, although a bard, devout.
 May Tom, whom heaven sent down to raise
 The price of prologues and of plays,
 Be every birth-day more a winner,
 Digest his thirty thousandth dinner ;
 Walk to his grave without reproach,
 And scorn a rascal and a coach.

TO LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGUE.*

In beauty or wit,
 No mortal as yet,
 To question your empire has dared ;
 But men of discerning
 Have thought that in learning,
 To yield to a lady was hard.

Impertinent schools,
 With musty dull rules,
 Have reading to females denied :
 So papists refuse
 The Bible to use,
 Lest flocks should be wise as their guide.

'Twas a woman at first
 (Indeed she was cursed)
 In knowledge that tasted delight,
 And sages agree
 That laws should decree
 To the first of possessors the right.

---

* This panegyric on Lady Mary Wortley Montague might have been suppressed by Mr. Pope, on account of her having satirized him in her verses to the imitator of Horace ; which abuse he returned in the first satire of the second book of Horace.

From furious Sappho, scarce a milder fate,
 P—d by her love, or libell'd by her hate.

Then bravely, fair dame,
 Resume the old claim,
 Which to your whole sex does belong ;
 And let men receive,
 From a second bright Eve,
 The knowledge of right and of wrong.
 But if the first Eve,
 Hard doom did receive,
 When only one apple had she,
 What a punishment new
 Shall be found out for you,
 Who tasting, have robb'd the whole tree !

EPIGRAM ON MRS. TOFTS,

*A handsome Woman with a fine Voice, but very covetous and proud.**

So bright is thy beauty, so charming thy song,
As had drawn both the beasts and their Orpheus along
But such is thy avarice and such is thy pride,
That the beasts must have starved, and the poet have died.

EPIGRAM,

FRIEND, for your epitaphs I'm grieved;
Where still so much is said,
One half will never be believed,
The other never read.

On his painting for me the Statues of Apollo, Venus, and Hercules.

WHAT god, what genius, did the pencil move
When Kneller painted these?
'Twas Friendship—warm as Phæbus, kind as Love,
And strong as Hercules.

* This epigram, first printed anonymously in Steele's Collection, and copied in the Miscellanies of Swift and Pope, is ascribed to Pope by sir John Hawkins, in his History of Music—Mrs. Tofts, who was the daughter of a person in the family of Bishop Burnet, is celebrated as a singer little inferior, either for her voice or manner to the best Italian women. She lived at the introduction of the opera into this kingdom, and sung in company with Nicolini; but, being ignorant of Italian, chanted her recitative in English, in answer to his Italian; yet the charms of their voices overcame the absurdity.

† It is not generally known that the person here meant was Dr. Robert Friend, head master of Westminster-school

A FAREWELL TO LONDON.

In the Year 1715.

DEAR, damn'd distracting town, farewell!

Thy fools no more I'll tease:
This year in peace, ye critics, dwell,
Ye harlots, sleep at ease.

Soft B*** and rough C****, adieu!
Earl Warwick make your moan,
The lively H*****k and you
May knock up whores alone.

To drink and droll be Rowe allow'd
Till the third watchman toll;
Let Jervis gratis paint, and Frowde
Save three-pence and his soul.

Farewell Arbuthnot's raillery
On every learned sot,
And Garth, the best good christian he,
Although he knows it not.

Lintot, farewell; thy bard must go!
Farewell, unhappy Tonson!
Heaven gives thee, for thy loss of Rowe,
Lean Philips, and fat Johnson.

Why should I stay? Both parties rage;
My vixen mistress squalls;
The wits in envious feuds engage;
And Homer (damn him!) calls.

The love of arts lies cold and dead
In Halifax's urn;
And not one Muse of all he fed,
Has yet the grace to mourn.

My friends, by turns, my friends confound,
Betray, and are betray'd:
Poor Y***r's sold for fifty pound,
And B*****ll is a jade.

Why make I friendships with the great,
 When I no favour seek?
 Or follow girls seven hours in eight?—
 I need but once a week.

Still idle, with a busy air,
 Deep whimsies to contrive;
 The gayest valetudinaire,
 Most thinking rake alive.

Solicitous for others' ends,
 Though fond of dear repose;
 Careless or drowsy with my friends,
 And frolic with my foes.

Luxurious lobster-nights, farewell,
 For sober, studious days!
 And Burlington's delicious meal,
 For salads, tarts, and pease!

Adieu to all but Gay alone,
 Whose soul sincere and free,
 Loves all mankind, but flatters none,
 And so may starve with me.

A DIALOGUE.

Pope. SINCE my old friend is grown so great
 As to be minister of state,
 I'm told (but 'tis not true I hope)
 That Craggs will be ashamed of Pope.

Craggs. Alas! if I am such a creature,
 To grow the worse for growing greater,
 Why, faith, in spite of all my brags,
 'Tis Pope must be ashamed of Craggs.

A FRAGMENT.

WHAT are the falling rills, the pendent shades,
The morning bowers, the evening colonnades,
But soft recesses for the uneasy mind
To sigh unheard in, to the passing wind !
So the struck deer, in some sequester'd part,
Lies down to die (the arrow in his heart ;)
There hid in shades, and wasting day by day,
Inly he bleeds, and pants his soul away.

VERSES LEFT BY MR. POPE,

On his lying in the same Bed which Wilmot the celebrated Earl of Rochester slept in, at Adderbury, then belonging to the Duke of Argyle, July 9th, 1739.

WITH no poetic ardour fired
 I press'd the bed where Wilmot lay ;
 That here he loved, or here expired,
 Begets no numbers grave or gay.

But in thy roof, Argyle, are bred
 Such thoughts as prompt the brave to lie ;
 Stretch'd out in honour's noble bed,
 Beneath a nobler roof—the sky.

Such flames as high in patriots burn,
 Yet stoop to bless a child or wife ;
 And such as wicked kings may mourn,
 When freedom is more dear than life

VERSES TO MR. C.

St. James's Place, London, October 22.

Few words are best ; I wish you well ;
 Bethel, I'm told, will soon be here :
 Some morning-walks along the Mall,
 And evening friends, will end the year.

If, in this interval, between
 The falling leaf and coming frost,
 You please to see, on Twit'nam green,
 Your friend, your poet, and your host ;

For three whole days you here may rest,
 From office, business, news, and strife
 And (what most folks would think a jest
 Want nothing else, except your wife.

DORSET, the grace of courts, the Muses' pride,
Patron of arts, and judge of nature, died.
The scourge of pride, though sanctified or great,
Of fops in learning, and of knaves in state :
Yet soft his nature, though severe his lay ;
His anger moral, and his wisdom gay.

ON BUTLER'S MONUMENT.

Perhaps by Mr Pope.<sup>2</sup>

RESPECT to Dryden, Sheffield justly paid,
And noble Villers honour'd Cowley's shade:
But whence this Barber?—that a name so mean
Should, join'd with Butler's, on a tomb be seen :
This pyramid would better far proclaim,
To future ages humbler Settle's name :
Poet and patron then had been well pair'd,
The city printer, and the city bard.

'Thus Britain loved me; and preserved my fame,
Clear from a Barber's or a Benson's name.'—A. POPE

Pope might probably have suppressed his satire on the alderman, because he was one of Swift's acquaintances and correspondents; though in the fourth book of the Dunciad he has an anonymous stroke at him:

'So by each bard an alderman shall sit,
A heavy lord shall hang at every wit.'

THE DUNCIAD,

IN FOUR BOOKS;

With the Prolegomena of Scriblerus, the Hypercritics of Aristarchus, and Notes Variorum.

---

A LETTER TO THE PUBLISHER,

Occasioned by the first correct Edition of the Dunciad.

It is with pleasure I hear that you have procured a correct copy of the Dunciad, which the many surreptitious ones have rendered so necessary; and it is yet with more, that I am informed it will be attended with a Commentary: a work so requisite, that I cannot think the author himself could have omitted it, had he approved of the first appearance of this poem.

Such notes as have occurred to me I herewith send you: you will oblige me by inserting them amongst those which are, or will be, transmitted to you by others; since not only the author's friends, but even strangers, appear engaged by humanity, to take some care of an orphan of so much genius and spirit, which its parent seems to have abandoned from the very beginning, and suffered to step into the world naked, unguarded, and unattended.

It was upon reading some of the abusive papers lately published, that my great regard to a person, whose friendship I esteem as one of the chief honours of my life, and a much greater respect to truth than to him or any man living, engaged me in inquiries, of which the inclosed notes are the fruit.

I perceive that most of these authors had been (doubtless very wisely) the first aggressors. They had tried, till they were weary, what was to be got by railing at each other: nobody was either concerned or surprised, if this or that scribbler was proved a dunce. But every one was curious to read what could be said to prove Mr. Pope one, and was ready to pay something for such a discovery: a stratagem which, would they fairly own it, might not only reconcile them to me, but screen them from the resentment of their lawful superiors, whom they daily abuse, only (as I charitably hope) to get that by them, which they cannot get from them.

I found this was not all ill success in that had transported them to personal abuse, either of himself or (what I think he could less forgive) of his friends. They had called men of virtue and honour bad men, long before he had either leisure or inclination to call them bad writers; and some had been such old offenders, that he had quite forgotten their persons as well as their slanders, till they were pleased to revive them.

Now what had Mr. Pope done before, to incense them? He had published those works which are in the hands of every body, in which not the least mention is made of any of them. And what has he done since? He has laughed, and written the Dunciad. What has that said of them? A very serious truth, which the public had said before, that they were dull; and what it had no sooner said, but they themselves were at great pains to procure, or even purchase, room in the prints, to testify under their hands the truth of it.

I should still have been silent, if either I had seen any inclination in my friend to be serious with such accusers, or if they had only meddled with his writings; since whoever publishes, puts himself on his trial by his country:—but when his moral character was attacked, and in a manner from which neither truth nor virtue can secure the most innocent; in a manner, which, though it annihilates the credit of the accusation with the just and impartial, yet ag gravates very much the guilt of the accusers : I mean by authors without names : then I thought, since the danger was common to all, the concern ought to be so ; and that it was an act of justice to detect the authors, not only on this account, but as many of them are the same who for several years past have made free with the greatest names in church and state, exposed to the world the private misfortunes of families, abused all, even to women, and whose prostituted papers (for one or other party, in the unhappy division of their country) have insulted the fallen, the friendless, the exiled, and the dead.

Besides this, which I take to be a public concern, I have already confessed I had a private one. I am one of that number who have long loved and esteemed Mr. Pope ; and had often declared it was not his capacity or writings (which we ever thought the least valuable part of his character,) but the honest, open, and beneficent man, that we most esteemed and loved in him. Now, if what these people say were believed, I must appear to all my friends either a fool or a knave ; either imposed on myself, or imposing on them : so that I am as much interested in the confutation of these calumnies as he is himself.

I am no author, and consequently not to be suspected either of jealousy or resentment against any of the men, of whom scarce one is known to me by sight ; and as for their writings, I have sought them (on this one occasion) in vain, in the closets and libraries of all my acquaintance. I had still been in the dark, if a gentleman had not procured me (I suppose from some of themselves, for they are generally much more dangerous friends than enemies) the passages I send you. I solemnly protest I have added nothing to the malice or absurdity of them ; which it behoves me to declare, since the vouchers themselves will be so soon and irrecoverably lost. You may in some measure prevent it, by preserving at least their titles, and discovering (as far as you can depend on the truth of your information) the names of the concealed authors.

The first objection I have heard made to the poem is, that the persons are too obscure for satire. The persons themselves, rather than allow the objection, would forgive the satire; and if one could be tempted to afford it a serious answer, were not all assassinations, popular insurrections, the insolence of the rabble without doors, and of domestics within, most wrongfully chastised, if the meanness of offenders indemnified them from punishment? On the contrary, obscurity renders them more dangerous, as less thought of: law can pronounce judgment only on open facts: morality alone can pass censure on intentions of mischief; so that for secret calumny, or the arrow flying in the dark, there is no public punishment left, but what a good writer inflicts.

The next objection is, that these sort of authors are poor. That might be pleaded as an excuse at the Old Bailey, for lesser crimes than defamation, (for it is the case of almost all who are tried there,) but sure it can be none here; for who will pretend that the robbing another of his reputation, supplies the want of it in himself? I question not but such authors are poor, and heartily wish the objection were removed by any honest livelihood. But poverty is here the accident, not the subject: he who describes malice and villany to be pale and meagre, expresses not the least anger against paleness or leanness, but against malice and villany. The Apothecary in Romeo and Juliet is poor; but is he therefore justified in vending poison? Not but poverty itself becomes a just subject of satire, when it is the consequence of vice, prodigality, or neglect of one's lawful callings; for then it increases the public burthen, fills the streets and highways with robbers, and the garrets with clippers, coiners, and weekly journalists.

But admitting that two or three of these offenders in their morals than in their writings: must poverty make nonsense sacred? If so, the fame of bad authors would be much better consulted than that of all the good ones in the world; and not one of a hundred had ever been called by his right name.

They mistake the whole matter: it is not charity to encourage them in the way they follow, but to get them out of it; for men are not bunglers because they are poor, but they are poor because they are bunglers.

Is it not pleasant enough to hear our authors crying out on the one hand, as if their persons and characters were too sacred for satire; and the public objecting on the other, that they are too mean even for ridicule? But whether bread or fame be their end, it must be allowed, our author, by and in this poem, has mercifully given them a little of both.

There are two or three, who by their rank and fortune have no benefit from the former objections, supposing them good; and these I was sorry to see in such company. But if, without any provocation, two or three gentlemen will fall upon one, in an affair wherein his interest and reputation are equally embarked; they cannot certainly, after they have been content to print themselves his enemies, complain of being put into the number of them.

Others, I am told, pretend to have been once his friends. Surely, they are their enemies who say so; since nothing can be more odious than to treat a friend as they have done. But of this I cannot persuade myself, when I consider the constant and eternal aversion of all bad writers to a good one.

Such as claim merit from being his admirers, I would gladly ask if it lays him under a personal obligation? At that rate he would be the most obliged humble servant in the world. I dare swear for these in particular, he never desired them to be his admirers, nor promised in return to be theirs: that had truly been a sign he was of their acquaintance: but would not the malicious world have suspected such an approbation of some motive worse than ignorance in the author of the Essay on Criticism? Be it as it will, the reasons of their admiration and of his contempt are equally subsisting; for his works and theirs are the very same that they were.

One, therefore, of their assertions I believe may be true, 'That he has a contempt for their writings.' And there is another which would probably be sooner allowed by himself than by any good judge beside, 'That his own have found too much success with the public.' But as it cannot consist with his modesty to claim this as a justice, it lies not on him, but entirely on the public, to defend its own judgment.

There remains what, in my opinion, might seem a better plea for these people, than any they have made use of. If obscurity or poverty were to exempt a man from satire, much more should folly or dulness, which are still more involuntary; nay, as much so as personal deformity. But even this will not help them: deformity becomes an object of ridicule when a man sets up for being handsome; and so must dulness, when he sets up for a wit. They are not ridiculed, because ridicule in itself is, or ought to be, a pleasure; but because it is just to undeceive and vindicate the honest and unpretending part of mankind from imposition, because particular interest ought to yield to general, and a great number who are not naturally fools, ought never to be made so, in complaisance to a few who are. Accordingly we find, that, in all ages, all vain pretenders, were they ever so poor, or ever so dull, have been constantly the topics of the most candid satirists, from the Codrus of Juvenal to the Damon of Boileau.

Having mentioned Boileau, the greatest poet and most judicious critic of his age and country, admirable for his talents, and yet perhaps more admirable for his judgment in the proper application of them, I cannot help remarking the resemblance betwixt him and our author, in qualities, fame, and fortune: in the distinction shown them by their superiors, in the general esteem of their equals, and in their extended reputation amongst foreigners; in the latter of which ours has met with a better fate, as he has had for his translators persons of the most eminent rank and abilities in their respective nations.<sup>1</sup> But the resemblance holds in nothing more, than in their being equally abused by the ignorant pretenders to poetry of their times, of which not the least memory will remain but in their own writings, and in the notes made upon them. What Boileau has done in almost all his poems, our author has only in this: I dare answer for him he will do it no more; and on this principle, of attacking few but who had slandered him, he could not have done it at all, had he been confined from censuring obscure and worthless persons, for scarce any other were his enemies. However, as the parity is so remarkable, I hope it will continue to the last; and if ever he should give us an edition of this poem himself, I may see some of them treated as gently, on their repentance or better merit, as Perault and Quinault were at last by Boileau.

In one point I must be allowed to think the charac-

er of our English poet the more amiable. He has not been a follower of fortune or success; he has lived with the great without flattery; been a friend to men in power without pensions, from whom, as he asked, so he received, no favour, but what was done him in his friends. As his satires were the more just for being delayed, so were his panegyrics; bestowed only on such persons as he had familiarly known, only for such virtues as he had long observed in them, and only at such times as others cease to praise, if not begin to calumniate them; I mean when out of power or out of fashion.<sup>1</sup> A satire, therefore, on writers so notorious for the contrary practice, became no man so well as himself; as none, it is plain, was so little in their friendships, or so much in that of those whom they had most abused, namely, the greatest and best of all parties. Let me add a further reason, that, though engaged in their friendships, he never espoused their animosities; and can almost singly challenge this honour, not to have written a line of any man, which, through guilt, through shame, or through fear, through variety of fortune, or change of interests, he was ever unwilling to own.

I shall conclude with remarking, what a pleasure it must be to every reader of humanity, to see all along, that our author, in his very laughter, is not indulging his own ill-nature, but only punishing that of others. As to his poem, those alone are capable of doing it justice, who, to use the words of a great writer, know how hard it is (with regard both to his

TO THE DUNCIAD:

With the Hypercritics of Aristarchus.

Dennis's Remarks on Prince Arthur.

I CANNOT but think it the most reasonable thing in the world, to distinguish good writers, by discouraging the bad. Nor is it an ill-natured thing, in relation even to the very persons upon whom the reflections are made. It is true, it may deprive them a little sooner of a short profit and a transitory reputation; but then it may have a good effect, and oblige them (before it be too late) to decline that for which they are so very unfit, and to have recourse to something in which they may be more successful.

The persons whom Boileau has attacked in his writings have been for the most part authors, and most of those authors, poets: and the censures he hath passed upon them have been confirmed by all Europe.

Gildon, Preface to his New Rehearsal.

It is the common cry of the poetasters of the town, and their fautors, that it is an ill-natured thing to expose the pretenders to wit and poetry. The judges and magistrates may with full as good reason be reproached with ill-nature for putting the laws in execution against a thief or impostor.—The same will hold in the republic of letters, if the critics and judges will let every ignorant pretender to scribbling pass on the world.

Theobald, Letter to Mist, June 22, 1728.

Attacks may be levelled, either against failures in genius, or against the pretensions of writing without one.

Concanen, Dedication to the Author of the Dunciad.

A satire upon dulness is a thing that has been used and allowed in all ages.

Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, wicked scribbler!

TESTIMONIES OF AUTHORS

Concerning our Poet and his Works.

M. Scriblerus Lectori S.

BEFORE we present thee with our exertions on this most delectable poem (drawn from the many volumes of our adversaria on modern authors) we shall here, according to the laudable usage of editors, collect the various judgments of the learned concerning our poet; various indeed, not only of different authors, but of the same author at different seasons. Nor shall we gather only the testimonies of such eminent wits as would of course descend to posterity.

and consequently be read without our collection ; but we shall likewise, with incredible labour, seek out for divers others, which, but for this our diligence, could never at the distance of a few months appear to the eye of the most curious. Hereby thou mayest not only receive the delectation of variety, but also arrive at a more certain judgment by a grave and circumspect comparison of the witnesses with each other, or of each with himself. Hence also thou mayest be enabled to draw reflections, not only of a critical, but a moral nature, by being let into many particulars of the person as well as genius, and of fortune as well as merit of our author : in which, if I relate some things of little concern peradventure to thee, and some of as little even to him, I entreat thee to consider how minutely all true critics and commentators are wont to insist upon such, and how material they seem to themselves, if to none other. Forgive me, gentle reader, if (following learned example) I ever and anon become tedious : allow me to take the same pains to find whether my author were good or bad, well or ill-natured, modest or arrogant ; as another, whether his author was fair or brown, short or tall, or whether he wore a coat or a cassock.

We proposed to begin with his life, parentage, and education : but as to these, even his contemporaries do exceedingly differ. One saith,<sup>1</sup> he was educated at home ; another,<sup>2</sup> that he was bred at St. Omer's by Jesuits ; a third,<sup>3</sup> not at St. Omer's, but at Oxford ! a fourth,<sup>4</sup> that he had no university education at all. Those who allow him to be bred at home, differ as much concerning his tutor. One saith,<sup>5</sup> he was kept by his father on purpose ; a second,<sup>6</sup> that he was an itinerant priest; a third,<sup>7</sup> that he was a parson; one calleth him a secular clergyman of the church of Rome; another,<sup>9</sup> a monk. As little do they agree about his father, whom one<sup>10</sup> supposeth, like the father of Hesiod, a tradesman or merchant; another,<sup>11</sup> a husbandman; another,<sup>12</sup> a hatter, &c. Nor has an author been wanting to give our poet such a father as Apuleius hath to Plato, Jamblichus to Pythagoras, and divers to Homer, viz. a demon: for thus Mr Gildon:—<sup>13</sup>

‘Certain it is, that his original is not from Adam but the devil; and that he wanteth nothing but horns and tail to be the exact resemblance of his infernal father.’ Finding, therefore, such contrariety of opinions, and (whatever be ours of this sort of generation) not being fond to enter into controversy, we shall defer writing the life of our poet, till authors can determine among themselves what parents or education he had, or whether he had any education or parents at all.

Proceed we to what is more certain, his Works, though not less uncertain the judgments concerning them; beginning with his Essay on Criticism, of which hear first the most ancient of critics,

‘His precepts are false or trivial, or both; his thoughts are crude and abortive, his expressions ab-

Dodd,) in the 10th page, declared Gildon to be the author of that libel; though in the subsequent editions of his Key he left out this assertion, and affirmed (in the Curliad, p. 4 and 8) that it was written by Dennis only.

rd, his numbers harsh and unmusical, his rhymes rival and common;—instead of majesty, we have something that is very mean; instead of gravity, something that is very boyish; and instead of perspicuity and lucid order, we have but too often obscurity and confusion.' And in another place—'What rare numbers are here! Would not one swear that this youngster had espoused some antiquated muse, who had sued out a divorce from some superannuated sinner, upon account of impotence, and who, being poxed by the former spouse, has got the gout in her decrepid age, which makes her hobble so damably.'<sup>1</sup>

No less peremptory is the censure of our hypercritical historian

Mr. Oldmixon.

'I dare not say any thing on the Essay on Criticism in verse; but if any more curious reader has discovered in it something new which is not in Dryden's prefaces, dedications, and his essay on dramatic poetry not to mention the French critics, I should be very glad to have the benefit of the discovery.'<sup>2</sup>

He is followed (as in fame, so in judgment) by the modest and simple-minded

Mr. Leonard Welsted;

who, out of great respect to our poet, not naming him, doth yet glance at his Essay, together with the duke of Buckingham's, and the criticisms of Dryden and of Horace, which he more openly taxeth:<sup>3</sup> 'As to the numerous treatises, essays, arts, &c., both in verse and prose, that have been written by the moderns on this ground-work, they do but hackney the same thoughts over again, making them still more trite. Most of their pieces are nothing but a pert, insipid heap of common-place. Horace has, even in his Art of Poetry, thrown out several things which plainly show, he thought an art of poetry was of no use, even while he was writing one.'

To all which great authorities, we can only oppose that of

Mr. Addison.

'The Essay on Criticism,' saith he, 'which was published some months since, is a master-piece in its kind. The observations follow one another like those in Horace's Art of Poetry, without that methodical regularity which would have been requisite in a prose writer. They are some of them uncommon, but such as the reader must assent to, when he sees them explained with that ease and perspicuity in which they are delivered. As for those which are the most known and the most received, they are placed in so beautiful a light, and illustrated with such apt allusions, that they have in them all the graces of novelty; and make the reader, who was before acquainted with them, still more convinced of their truth and solidity. And here give me leave to mention what Monsieur Boileau has so well enlarged upon in the preface to his works: that wit and fine writing doth not consist so much in advancing things that are new, as in giving things that are known an agreeable turn. It is impossible for us, who live in the latter ages of the world, to make observations in criticism, morality, or any art or science, which have not been touched upon by others; we have little else left us, but to represent the common sense of mankind in more strong, more beautiful, or more uncommon lights. If a reader examines Horace's Art of Poetry, he will find but few precepts in it which he may not meet with in Aristotle, and which were not commonly known by all the poets of the Augustan age. His way of expressing, and applying them, not his invention of them, is what we are chiefly to admire.

‘Longinus, in his Reflections, has given us the same kind of sublime, which he observes in the several passages that occasioned them: I cannot but take notice that our English author has, after the same manner, exemplified several of the precepts in the very precepts themselves.’<sup>1</sup> He then produces some instances of a particular beauty in the numbers, and concludes with saying, that ‘there are three poems in our tongue of the same nature, and each a masterpiece in its kind! the Essay on Translated Verse; the Essay on the Art of Poetry; and the Essay on Criticism.’

Of Windsor Forest, positive is the judgment of the affirmative

Mr. John Dennis,

That it is a wretched rhapsody, impudently writ in emulation of the Cooper’s Hill of sir John Denham: the author of it is obscure, is ambiguous, is affected, is temerarious, is barbarous!<sup>2</sup>

But the author of the Dispensary,<sup>3</sup>

Dr. Garth,

in the preface to his poem of Claremont, differs from this opinion: ‘Those who have seen these two excellent poems of Cooper’s Hill, and Windsor Forest, the one written by sir John Denham, the other by Mr. Pope, will show a great deal of candour if they approve of this.’

Of the Epistle of Eloïsa, we are told by the obscure writer of a poem called Sawney, ‘That because Prior’s Henry and Emma charmed the finest tastes, our author writ his Eloïsa in opposition to it; but forgot innocence and virtue. If you take away her tender thoughts, and her fierce desires, all the rest is of no value.' In which, methinks, his judgment resembleth that of a French tailor on a villa and garden by the Thames: 'All this is very fine; but take away the river, and it is good for nothing.'

But very contrary hereunto was the opinion of himself, saying in his Alma.<sup>1</sup>

Mr. Prior,

'O Abelard! ill-fated youth,
Thy tale will justify this truth:
But well I weet, thy cruel wrong
Adorns a nobler poet's song:
Dan Pope, for thy misfortune grieved,
With kind concern and skill has weaved
A silken web; and ne'er shall fade
Its colours; gently has he laid
The mantle o'er thy sad distress,
And Venus shall the texture bless,' &c.

Come we now to his translation of the Iliad, celebrated by numerous pens; yet shall it suffice to mention the indefatigable

Sir Richard Blackmore, Knt.

who (though otherwise a severe censurer of our author) yet styleth this a 'laudable translation.' That<sup>2</sup> ready writer

Mr. Oldmixon,

in his forementioned Essay, frequently commends the same. And the painful

Mr. Lewis Theobald

thus extols it,<sup>3</sup> 'The spirit of Homer breathes all through this translation.—I am in doubt, whether I should most admire the justness to the original, or the force and beauty of the language, or the sounding variety of the numbers: but when I find all these meet, it puts me in mind of what the poet says of one of his heroes, 'That he alone raised and flung with ease a weighty stone, that two common men could not lift from the ground; just so, one single person has performed in this translation, what I once despaired to have seen done by the force of several masterly hands.' Indeed the same gentleman appears to have changed his sentiment in his Essay on the Art of Sinking in Reputation, (printed in Mist's Journal, March 30, 1728,) where he says thus: 'In order to sink in reputation, let him take it into his head to descend into Homer (let the world wonder, as it will, now the devil he got there,) and pretend to do him into English, so his version denote his neglect of the manner how.' Strange variation! We are told in

Mist's Journal, (June 8,)

'That this translation of the Iliad was not in all respects conformable to the fine taste of his friend Mr Addison; insomuch that he employed a younger muse in an undertaking of this kind, which he supervised himself.' Whether Mr. Addison did find it conformable to his taste, or not, best appears from his own testimony the year following its publication, in these words:

Mr. Addison's Freeholder, No. 40.

When I consider myself a British freeholder, I am in a particular manner pleased with the labours of those who have improved our language with the translations of old Greek and Latin authors.— We have already most of their historians in our own tongue, and, what is more for the honour of our language, it has been taught to express with elegance the greatest of their poets in each nation. The illiterate among our own countrymen may learn to judge from Dryden's Virgil, of the most perfect epical performance. * And those parts of Homer which have been published already by Mr. Pope, gives us reason to think that the Iliad will appear in English with as little disadvantage to that immortal poem.'

As to the rest, there is a slight mistake; for this younger muse was an elder; nor was the gentleman (who is a friend of our author) employed by Mr. Addison to translate it after him, since he saith himself that he did it before.<sup>1</sup> Contrariwise, that Mr. Addison engaged our author in this work appeareth by declaration thereof in the preface to the Iliad, printed some time before his death, and by his own letters of October 26, and November 2, 1713, where he declares it is his opinion that no other person was equal to it.

Next comes his Shakspeare on the stage: 'Let him (quoth one, whom I take to be

Mr. Theobald, Mist's Journal, June 8, 1728,)

publish such an author as he has least studied, and forget to discharge even the dull duty of an editor. In this project let him lend the bookseller his name (for a competent sum of money) to promote the credit of an exorbitant subscription.' Gentle reader, be pleased to cast thine eye on the proposal below quoted, and on what follows (some months after the former assertion) in the same Journalist of June 8: 'The bookseller proposed the book by subscription, and raised some thousands of pounds for the same: I believe the gentleman did not share in the profits of this extravagant subscription.'

'After the Iliad, he undertook (saith

Mist's Journal, June 8, 1728,)

the sequel of that work, the Odyssey; and having secured the success by a numerous subscription, he employed some underlings to perform what, according to his proposals, should come from his own hands.'

<sup>1</sup> Vid. Pref. to Mr. Tickell's translation of the first book of the Iliad, 4to.

To which heavy charge we can in truth oppose nothing but the words of

Mr. Pope's Proposal for the Odyssey, (printed by J. Watts, Jan. 10, 1724:)

'I take this occasion to declare that the subscription for Shakspeare belongs wholly to Mr. Tonson: and that the benefit of this proposal is not solely for my own use, but for that of two of my friends, who have assisted me in this work.' But these very gentlemen are extolled above our poet himself in another of Mist's Journals, March 30, 1728, saying, 'That he would not advise Mr. Pope to try the experiment again of getting a great part of a book done by assistants, lest those extraneous parts should unhappily ascend to the sublime, and retard the declension of the whole.' Behold! these underlings are become good writers!

If any say, that before the said Proposals were printed, the subscription was begun without declaration of such assistance; verily those who set it on foot, or (as the term is) secured it, to wit, the right honourable the lord viscount Harcourt, were he living, would testify, and the right honourable the lord Bathurst, now living, doth testify, the same is a falsehood.

Sorry I am, that persons professing to be learned, or of whatever rank of authors, should either falsely tax, or be falsely taxed. Yet let us, who are only reporters, be impartial in our citations, and proceed.

Mist's Journal, June 8, 1728.

'Mr. Addison raised this author from obscurity, obtained him the acquaintance and friendship of the whole body of our nobility, and transferred his powerful interests with those great men to this rising bard, who frequently levied by that means unusual contributions on the public.' Which surely cannot be, if, as the author of the Dunciad Dissected report-eth, Mr. Wycherley had before 'introduced him into a familiar acquaintance with the greatest peers and brightest wits then living.'

'No sooner (saith the same journalst) was his body lifeless, but this author, reviving his resentment, libelled the memory of his departed friend; and what was still more heinous, made the scandal public.' Grievous the accusation! unknown the accuser! the person accused no witness in his own cause; the person, in whose regard accused, dead! But if there be living any one nobleman whose friendship, yea any one gentleman whose subscription Mr. Addison procured to our author, let him stand forth, that truth may appear! Amicus Plato, amicus Socrates, sed magis amica veritas. In verity, the whole story of the libel is a lie; witness those persons of integrity, who several years before Mr. Addison's decease, did see and approve of the said verses, in no wise a libel, but a friendly rebuke sent privately in our author's own hand to Mr. Addison himself, and never made public, till after their own Journals, and Curll had printed the same. One name alone, which I am here authorized to declare, will sufficiently evince this truth, that of the right honourable the earl of Burlington.

Next is he taxed with a crime (in the opinion of some authors, I doubt, more heinous than any in morality,) to wit, plagiarism, from the inventive and quaint-conceited

James Moore Smith, Gent.

'Upon reading the third volume of Pope's Miscellanies, I found five lines which I thought excellent; and happening to praise them, a gentleman produced a modern comedy (the Rival Modes) published last year, where were the same verses to a tittle.

'These gentlemen are undoubtedly the first plagiarists, that pretend to make a reputation by stealing from a man's works in his own life-time, and out of a public print.<sup>1</sup> Let us join to this what is written by the author of the Rival Modes, the said Mr. James Moore Smith, in a letter to our author himself, who had informed him a month before that play was acted, Jan. 27, 1726-7, that, 'These verses, which he had before given him leave to insert in it, would be known for his, some copies being got abroad. He desires, nevertheless, that since the lines had been read in his comedy to several, Mr. P. would not deprive it of them,' &c. Surely, if we add the testimonies of the lord Bolingbroke, of the lady to whom the said verses were originally addressed, of Hugh Bethel, esq. and others, who knew them as our author's long before the said gentleman composed his play, it is hoped, the ingenuous, that affect not error will rectify their opinion by the suffrage of so honourable personages.

And yet followeth another charge, insinuating no less than his enmity both to church and state, which could come from no other informer than the said

Mr. James Moore Smith.

'The Memoirs of a Parish Clerk was a very dull and unjust abuse of a person who wrote in defence of our religion and constitution, and who has been dead many years.'<sup>2</sup> This seemeth also most untrue; it being known to divers that these memoirs were written at the seat of the lord Harcourt, in Oxfordshire, before that excellent person (bishop Burnet's) death, and many years before the appearance of that history, of which they are pretended to be an abuse. Most true it is, that Mr. Moore had such a design, and was himself the man who pressed Dr. Arbuthnot and Mr. Pope to assist him therein; and that he borrowed those memoirs of our author, when that history came forth, with intent to turn them to such abuse

But being able to obtain from our author but one single hint, and either changing his mind, or having more mind than ability, he contented himself to keep the said memoirs, and read them as his own to all his acquaintance. A noble person there is, into whose company Mr. Pope once chanced to introduce him, who well remembereth the conversation of Mr. Moore to have turned upon the 'contempt he had for the work of that reverend prelate, and how full he was of a design he declared himself to have, of exposing it.' This noble person is the earl of Peterborough.

Here in truth should we crave pardon of all the foresaid right honourable and worthy personages, for having mentioned them in the same page with such weekly riff-raff railers and rhymers; but that we had their ever-honoured commands for the same; and that they are introduced not as witnesses in the controversy, but as witnesses that cannot be controverted; not to dispute, but to decide.

Certain it is, that dividing our writers into two classes, of such who were acquaintance, and of such who were strangers to our author; the former are those who speak well, and the other those who speak evil of him. Of the first class, the most noble

John Duke of Buckingham

sums up his character in these lines:

'And yet so wondrous, so sublime a thing,
As the great Iliad, scarce could make me sing,
Unless I justly could at once commend
A good companion, and as firm a friend;
One moral, or a mere well-natured deed,
Can all desert in sciences exceed.'<sup>1</sup>

So also is he deciphered by

The Hon. Simon Harcourt.

'Say, wondrous youth, what column wilt thou choose,
 What laurell'd arch, for thy triumphant muse?
 Though each great ancient court thee to his shrine,
 Though every laurel through the dome be thine,
 Go to the good and just, an awful train!
 Thy soul's delight——.'<sup>1</sup>

Recorded in like manner for his virtuous disposition, and gentle bearing, by the ingenious

Mr. Walter Hart,

in this apostrophe:

'Oh! ever worthy, ever crown'd with praise:
 Bless'd in thy life, and bless'd in all thy lays,
 Add, that the Sisters every thought refine,
 And e'en thy life be faultless as thy line,
 Yet envy still with fiercer rage pursues,
 Obscures the virtue, and defames the muse.
 A soul like thine, in pain, in grief, resign'd,
 Views with just scorn the malice of mankind.'<sup>2</sup>

The witty and moral satirist,

Dr. Edward Young,

wishing some check to the corruption and evil manners of the times, calleth out upon our poet to undertake a task so worthy of his virtue:

Why slumbers Pope, who leads the Muses' train,
 Nor hears that virtue, which he loves, complain?'<sup>3</sup>

Mr. Mallet,

in his epistle on Verbal Criticism:

'Whose life, severely scann'd, transcends his lays,
 For wit supreme, is but his second praise.'

Now fired by Pope and virtue, leave the age
 In low pursuit of self-undoing wrong,
 And trace the author through his moral page,
 Whose blameless life still answers to his song.

Mr. Thomson,

In his elegant and philosophical poem the Seasons :

'Although not sweeter his own Homer sings,
 Yet is his life the more endearing song.'

To the same tune also singeth that learned clerk, of Suffolk,

Mr. William Broome :

'Thus, nobly rising in fair virtue's cause,
 From thy own life transcribe the unerring laws.'<sup>1</sup>

And, to close all, hear the reverend dean of St.
 Patrick's :

'A soul with every virtue fraught,
 By patriots, priests, and poets taught :
 Whose filial piety excels
 Whatever Grecian story tells.
 A genius for each business fit ;
 Whose meanest talent is his wit,' &c.

Let us now recreate thee by turning to the other side, and showing his character drawn by those with whom he never conversed, and whose countenances he could not know, though turned against him : First again commencing with the high-voiced and neverenough quoted

Mr. John Dennis,

who, in his Reflections on the Essay on Criticism, thus describeth him : 'A little affected hypocrite, who has nothing in his mouth but candour, truth, friendship, good-nature, humanity, and magnanimity. He is so great a lover of falsehood, that whenever he has a mind to calumniate his contemporaries, he trary to some good quality for which all their friends and acquaintance commend them. He seems to have a particular pique to people of quality, and authors of that rank.—He must derive his religion from St. Omer's.—But in the character of Mr. P. and his writings (printed by S. Popping, 1716) he saith, 'Though he is a professor of the worst religion, yet he laughs at it;' but that 'nevertheless he is a virulent papist; and yet a pillar of the church of England.'

Of both which opinions

seems also to be; declaring in Mist's Journal of June 22, 1718, 'That if he is not shrewdly abused, he made it his practice to cackle to both parties in their own sentiments.' But as to his pique against people of quality, the same journalist doth not agree, but saith (May 8, 1728,) 'He had by some means or other, the acquaintance and friendship of the whole body of our nobility.'

However contradictory this may appear, Mr. Dennis and Gildon, in the character last cited, make it all plain, by assuring us, 'That he is a creature that reconciles all contradictions: he is a beast, and a man; a Whig and a Tory; a writer (at one and the same time) of Guardians and Examiners;<sup>1</sup> an assertor of liberty, and of the dispensing power of kings; a Jesuitical professor of truth; a base and foul pretender to candour.' So that, upon the whole account, we must conclude him either to have been a great hypocrite, or a very honest man; a terrible impostor upon both parties, or very moderate to either.

Be it as to the judicious reader shall seem good. Sure it is, he is little favoured of certain authors, whose wrath is perilous; for one declares he ough to have a price set on his head, and to be hunted down as a wild beast.<sup>1</sup> Another protests that he does not know what may happen; advises him to insure his person; says he has bitter enemies, and expressly declares it will be well if he escapes with his life.<sup>2</sup> One desires he would cut his own throat, or hang himself.<sup>3</sup> But Pasquin seemed rather inclined it should be done by the government, representing him engaged in grievous designs with a lord of parliament then under prosecution.<sup>4</sup> Mr. Dennis himself hath written to a minister, that he is one of the most dangerous persons in this kingdom;<sup>5</sup> and assureth the public, that he is an open and mortal enemy to his country; a monster that will one day show as daring a soul as a mad Indian, who runs a-muck to kill the first Christian he meets.<sup>6</sup> Another gives information of treason discovered in his poem.<sup>7</sup> Mr. Curll boldly supplies an imperfect verse with kings and princesses;<sup>8</sup> and one Matthew Concanen, yet more impudent, publishes at length the two most sacred names in this nation, as members of the Dunciad!<sup>9</sup>

This is prodigious! yet it is almost as strange, that in the midst of these invectives his greatest enemies have (I know not how) borne testimony to some merit in him.

Mr. Theobald,

in censuring his Shakspeare, declares, 'He has so great an esteem for Mr. Pope, and so high an opinion after having violently attacked him in many pieces, at last came to wish from his heart, 'That Mr. Pope would be prevailed upon to give us Ovid's Epistles by his hand; for it is certain we see the original of Sappho to Phaon with much more life and likeness in his version, than in that of sir Car Scrope. And this (he adds) is the more to be wished, because in the English tongue we have scarcely any thing truly and naturally written upon love.'<sup>2</sup> He also, in taxing sir Richard Blackmore for his heterodox opinions of Homer, challengeth him to answer what Mr. Pope hath said in his preface to that poet.

Mr. Oldmixon

says: 'Pope was so good a versifier [once] that, his predecessor Mr. Dryden, and his contemporary Mr. Prior excepted, the harmony of his numbers is equal to any body's. And, that he had all the merit that a man can have that way.'<sup>4</sup> And

Although he says, 'The smooth numbers of the Dunciad are all that recommend it, nor has it any other merit;' yet that same paper hath these words: 'The author is allowed to be a perfect master of an easy and elegant versification. In all his works we find the most happy turns, and natural similes, wonderfully short and thick sown.'

The Essay on the Dunciad also owns, p. 25, it is very full of beautiful images. But the panegyric which crowns all that can be said on this poem, is bestowed by our laureate,

Mr. Colley Cibber,

who 'grants it to be a better poem of its kind than ever was writ;' but adds, 'it was a victory over a parcel of poor wretches, whom it was almost cowardice to conquer.—A man might as well triumph for having killed so many silly flies that offended him. Could he have let them alone, by this time, poor souls! they had all been buried in oblivion.'<sup>3</sup> Here we see our excellent laureate allows the justice of the satire on every man in it, but himself; as the great Mr Dennis did before him.

The said

Mr. Dennis and Mr. Gildon,

in the most furious of all their words (the forecited Character, p. 5,) do in concert<sup>1</sup> confess, 'that some men of good understanding value him for his rhymes.' And (p. 17) 'that he has got, like Mr. Bayes in the Rehearsal, (that is, like Mr. Dryden,) a notable knack at rhyming, and writing smooth verse.'

On his Essay on Man, numerous were the praises bestowed by his avowed enemies, in the imagination that the same was not written by him, as it was printed anonymously.

Thus sang of it even

Bezaleel Morris:

'Auspicious bard! while all admire thy strain,
All but the selfish, ignorant, and vain;

<sup>1</sup> I In concert] Hear how Mr. Dennis hath proved our mistake in this case: 'As to my writing in concert with Mr. Gildon, I declare upon the honour and word of a gentleman, that I never wrote so much as one line in concert with any one man whatsoever. And these two letters from Gildon will plainly show, that we are not writers in concert with each other

"Sir,

"The height of my ambition is to please men of the best judgment; and, finding that I have entertained my master agreeably, I have the extent of the reward of my labour."

"Sir,

"I had not the opportunity of hearing of your excellent pamphlet till this day. I am infinitely satisfied and pleased with it, and hope you will meet with that encouragement your admirable performance deserves, &c.

"CH. GILDON."

'Now is it not plain, that any one who sends such compliments to another, has not been used to write in partnership with him to whom he sends them?' Dennis Remarks on the Dunciad, p. 50. Mr. Dennis is therefore welcome to take this piece to himself.

I, whom no bribe to servile flattery drew,
 Must pay the tribute to thy merit due:
 Thy muse sublime, significant, and clear,
 Alike informs the soul, and charms the ear,' &c
 And

Mr. Leonard Welstead

thus wrote<sup>1</sup> to the unknown author, on the first publication of the said Essay; 'I must own, after the reception which the vilest and most immoral ribaldry hath lately met with, I was surprised to see what I had long despaired, a performance deserving the name of a poet. Such, sir, is your work. It is, indeed above all commendation, and ought to have been published in an age and country more worthy of it. If my testimony be of weight any where, you are sure to have it in the amplest manner,' &c. &c. &c.

Thus we see every one of his works hath been extolled by one or other of his most inveterate enemies; and to the success of them all they do unanimously give testimony. But it is sufficient instar omnium, to behold the great critic, Mr. Dennis, sorely lamenting it, even from the Essay on Criticism to this day of the Dunciad! 'A most notorious instance (quoth he) of the depravity of genius and taste, the approbation this Essay meets with.'<sup>2</sup>—I can safely affirm, that I never attacked any of these writings, unless they had success infinitely beyond their merit. This, though an empty, has been a popular scribbler. The epidemic madness of the times has given him reputation.<sup>3</sup>—If, after the cruel treatment so many extraordinary men (Spenser, lord Bacon, Ben Jonson, Milton, Butler, Otway, and others) have received from this country, for these last hundred years, I should shift the scene, and show all that penury changed at once to riot and profuseness; and more squandered away upon one object, than would have satisfied the greater part of those extraordinary men; the reader to whom this one creature should be unknown, would fancy him a prodigy of art and nature, would believe that all the great qualities of these persons were centered in him alone. But if I should venture to assure him, that the people of England had made such a choice—the reader would either believe me a malicious enemy, and slanderer, or that the reign of the last (Queen Anne's) ministry was designed by fate to encourage fools.<sup>1</sup>

But it happens that this our poet never had any place, pension, or gratuity, in any shape, from the said glorious queen, or any of her ministers. All he owed, in the whole course of his life, to any court, was a subscription for his Homer, of £200, from King George I. and £100 from the prince and princess.

However, lest we imagine our author's success was constant and universal, they acquaint us of certain works in a less degree of repute, whereof, although owned by others, yet do they assure us he is the writer. Of this sort Mr. Dennis<sup>2</sup> ascribes to him two farces, whose names he does not tell, but assures us that there is not one jest in them; and an imitation of Horace, whose title he does not mention, but assures us it is much more execrable than all his works.<sup>3</sup> The Daily Journal, May 11, 1728, assures us, 'He is below Tom Durfey in the drama, because (as that writer thinks) the Marriage-Hater Matched, and the Boarding School, are better than the What-d'ye-call-it;' which is not Mr. P.'s, but Mr. Gay's. Mr. Gildon assures us, in his New Rehearsal, p. 48, 'That he was writing a play of the Lady Jane Grey: but it afterwards proved to be Mr. Rowe's. We are assured by another, 'He wrote a pamphlet called Dr. Andrew Tripe;'<sup>1</sup> which proved to be one Dr. Wagstaff's Mr. Theobald assures us, in Mist of the 27th of April 'That the treatise of the Profound is very dull, and that Mr. Pope is the author of it.' The writer of Gulliveriana is of another opinion; and says, 'The whole, or greatest part, of the merit of this treatise must and can only be ascribed to Gulliver.'<sup>2</sup> [Here, gentle reader! cannot I but smile at the strange blindness and positiveness of men? knowing the said treatise to appertain to none other but to me, Martinus Scriblerus.]

We are assured, in Mist of June 8th, 'That his own plays and farces would better have adorned the Dunciad, than those of Mr. Theobald; for he had neither genius for tragedy nor comedy.' Which whether true or not, it is not easy to judge; in as much as he had attempted neither. Unless we will take it for granted, with Mr. Cibber, that his being once very angry at hearing a friend's play abused, was an infallible proof the play was his own; the said Mr. Cibber thinking it impossible for a man to be much concerned for any but himself. 'Now let any man judge (saith he) by his concern, who was the true mother of the child.'<sup>3</sup>

But from all that has been said, the discerning reader will collect, that it little availed our author to have any candour, since, when he declared he did not write for others, it was not credited; as little to have any modesty, since, when he declined writing in any way himself, the presumption of others was imputed to him. If he singly enterprised one great work, he was taxed of boldness and madness to a prodigy:<sup>4</sup> if he took assistants in another, it was complained of, and represented as a great injury to the public.<sup>1</sup> The loftiest heroics, the lowest ballads, treatises against the state or church, satires on lords and ladies, raillery on wits and authors, squabbles with booksellers, or even full and true accounts of monsters, poisons, and murders; of any hereof was there nothing so good, nothing so bad, which hath not at one or other season been to him ascribed. If it bore no author's name, then lay he concealed; if it did, he fathered it upon that author to be yet better concealed: if it resembled any of his styles, then was it evident; if it did not, then disguised he it on set purpose. Yea, even direct oppositions in religion, principles, and politics, have equally been supposed in him inherent. Surely a most rare and singular character: of which let the reader make what he can.

Doubtless most commentators would hence take occasion to turn all to their author's advantage, and from the testimony of his very enemies would affirm, that his capacity was boundless, as well as his imagination; that he was a perfect master of all styles, and all arguments; and that there was in those times, no other writer, in any kind, of any degree of excellence, save he himself. But as this is not our own sentiment, we shall determine on nothing; but leave thee, gentle reader, to steer thy judgment equally between various opinions, and to choose whether thou wilt incline to the testimony of authors avowed, or of authors concealed; of those who knew him, or of those who knew him not.

MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS

OF THE POEM.

THIS poem, as it celebrateth the most grave and ancient of things, Chaos, Night, and Dulness : so is it of the most grave and ancient kind. Homer (saith Aristotle) was the first who gave the form, and (saith Horace) who adapted the measure to heroic poesy. But even before this, may be rationally presumed, from what the ancients have left written, was a piece by Homer, composed of like nature and matter with this of our poet. For of epic sort it appeareth to have been, yet of matter surely not unpleasant, witness what is reported of it by the learned archbishop Eustathius, in Odys. x. And accordingly Aristotle, in his Poetics, chap. iv. doth further set forth, that as the Iliad and Odyssey gave example to tragedy, so did this poem to comedy its first idea.

From these authors also it should seem, that the hero, or chief personage of it was no less obscure, and his understanding and sentiments no less quaint and strange (if indeed no more so) than any of the actors of our poem. Margites was the name of this personage, whom antiquity recordeth to have been Duncie the first ; and surely from what we hear of him, not unworthy to be the root of so spreading a tree, and so numerous a posterity. The poem, therefore, celebrating him was properly and absolutely a Dunciad which, though now unhappily lost, yet is its nature sufficiently known by the infallible tokens aforesaid. And thus it doth appear, that the first Dunciad was the first epic poem, written by Homer himself, and anterior even to the Iliad or Odyssey.

Now, forasmuch as our poet hath translated those two famous works of Homer which are yet left, he did conceive it in some sort his duty to imitate that also which was lost: and was therefore induced to bestow on it the same form which Homer's is reported to have had, namely, that of epic poem; with a title also framed after the ancient Greek manner, to wit, that of Dunciad.

Wonderful it is, that so few of the moderns have been stimulated to attempt some Dunciad! since in the opinion of the multitude, it might cost less pain and toil than an imitation of the greater epic. But possible it is also, that, on due reflection, the maker might find it easier to paint a Charlemagne, a Brute, or a Godfrey with just pomp and dignity heroic, than a Margites, a Codrus, or a Fleckno.

We shall next declare the occasion and the cause which moved our poet to this particular work. He lived in those days, when (after providence had permitted the invention of printing as a scourge for the sins of the learned) paper also became so cheap, and printers so numerous, that a deluge of authors covered the land; whereby not only the peace of the honest unwriting subject was daily molested, but unmerciful demands were made of his applause, yea, of his money, by such as would neither earn the one nor deserve the other. At the same time, the licence of the press was such, that it grew dangerous to refuse them either: for they would forthwith publish slanders unpunished, the authors being anonymous, and skulking under the wings of publishers, a set of men who neither scrupled to vend either calumny or blasphemy, as long as the town would call for it.

<sup>1</sup>Now our author, living in those times, did conceive it an endeavour well worthy an honest satirist, to dissuade the dull, and punish the wicked, the only way that was left. In that public-spirited view he laid the plan of this poem, as the greatest service he was capable (without much hurt, or being slain) to render his dear country. First, taking things from their original, he considereth the causes creative of such authors, namely, dulness and poverty; the one born with them, the other contracted by neglect of their proper talents, through self-conceit of greater abilities. This truth he wrappeth in an allegory<sup>1</sup> (as the construction of epic poesy requirith,) and feigns that one of these goddesses had taken up her abode with the other, and that they jointly inspired all such writers and such works. He proceedeth to show the qualities they bestow on these authors,<sup>2</sup> and the effects they produce:<sup>3</sup> then the materials or stock, with which they furnish them;<sup>4</sup> and, above all, that self-opinion<sup>5</sup> which causeth it to seem to themselves vastly greater than it is, and is the prime motive of their setting up in this sad and sorry merchandise. The great power of these goddesses acting in alliance (whereof as the one is the mother of industry, so is the other of plodding) was to be exemplified in some one great and remarkable action; and none could be more so than that which our poet hath chosen,<sup>6</sup> viz. the restoration of the reign of Chaos and Night, by the ministry of Dulness, their daughter, in the removal of her imperial seat from the city to the polite world, as the action of the Æneid is the restoration of the empire of Troy, by the removal of the race from thence to Latium. But as Homer singeth only the wrath of Achilles, yet includes in his poem the whole history of the Trojan war, in like manner our author hath drawn into this single action the whole history of Dulness and her children.

A person must next be fixed upon to support this action. This phantom in the poet's mind must have a name,<sup>7</sup> he finds it to be ———; and he becomes of course the hero of the poem.

4 Ver. 57 to 77.

5 Ver. 80.

6 Ibid. chap. vii. viii.

7 Bossu, chap. viii. Vide Aristot. Poet. chap. ix.

The fable being thus, according to the best example, one and entire, as contained in the proposition, the machinery is a continued chain of allegories, setting forth the whole power, ministry, and empire, of Dulness, extended through her subordinate instruments, in all her various operations.

This is branched into episodes, each of which hath its moral apart, though all conducive to the main end. The crowd assembled in the second book, demonstrates the design to be more extensive than to bad poets only, and that we may expect other episodes of the patrons, encouragers, or paymasters of such authors, as occasion shall bring them forth. And the third book, if well considered, seemeth to embrace the whole world. Each of the games relateth to some or other vile class of writers: the first concerneth the plagiarist, to whom he giveth the name of Moore; the second, the libellous novelist, whom he styleth Eliza; the third, the flattering dictator; the fourth, the brawling critic, or noisy poet; the fifth, the dark and dirty party writer: and so of the rest. assigning to each some proper name or other, such as he could find.

As for the characters, the public hath already acknowledged how justly they are drawn; the manners are so depicted, and the sentiment so peculiar to those to whom applied, that surely to transfer them to any other or wiser personages, would be exceeding difficult: and certain it is, that every person concerned, being consulted apart, hath readily owned the resemblance of every portrait, his own excepted. So Mr. Cibber calls them 'a parcel of poor wretches, so many silly flies:'<sup>1</sup> but adds, 'our author's wit is remarkably more bare and barren, whenever it would fall foul on Cibber, than upon any other person whatever.'

The descriptions are singular, the comparisons very quaint, the narration various, yet of one colour; the purity and chastity of diction is so preserved, that, in the places most suspicious, not the words but only the images have been censured, and yet are those images no other than have been sanctified by ancient and classical authority (though, as was the manner of those good times, not so curiously wrapped up,) yea, and commented upon by the most grave doctors and approved critics.

As it beareth the name of epic, it is thereby subjected to such severe indispensable rules as are laid on all neoterics, a strict imitation of the ancients; in so much that any deviation, accompanied with what ever poetic beauties, hath always been censured by the sound critic. How exact that limitation hath been in this piece, appeareth not only by its general structure, but by particular allusions infinite, many whereof have escaped both the commentator and poet himself, yea, divers by his exceeding diligence are so altered and interwoven with the rest, that several have already been, and more will be, by the ignorant abused, as altogether and originally his own.

In a word, the whole poem proveth itself to be the work of our author, when his faculties were in full vigour and perfection; at that exact time when years have ripened the judgment, without diminishing the imagination: which, by good critics, is held to be punctually at forty. For at that season it was that Virgil finished his Georgics; and sir Richard Blackmore, at the like age, composing his Arthurs, declared the same to be the very acme and pitch of life for epic poesy: though since he hath altered it to sixty, the year in which he published his Alfred.<sup>1</sup> True it is, that the talents for criticism, namely, smartness, quick censure, vivacity of remark, certainty of asseve-

tion, indeed all but acerbity, seem rather the gifts of youth than of riper age: but it is far otherwise in poetry; witness the works of Mr. Rymer and Mr. Dennis, who, beginning with criticism, became afterwards such poets as no age hath paralleled. With good reason, therefore, did our author choose to write his essay on that subject at twenty, and reserve for his maturer years this great and wonderful work of the Dunciad.

RICARDUS ARISTARCHUS

Of the Hero of the Poem.

OF the nature of Dunciad in general, whence derived, and on what authority founded, as well as of the art and conduct of this our poem in particular, the learned and laborious Scriblerus hath, according to his manner, and with tolerable share of judgment, dissertated. But when he cometh to speak of the person of the hero fitted for such poem, in truth he miserably halts and hallucinates: for, misled by one Monsieur Bossu, a Gallic critic, he prateth of I cannot tell what phantom of a hero, only raised up to support the fable. A putid conceit! as if Homer and Virgil, like modern undertakers, who first build their house, and then seek out for a tenant, had contrived the story of a war and a wandering, before they once thought either of Achilles or Æneas. We shall therefore set our good brother and the world also right in this particular, by assuring them, that, in the greater epic, the prime intention of the muse is to exalt heroic virtue, in order to propagate the love of it among the children of men; and consequently that the poet's first thought must needs be turned upon a real subject meet for laud and celebration; not one whom he is to make, but one whom he may find, truly illustrious. This is the primum mobile of his poetic world, whence every thing is to receive life and motion. For, this subject being found, he is immediately ordained, or rather acknowledged, a hero, and put upon such action as befiteth the dignity of his character.

But the muse ceaseth not here her eagle-flight. For sometimes, satiated with the contemplation of these suns of glory, she turneth downward on her wing, and darts with Jove's lightning on the goose and serpent kind. For we may apply to the muse in her various moods what an ancient master of wisdom affirmeth of the gods in general: Si Dii non irascuntur impiis et injustis, nec pios utique justosque diligunt. In rebus enim diversis, aut in utramque partem moveri necesse est, aut in neutram. Itaque qui bonos diligit, et malos odit; et qui malos non odit, nec bonos diligit. Quia et diligere bonos ex odio malorum venit; et malos odisse ex bonorum caritate descendit. Which in our vernacular idiom may be thus interpreted: 'If the gods be not provoked at evil men, neither are they delighted with the good and just. For contrary objects must either excite contrary affections, or no affections at all. So that he who loveth good men, must, at the same time, hate the bad; and he who hateth not bad men, cannot love the good: because to love good proceedeth from an aversion to evil, and to hate evil men from a tenderness to the good. From this delicacy of the muse arose the little epic (more lively and choleric than her elder sister, whose bulk and complexion incline her to the phlegmatic;) and for this, some notorious vehicle of vice and folly was sought out, to make thereof an example. An early instance of which (nor could it escape the accuracy of Scriblerus) the father of epic poem himself affordeth us. From him the practice descended to the Greek dramatic poets, his offspring; who, in the composition of their tetralogy, or set of four pieces, were wont to make the last a satiric tragedy

Happily, one of these ancient Dunciads (as we may well term it) is come down unto us, amongst the tragedies of the poet Euripides. And what doth the reader suppose may be the subject thereof? Why, in truth, and it is worthy observation, the unequal contest of an old, dull, debauched buffoon Cyclops, with the heaven-directed favourite of Minerva; who, after having quietly borne all the monster's obscene and impious ribaldry, endeth the farce in punishing him with the mark of an indelible brand in his forehead. May we not then be excused, if, for the future, we consider the epics of Homer, Virgil, and Milton, together with this our poem, as a complete tetralogy; in which the last worthily holdeth the place or station of the satiric piece?

Proceed we, therefore, in our subject. It hath been long, and, alas for pity! still remaineth a question, whether the hero of the greater epic should be an honest man; or, as the French critics express it, un honnête homme:<sup>1</sup> but it never admitted of a doubt, but that the hero of the little epic should be just the contrary. Hence, to the advantage of our Dunciad, we may observe, how much juster the moral of that poem must needs be where so important a question is previously decided.

But then it is not every knave, nor (let me add) every fool, that is a fit subject for a Dunciad. There must still exist some analogy, if not resemblance of qualities, between the heroes of the two poems; and this, in order to admit what neoteric critics call the parody, one of the liveliest graces of the little epic. Thus it being agreed that the constituent qualities of the great epic hero, are wisdom, bravery, and love, from whence springeth heroic virtue; it followeth, that those of the lesser epic hero should be vanity, assurance, and debauchery, from which happy assemblage resulteth heroic dulness, the never-dying subject of this our poem.

This being settled, come we now to particulars. It is the character of true wisdom to seek its chief support and confidence within itself; and to place that support in the resources which proceed from a conscious rectitude of will.—And are the advantages of vanity, when arising to the heroic standard, at all short of this self-complacence? nay, are they not, in the opinion of the enamoured owner; far beyond it? 'Let the world,' will such an one say, 'impute to me what folly or weakness they please; but till wisdom can give me something that will make me more heartily happy, I am content to be gazed at.'<sup>1</sup> This, we see, is vanity according to the heroic gage or measure; not that low and ignoble species which pretendeth to virtues we have not: but the laudable ambition of being gazed at for glorying in those vices which every body knows we have. 'The world may ask,' says he, 'why I make my follies public? Why not? I have passed my life very pleasantly with them.'<sup>2</sup> In short, there is no sort of vanity such a hero would scruple, but that which might go near to degrade him from his high station in this our Dunciad; namely, 'whether it would not be vanity in him, to take shame to himself, for not being a wise man?'<sup>3</sup>

Bravery, the second attribute of the true hero, is courage manifesting itself in every limb; while its correspondent virtue, in the mock hero, is that same courage all collected into the face. And as power, when drawn together, must needs have more force and spirit than when dispersed, we generally find this kind of courage in so high and heroic a degree, that it insults not only men, but gods. Mezentius is, without doubt, the bravest character in all the Æneis but how? His bravery, we know, was a high courage of blasphemy. And can we say less of this brave man's? who, having told us that he placed his 'summum bonum in those follies which he was not content barely to possess, but would likewise glory in,' adds, 'if I am misguided, 'tis nature's fault, and I follow her.'<sup>1</sup> Nor can we be mistaken in making this happy quality a species of courage, when we consider those illustrious marks of it, which made his face 'more known (as he justly boasteth) than most in the kingdom;' and his language to consist of what we must allow to be the most daring figure of speech, that which is taken from the name of God.

Gentle love, the next ingredient of the true hero's composition, is a mere bird of passage, or (as Shakespeare calls it) 'summer-teeming lust,' and evaporates in the heat of youth; doubtless by that refinement it suffers in passing through those certain strainers which our poet somewhere speaketh of. But when it is let alone to work upon the lees, it acquireth strength by old age; and becometh a lasting ornament to the little epic. It is true, indeed, there is one objection to its fitness for such a use: for not only the ignorant may think it common, but it is admitted to be so, even by him who best knoweth its value. 'Don't you think,' argueth he, 'to say only a man has his whore,<sup>2</sup> ought to go for little or nothing? because defendit numerus. Take the first ten thousand men you meet, and, I believe, you would be no loser if you betted ten to one that every single sinner of them, one with another, had been guilty of the same frailty.'<sup>3</sup> But here he seemeth not to have

'And has not Colly still his lord and whore,
His butchers Henley, his free-masons Moore?'

done justice to himself: the man is sure enough a hero who hath his lady at fourscore. How doth his modesty herein lessen the merit of a whole well-spent life! not taking to himself the commendation (which Horace accounted the greatest in a theatrical character) of continuing to the very dregs the same he was from the beginning,

‘—— Servetur ad imum

Qualis ab incepto processerat——.’

But here, in justice both to the poet and the hero, let us farther remark, that the calling her his whore, implied she was his own, and not his neighbour's. Truly a commendable continence! and such as Scipio himself must have applauded. For how much self-denial was necessary not to covet his neighbour's whore! and what disorders must the coveting her have occasioned in that society, where (according to this political calculator) nine in ten of all ages have their concubines!

We have now, as briefly as we could devise, gone through the three constituent qualities of either hero. But it is not in any, or in all of these, that heroism properly or essentially resideth. It is a lucky result rather from the collision of these lively qualities against one another. Thus, as from wisdom, bravery, and love, ariseth magnanimity, the object of admiration, which is the aim of the greater epic; so from vanity, assurance, and debauchery, springeth buffoonery, the source of ridicule, that ‘laughing ornament,’ as he well termeth it,<sup>1</sup> of the little epic.

He is not ashamed (God forbid he ever should be ashamed!) of this character, who deemeth that not reason but risibility distinguisheth the human species from the brutal. ‘As nature,’ saith this profound philosopher, ‘distinguished our species from the mute creation by our risibility, her design must have been

by that faculty as evidently to raise our happiness, as by our os sublime (our erected faces) to lift the dignity of our form above them.<sup>1</sup> All this considered, how complete a hero must he be, as well as how happy a man, whose risibility lieth not barely in his muscles, as in the common sort, but (as himself informeth us) in his very spirits? and whose os sublime is not simply an erect face, but a brazen head; as should seem by his preferring it to one of iron, said to belong to the late king of Sweden?<sup>2</sup>

But whatever personal qualities a hero may have, the examples of Achilles and Æneas show us, that all those are of small avail, without the constant assistance of the gods; for the subversion and erection of empires have never been adjudged the work of man. How greatly soever then we may esteem of his high talents, we can hardly conceive his personal prowess alone sufficient to restore the decayed empire of dulness. So weighty an achievement must require the particular favour and protection of the great; who being the natural patrons and supporters of letters, as the ancient gods were of Troy, must first be drawn off and engaged in another interest, before the total subversion of them can be accomplished. To surmount, therefore, this last and greatest difficulty, we have, in this excellent man, a professed favourite and intimado of the great. And look, of what force ancient piety was to draw the gods into the party of Æneas, that, and much stronger, is modern incense, to engage the great in the party of dulness.

Thus have we essayed to portray or shadow out this noble imp of fame. But now the impatient reader will be apt to say, 'If so many and various graces go to the making up a hero, what mortal shall suffice to bear his character?' Ill hath he read who seeth not, in every trace of this picture, that individual, all-accomplished person, in whom these rare virtues and lucky circumstances have agreed to meet and centre with the strongest lustre and fullest harmony.

The good Scriblerus indeed, nay, the world itself, might be imposed on, in the late spurious editions, by I can't tell what sham-hero or phantom; but it was not so easy to impose on him whom this egregious error most of all concerned. For no sooner had the fourth book laid open the high and swelling scene, but he recognized his own heroic acts: and when he came to the words,

'Soft on her lap her laureat son reclines,'

(though laureat imply no more than one crowned with laurel, as befiteth any associate or consort in empire,) he loudly resented this indignity to violated Majesty. Indeed, not without cause, he being there represented as fast asleep; so misbeseeming the eye of empire, which, like that of Providence, should never doze nor slumber. 'Hah!' saith he, 'fast asleep, it seems! that's a little too strong. Pert and dull at least you might have allowed me, but as seldom asleep as any fool.'<sup>1</sup> However, the injured hero may comfort himself with this reflection, that though it be a sleep, yet it is not the sleep of death, but of immortality. Here he will<sup>2</sup> live at least, though not awake; and in no worse condition than many an enchanted warrior before him. The famous Durandante, for instance, was, like him, cast into a long slumber by Merlin the British bard and necromancer; and his example for submitting to it with a good grace, might be of use to our hero. For that disastrous knight being sorely pressed or driven to make his answer by several persons of quality, only replied with a sigh, Patience, and shuffle the cards.<sup>3</sup>

But now, as nothing in this world, no not the most sacred and perfect things, either of religion or government, can escape the sting of envy, methinks I already hear these carpers objecting to the clearness of our hero's title.

'It would never,' say they, 'have been esteemed sufficient to make a hero for the Iliad or Æneis; that Achilles was brave enough to overturn one empire, or Æneas pious enough to raise another, had they not been goddess born, and princes bred. What then did this author mean, by erecting a player instead of one of his patrons (a person, "never a hero even on the stage,"<sup>1</sup>) to this dignity of colleague in the empire of dulness, and achiever of a work that neither old Omar, Attila, nor John of Leyden could entirely bring to pass?'

To all this we have, as we conceive, a sufficient answer from the Roman historian, fabrum esse suam quemque fortunam: 'that every man is the smith of his own fortune.' The politic Florentine, Nicholas Machiavel, goeth still further, and affirmeth that a man needeth but to believe himself a hero to be one of the worthiest. 'Let him,' saith he, 'but fancy himself capable of the highest things, and he will of course be able to achieve them.' From this principle it follows, that nothing can exceed our hero's prowess, as nothing ever equalled the greatness of his conceptions. Hear how he constantly paragoneth himself; at one time to Alexander the Great and Charles XII. of Sweden, for the excess and delicacy of his ambition;<sup>2</sup> to Henry IV. of France, for honest policy;<sup>3</sup> to the first Brutus, for love of liberty;<sup>4</sup> and to sir Robert Walpole, for good government while in power;<sup>5</sup> at another time, to the godlike Socrates, for his diversions and amusements;<sup>6</sup> to Horace, Montaigne, and sir William Temple, for an elegant vanity that maketh them for ever read and admired:<sup>1</sup> to two lord chancellors, for law, from whom, when confederate against him, at the bar, he carried away the prize of eloquence;<sup>2</sup> and, to say all in a word, to the right reverend the lord bishop of London himself, in the art of writing pastoral letters.<sup>3</sup>

Nor did his actions fall short of the sublimity of his conceit. In his early youth he met the Revolution<sup>4</sup> face to face in Nottingham, at a time when his betters contented themselves with following her. It was here he got acquainted with Old Battle-array, of whom he hath made so honourable mention in one of his immortal odes. But he shone in courts as well as in camps; he was called up when the nation fell in labour of this Revolution;<sup>5</sup> and was a gossip at her christening, with the bishop and the ladies.<sup>6</sup>

As to his birth, it is true he pretendeth no relation either to heathen god or goddess; but, what is as good, he was descended from a maker of both.<sup>7</sup> And that he did not pass himself on the world for a hero, as well by birth as education, was his own fault: for his lineage he bringeth into his life as an anecdote, and is sensible he had it in his power to be thought nobody's son at all:<sup>8</sup> and what is that but coming into the world a hero?

But be it (the punctilious laws of epic poesy so requiring) that a hero of more than mortal birth must needs be had; even for this we have a remedy. We can easily derive our hero's pedigree from a goddess of no small power and authority amongst men; and legitimate and instal him after the right classical and authentic fashion: for, like as the ancient sages found a son of Mars in a mighty warrior; a son of Neptune in a skilful seaman; a son of Phœbus in a harmonious poet; so have we here, if need be, a son of Fortune in an artful gamester. And who fitter than the offspring of Chance, to assist in restoring the empire of Night and Chaos ?

There is, in truth, another objection of greater weight, namely, 'That this hero still existeth, and hath not yet finished his earthly course For if Solon said well,

'ultima semper
Expectanda dies homini: dicique beatus
Ante obitum nemo supremaque funera debet !'

If no man be called happy till his death, surely much less can any one, till then, be pronounced a hero: this species of men being far more subject than others to the caprices of fortune and humour.' But to this also we have an answer, that will (we hope) be deemed decisive. It cometh from himself; who, to cut this matter short, hath solemnly protested that he will never change or amend.

With regard to his vanity, he declareth that nothing shall ever part them. 'Nature,' said he, 'hath amply supplied me in vanity; a pleasure which neither the pertness of wit, nor the gravity of wisdom, will ever persuade me to part with.'<sup>1</sup> Our poet had charitably endeavoured to administer a cure to it: but he telleth us plainly, 'My superiors perhaps may be mended by him; but for my part I own myself incorrigible. I took upon my follies as the best part of my fortune.'<sup>2</sup> And with good reason; we see to what they have brought him!

Secondly; as to buffoonery. 'Is it,' saith he, 'a time of day for me to leave off these fooleries, and set up a new character? I can no more put off my follies than my skin; I have often tried, but they stick too close to me: nor am I sure my friends are displeas'd with them, for in this light I afford them frequent matter of mirth, &c. &c.'<sup>3</sup> Having then so publicly declared himself incorrigible, he is become dead in law (I mean the law epopœian) and devolveth upon the poet as his property; who may take him, and deal with him as if he had been dead as long as an old Egyptian hero: that is to say, embowel and embalm him for posterity.

Nothing, therefore (we conceive) remaineth to hinder his own prophecy of himself from taking immediate effect. A rare felicity! and what few prophets have had the satisfaction to see, alive! Nor can we conclude better than with that extraordinary one of his, which is conceived in these oraculous words, 'my dulness will find somebody to do it right.'<sup>1</sup>

Tandem Phœbus adest, morsusque inferre parantem
Congelat, et patulos, ut erant, indurat hiatus.'<sup>2</sup>

BY AUTHORITY.

By virtue of the authority in us vested by the act for subjecting poets to the power of a licenser, we have revised this piece; where, finding the style and appellation of King to have been given to a certain pretender, pseudo-poet, or phantom, of the name of Tibbald; and apprehending the same may be deemed in some sort a reflection on majesty, or at least an insult on that legal authority which has bestowed on another person the crown of poesy: We have ordered the said pretender, pseudo-poet, or phantom, utterly to vanish and evaporate out of this work; and do declare the said throne of poesy from henceforth to be abdicated and vacant, unless duly and lawfully supplied by the laureate himself. And it is hereby enacted that no other person do presume to fill the same.

THE DUNCIAD.

TO DR. JONATHAN SWIFT.

BOOK THE FIRST.

ARGUMENT.

The proposition, the invocation, and the inscription.

Then the original of the great empire of Dulness, and cause of the continuance thereof. The college of the goddess in the city, with her private academy for poets in particular: the governors of it, and the four cardinal virtues. Then the poem hastes into the midst of things, presenting her, on the evening of a lord-mayor's day, revolving the long succession of her sons, and the glory past and to come. She fixes her eyes on Bays to be the instrument of that great event which is the subject of the poem. He is described pensive among his books, giving up the cause, and apprehending the period of her empire. After debating whether to betake himself to the church, or to gaming, or to party-writing, he raises an altar of proper books, and (making first his solemn prayer and declaration) purposes thereon to sacrifice all his unsuccessful writings. As the pile is kindled, the goddess beholding the flame from her seat, flies and puts it out, by casting upon it the poem of Thul. She forthwith reveals herself to him, transports him to her temple, unfolds her arts, and initiates him into her mysteries; then announcing the death of Eusden, the poet laureate, anoints him, carries him to court, and proclaims him successor.

THE mighty mother, and her son, who brings
The Smithfield muses to the ear of kings,
Ising. Say you, her instruments, the great!
Call'd to this work by Dulness, Jove, and Fate;

REMARKS

The Dunciad, sic MS.] It may well be disputed whether this be a right reading. Ought it not rather be spelled Dunciad, as the etymology evidently demands? Duncce

You, by whose care, in vain decried and cursed,
Still Dunce the second reigns like Dunce the first ;

REMARKS.

with an e, therefore Dunciad with an e. That accurate and punctual man of letters, the restorer of Shakespear constantly observes the preservation of this very letter e, in spelling the name of his beloved author, and not like his common careless editors, with the omission of one, nay, sometimes of two ee's (as Shakspear,) which is utterly unpardonable. 'Nor is the neglect of a single letter so trivial as to some it may appear; the alteration whereof in a learned language is an achievement that brings honour to the critic who advances it; and Dr. Bentley will be remembered to posterity for his performances of this sort, as long as the world shall have any esteem for the remains of Menander and Philemon.'

Theobald.

This is surely a slip in the learned author of the foregoing note; there having been since produced by an accurate antiquary, an autograph of Shakespeare himself, whereby it appears that he spelled his own name without the first e. And upon this authority it was, that those most critical curators of his monument in Westminster Abbey erased the former wrong reading, and restored the true spelling on a new piece of old Egyptian granite. Nor for this only do they deserve our thanks, but for exhibiting on the same monument the first specimen of an edition of an author in marble; where (as may be seen on comparing the tomb with the book) in the space of five lines, two words and a whole verse are changed, and it is to be hoped will there stand, and outlast whatever hath been hitherto done in paper; as for the future, our learned sister university (the other eye of England) is taking care to perpetuate a total new Shakespear at the Clarendon press.

Bentl.

It is to be noted that this great critic also has omitted the circumstance; which is, that the inscription with the name of Shakespeare was intended to be placed on the marble scroll to which he points with his hand; instead of which it is now placed behind his back, and that specimen of an edition is put on the scroll, which indeed Shakespeare hath great reason to point at.

Anon.

Though I have as just a value for the letter D, as any grammarian living, not the same affliction for the name of this poem as any critic for that of his author; yet cannot it induce me to agree with those who would add yet another e to it, and call it the Dunciad: which being a French and foreign termination, is no way proper to a word entirely English, and vernacular. One e therefore in this case is right, and two ee's wrong. Yet upon the whole, I shall follow the manuscript, and print it without any e at all; moved

Say, how the goddess bade Britannia sleep,
And pour'd her spirit o'er the land and deep.

REMARKS.

thereto by authority (at all times, with critics, equal, if not superior to reason.) In which method of proceeding, I can never enough praise my good friend the exact Mr. Thomas Hearne; who, if any word occur, which to him and all mankind is evidently wrong, yet keeps he it in the text with due reverence, and only remarks in the margin, Sic MS. In like manner we shall not amend this error in the title itself, but only note it obiter, to evince to the learned that it was not our fault, nor any effect of our ignorance or inattention.

Scribl.

This poem was written in the year 1726. In the next year an imperfect edition was published at Dublin, and reprinted at London in twelves; another at Dublin, and another at London, in octavo; and three others in twelves the same year. But there was no perfect edition before that of London, in quarto; which was attended with notes. We are willing to acquaint posterity, that this poem was presented to King George the Second and his queen, by the hands of Sir Robert Walpole, on the 12th of March, 1728 9.

Schol. Vet.

It was expressly confessed in the preface to the first edition, that this poem was not published by the author himself. It was printed originally in a foreign country; and what foreign country? Why, one notorious for blunders; where finding blanks only instead of proper names, these blunderers filled them up at their pleasure.

The very hero of the poem hath been mistaken to this hour; so that we were obliged to open our notes with a discovery who he really was. We learn from the former editor, that this piece was presented by the hands of sir Robert Walpole to King George II. Now the author directly tells us, his hero is the man — who brings

The Smithfield muses to the ear of kings.

And it is notorious who was the person on whom this prince conferred the honour of the laurel.

It appears as plainly from the apostrophe to the great in the third verse, that Tibbald could not be the person, who was never an author in fashion, or caressed by the great; whereas this single characteristic is sufficient to point out the true hero: who, above all other poets of his time, was the peculiar delight and chosen companion of the nobility of England; and wrote, as he himself tells us, certain of his works at the earnest desire of persons of quality.

Lastly, the sixth verse affords full proof; this poet being

In eldest time, ere mortals writ or read,
 Ere Pallas issued from the Thunderer's head,      10
 Dulness o'er all possess'd her ancient right,
 Daughter of Chaos and eternal Night :
 Fate in their dotage this fair idiot gave,
 Gross as her sire, and as her mother grave,
 Laborious, heavy, busy, bold, and blind,
 She ruled, in native anarchy, the mind.

---

 REMARKS.

the only one who was universally known to have had a son so exactly like him, in his poetical, theatrical, political, and moral capacities, that it could justly be said of him,

'Still Duncce the second reigns like Duncce the first.'

Bentl.

Ver. 1. The mighty mother, and her son, &c.] The reader ought here to be cautioned, that the mother, and not the son, is the principal agent of this poem, the latter of them is only chosen as her colleague (as was anciently the custom in Rome before some great expedition,) the main action of the poem being by no means the coronation of the laureate, which is performed in the very first book, but the restoration of the empire of Dulness in Britain, which is not accomplished till the last.

Ver. 2. The Smithfield Muses.] Smithfield is the place where Bartholomew fair was kept, whose shows, machines, and dramatical entertainments, formerly agreeable only to the taste of the rabble, were by the hero of this poem, and others of equal genius, brought to the theatres of Covent-garden, Lincoln's inn-fields, and the Hay-market, to be the reigning pleasures of the court and town. This happened in the reigns of King George I. and II. See Book iii.

Ver. 4. By Dulness, Jove, and Fate:] i. e. by their judgments, their interests, and their inclinations.

Ver. 15. Laborious, heavy, busy, bold, &c.] I wonder the learned Scriblerus has omitted to advertise the reader, at the opening of this poem, that Dulness here is not to be taken contractedly for mere stupidity, but in the enlarged sense of the word, for all slowness of apprehension, shortness of sight, or imperfect sense of things. It includes (as we see by the poet's own words) labour, industry, and some degrees of activity and boldness; a ruling principle not inert, but turning topsy-turvy the understanding, and inducing an anarchy or confused state of mind. This remark ought to be carried along with the reader throughout the work; and without this caution he will be apt to mistake the importance of many of the characters, as well as of the design of the poet. Hence it is that some have complain'd he chooses too mean a subject, and imagin'd he employs himself like Domitian, in killing flies; whereas those who have the true key will find he sports with nohler quarry, and embraces a larger compass; or (as one saith on a like occasion,)

'Will see his work, like Jacob's ladder rise,
 Its foot in dirt, its head amid the skies.' Bentl.

Ver. 17. Still her old empire to restore.] This restoration makes the completion of the poem. Vide Book iv.

Ver. 22. Laugh and shake in Rabelais' easy chair.] The imagery is exquisite; and the equivoque in the last words, gives a peculiar elegance to the whole expression. The easy chair suits his age: Rabelais' easy chair marks his character; and he fill'd and possess'd it as the right heir and successor of that original genius.

Ver. 23. Or praise the court, or magnify mankind.] Ironicc, alluding to Gulliver's representations of both. The next line relates to the papers of the Draper against the currency of Wood's copper coin in Ireland, which, upon the great discontent of the people, his majesty was most graciously pleas'd to recall.

Ver. 26. Mourn not, my Swift, at aught our realm acquires.] Ironicc iterum. The politics of England and Ireland were at this time by some thought to be opposite, or interfering with each other. Dr. Swift of course was in the interest of the latter, our author of the former.

Ver. 31. By his famed father's hand.] Mr. Caius Gabriel

 Hence hymning Tyburn's elegiac lines,
 Hence journals, medleys, Mercuries, magazines,
 Sepulchral lies, our holy walls to grace,
 And new-year odes, and all the Grub-street race.

REMARKS.

Cibber, father of the poet-laureate. The two statues of the lunatics over the gates of Bedlam-hospital were done by him, and (as the son justly says of them) are no ill monuments of his fame as an artist.

Ver. 31. Poverty and poetry.] I cannot here omit a remark that will greatly endear our author to every one, who shall attentively observe that humanity and candour, which every where appears in him towards those unhappy objects of the ridicule of all mankind, the bad poets. He there imputes all scandalous rhymes, scurrilous weekly papers, base flatteries, wretched elegies, songs, and verses (even from those sung at court, to ballads in the street,) not so much to malice or servility as to dulness, and not so much to dulness as to necessity. And thus, at the very commencement of his satire, makes an apology for all that are to be satirized.

Ver. 40. Curl's chaste press, and Lintot's rubric post:] Two booksellers, of whom see Book ii. The former was fined by the Court of King's Bench for publishing obscene books; the latter usually adorned his shop with titles in red letters.

Ver. 41. Hence hymning Tyburn's elegiac lines.] It is an ancient English custom for the malefactors to sing a psalm at their execution at Tyburn; and no less customary to print elegies on their deaths, at the same time, or before.

Ver. 43. Sepulchral lies,] is a just satire on the flatteries and falsehoods admitted to be inscribed on the walls of churches, in epitaphs; which occasioned the following epigram:

'Friend! in your epitaphs, I'm grieved
 So very much is said;
 One half will never be believed,
 The other never read.'

Ver. 44. New-year odes:] Made by the poet-laureate

In clouded majesty here Dulness shone ;
 Four guardian virtues, round, support her throne :
 Fierce champion Fortitude, that knows no fears
 Of hisses, blows, or want, or loss of ears :
 Calm Temperance, whose blessings those partake,
 Who hunger and who thirst for scribbling' sake : 50
 Prudence, whose glass presents the approaching jail:
 Poetic Justice, with her lifted scale,
 Where, in nice balance, truth with gold she weighs,
 And solid pudding against empty praise.

Here she beholds the chaos dark and deep,
 Where nameless somethings in their causes sleep,
 Till genial Jacob, on a warm third day,
 Calls forth each mass, a poem or a play :
 How hints, like spawn, scarce quick in embryo lie ;
 How new-born nonsense first is taught to cry. 60
 Maggots, half-form'd, in rhyme exactly meet,
 And learn to crawl upon poetic feet :
 Here one poor word a hundred clenches makes,
 And ductile Dulness new meanders takes ,
 There motley images her fancy strike,
 Figures ill-pair'd, and similes unlike.
 She sees a mob of metaphors advance,
 Pleased with the madness of the mazy dance ;

REMARKS.

for the time being, to be sung at court on every new-year's day, the words of which are happily drowned in the voices and instruments. The new-year odes of the hero of this work were of a cast distinguished from all that preceded him, and made a conspicuous part of his character as a writer, which doubtless induced our author to mention them here so particularly.

Ver. 45. In clouded majesty here Dulness shone.] See this cloud removed or rolled back, or gathered up to her head, Book iv. ver. 17, 18. It is worth while to compare his description of the majesty of Dulness in a state of peace and tranquillity, with that more busy scene where she mounts the throne in triumph, and is not so much supported by her own virtues, as by the princely consciousness of having destroyed all other.

Ver. 57. Genial Jacob] Tonson. The famous race of booksellers of that name.

 How farce and epic get a jumbled race;                   70
 How Time himself stands still at her command,
 Realms shift their place, and ocean turns to land;
 Here gay description Egypt glads with showers;
 Or gives to Zembla fruits, to Barca flowers;
 Glittering with ice here hoary hills are seen,
 There painted valleys of eternal green,
 In cold December fragrant chaplets blow,
 And heavy harvests nod beneath the snow.

All these, and more, the cloud-compelling queen
 Beholds through fogs, that magnify the scene.           80 name the author had left in blanks, but most certainly could never be that which the editor foisted in formerly, and which no way agrees with the chronology of the poem.

Bentl.

The procession of a lord mayor is made partly by land and partly by water. Cimon, the famous Athenian general, obtained a victory by sea, and another by land on the same day, over the Persians and Barbarians.

 What city swans once sung within the walls ;
 Much she revolves their arts, their ancient praise,
 And sure succession down from Heywood's days,
 She saw with joy, the line immortal run,
 Each sire imprest and glaring in his son : 100
 So watchful Bruin forms, with plastic care,
 Each growing lump, and brings it to a bear.
 She saw old Pryn in restless Daniel shine,
 And Eusden eke out Blackmore's endless line :

REMARKS.

[Ibid. But lived, in Settle's numbers, one day more.] Settle was poet to the city of London. His office was to compose yearly panegyrics upon the lord mayors, and verses to be spoken in the pageants : but that part of the shows being at length frugally abolished, the employment of City-poet ceased ; so that upon Settle's demise, there was no successor to that place.

Ver. 98. John Heywood, whose interludes were printed in the time of Henry VIII.

Ver. 103. Old Pryn in restless Daniel.] The first edition had it, a great mistake ! for Daniel de Foe had parts, but Norton de Foe was a wretched writer, and never attempted poetry. Much more justly is Daniel himself, made successor to W. Pryn, both of whom wrote verses as well as Politics ; as appears by the poem de Jure Divino, &c. of De Foe, and by some lines in Cowley's Miscellanies on the other. And both these authors had a resemblance in their fates as well as their writings, having been alike sentenced to the pillory.

Ver. 101. And Eusden eke out, &c.] Lawrence Eusden, poet laureate. Mr. Jacob gives a catalogue of some few only of his works, which were very numerous. Mr. Cooke, in his Battle of Poets, saith of him,

'Eusden, a laure'd bard by fortune rais'd,
 By very few was read, by fewer praised.'

Mr. Oldmixon, in his Arts of Logic and Rhetoric, p. 413, 414, affirms, 'That of all the Galimatias he ever met with, none comes up to some verses of this poet, which have as much of the ridicule and the fustian in them as can well be jumbled together, and are of that sort of nonsense, which so perfectly confounds all ideas, that there is no distinct one left in the mind.' Farther he says of him, 'That he hath prophesied his own poetry shall be sweeter than Catullus,

She saw slow Phillips creep like Tate's poor page
And all the mighty mad in Dennis rage.

Ovid, and Tibullus: but we have little hope of the accomplishment of it, from what he hath lately published.' Upon which Mr. Oldmixon has not spared a reflection, 'That the putting the laurel on the head of one who writ such verses, will give futurity a very lively idea of the judgment and justice of those who bestowed it.' Ibid. p. 417. But the well-known learning of that noble person, who was then lord chamberlain, might have screened him from this unmannerly reflection. Nor ought Mr. Oldmixon to complain, so long after, that the laurel would have better become his own brows, or any other's: it were more decent to acquiesce in the opinion of the duke of Buckingham upon this matter:

'—In rush'd Eusden, and cried who shall have it,
But I the true laureate, to whom the king gave it?
Apollo begg'd pardon, and granted his claim,
But vow'd that till then he ne'er heard of his name.'

Session of Poets.

The same plea might also serve for his successor, Mr. Cibber: and is further strengthened in the following epigram made on that occasion:

' In merry Old England it once was a rule
The king had his poet, and also his fool;
But now we're so frugal, I'd have you to know it,
That Cibber can serve both for fool and for poet.'

Of Blackmore, see Book ii. Of Phillips, Book i. ver. 262, and Book iii. propæ fin.

Nahum Tate was poet laureate, a cold writer of no invention; but sometimes translated tolerably when befriended by Mr. Dryden. In his second part of Absalom and Achitophel are above two hundred admirable lines together, of that great hand, which strongly shine through the insipidity of the rest. Something parallel may be observed of another author here mentioned.

Ver. 106. And all the mighty mad in Dennis rage.] Mr. Theobald, in the Censor, vol. ii. No. 33, calls Mr. Dennis by the name of Furius. 'The modern Furius is to be looked upon more as an object of pity, than of that which he daily provokes, laughter and contempt. Did we really know how much this poor man' [I wish that reflection on poverty had been spared] 'suffers by being contradicted, or which is the same thing in effect, by hearing another praised; we should, in compassion sometimes attend to him with a silent nod, and let him go away with the triumphs of his ill-nature. —Poor Furius, (again) when any of his contemporaries are spoken well of, quitting the ground of the present dispute, steps back a thousand years to call in the succour of the ancients. His very panegyric is spiteful, and he uses it for the same reason as some ladies do their commendation of a dead beauty, who would never have their good word, but that a living one happened to be mentioned in their company. His applause is not the tribute of his heart, but the sacrifice of his revenge, &c. Indeed, his pieces against our poet are somewhat of an angry character, and as they are now scarce extant, a taste of this style may be satisfactory to the curious. 'A young, squab, short gentleman, whose jutward form, though it should be that of dourwright monkey, would not differ so much from the human shape as his unthinking immaterial part does from human understanding.—He is as stupid and as venomous as a hunchback'd toad. A book through which folly and ignorance, those brethren so lame and impotent, do ridiculously look big and very dull, and strut and hobble, cheek by jowl, with their arms on kimbo, being led and supported, and bully-hack'd by that blind Hector, Impudence.' Reflect. on the Essay on Criticism, p. 26, 29, 30.

It would be unjust not to add his reasons for this fury, they are so strong and so coercive. 'I regard him,' saith he, 'as an enemy, not so much to me, as to my king, to my country, to my religion, and to that liberty which has been the sole felicity of my life. A vagary of fortune, who is sometimes pleased to be frolicsome, and the epidemic madness of the times, have given him reputation, and "reputation," as Hobbes says, "is power," and that has made him dangerous. Therefore I look on it as my duty to King George, whose faithful subject I am; to my country, of which I have appeared a constant lover; to the laws, under whose protection I have so long lived; and to the liberty of my country, more dear to me than life, of which I have now for forty years been a constant asserter, &c.—I look upon it as my duty, I say, to do—you shall see what—to pull the lion's skin from this little ass, which popular error has thrown around him; and to show that this author, who has been lately so much in vogue, has neither sense in his thoughts, nor English in his expression.' Dennis, Rem. on Hom. Pref. p. 2, 91, &c.

Besides these public-spirited reasons, Mr. D. had a private one; which, by his manner of expressing it in p. 92. appears to have been equally strong. He was even in bodily fear of his life, from the machinations of the said Mr. P. 'The story,' says he, 'is too long to be told, but who would be acquainted with it, may hear it from Mr. Curll, my bookseller. However, what my reason has suggested to me, that I have with a just confidence said, in defiance of his two clandestine weapons, his slander and his poison.' Which last words of his book plainly discover Mr. D's suspicion was that of being poisoned, in like manner as Mr. Curll had been before him: of which fact, see a full and true account of the horrid and barbarous revenge, by poison on the body of Edmund Curll, printed in 1716, the year antecedent to that wherein these remarks of Mr. Dennis were published. But what puts it beyond all question, is a passage in a very warm treatise, in which Mr. D. was also concerned, price two-pence, called, A true character of Mr. Pope and his Writings, printed for S. Popping, 1716; in the tenth page whereof he is said 'to have insulted people on those calamities and diseases which he himself gave them, by administering poison to them;' and is called (p. 4.) a 'lurking way-laying coward, and a stabber in the dark.' Which (with many other things most lively set forth in that piece) must have rendered him a terror, not to Mr. Dennis only, but to all Christian people. This charitable warning only provoked our incorrigible poet to write the following epigram:

'Should Dennis publish you had stabb'd your brother,
Lampoon'd your monarch, or debauch'd your mother;
Say, what revenge on Dennis can be had?
Too dull for laughter, for reply too mad:
On one so poor you cannot take the law;
On one so old your sword you scorn to draw;
Uncaged then let the harmless monster rage,
Securo in dulness, madness, want, and age.'

For the rest; Mr. John Dennis was the son of a saddler, in London, born in 1657. He paid court to Mr. Dryden; and having obtained some correspondence with Mr. Wycherley and Mr. Congreve, he immediately obliged the public with their letters. He made himself known to the government by many admirable schemes and projects, which the ministry, for reasons best known to themselves, constantly kept private. For his character as a writer, it is given us as follows: 'Mr. Dennis is excellent at Pindaric writings, perfectly regular in all his performances, and a person of sound learning. That he is master of a great deal of penetration and judgment, his criticisms (particularly on Prince Arthur) do sufficiently demonstrate.' From the same account it also appears that he writ plays 'more to get reputation than money.' Dennis of himself. See Giles Jacob's Lives of Dram. Poets, p. 62, 69, compared with p. 286.

poet here hath done full justice to his hero's character which it were a great mistake to imagine was wholly sunk in stupidity; he is allowed to have supported it with a wonderful mixture of vivacity. This character is heightened according to his own desire, in a letter he wrote to our author: 'Pert and dull at least you might have allowed me. What! am I only to be dull, and dull still, and again, and for ever?' He then solemnly appealed to his own conscience, that 'he could not think himself so, nor believe that our poet did; but that he spake worse of him than he could possibly think; and concluded it must be merely to show his wit, or for some profit or lucre to himself.' Life of C. C. chap. vii. and Letter to Mr. P. page 15, 40, 53. And to show his claim to what the poet was so unwilling to allow him, of being pert as well as dull, he declares he will have the last word; which occasioned the following epigram:

Quoth Cibber to Pope, "Though in verse you foreclose,
 I'll have the last word; for, by G—, I'll write prose."
 Poor Colly, thy reasoning is none of the strongest,
 For know, the last word is the word that lasts longest.

Ver. 115. Supperless the hero sat.] It is amazing how the sense of this hath been mistaken by all the former commentators, who most idly suppose it to imply, that the hero of the poem wanted a supper. In truth, a great absurdity. Not that we are ignorant that the hero of Homer's Odyssey is frequently in that circumstance, and, therefore, it can no way derogate from the grandeur of epic poem to represent such hero under a calamity, to which the greatest, not only of critics and poets, but of kings and warriors, have been subject. But much more refined, I will venture to say, is the meaning of our author: it was to give us obliquely a curious precept, or what Bossu calls a disguised sentence, that 'Temperance is the life of study.' The language of poesy brings all into action; and to represent a critic encompassed with books but without a supper, is a picture which lively expresseth how much the true critic prefers the diet of the mind to that of the body, one of which he always castigates, and often totally neglects, for the greater improvement of the other.

we not add, that nothing was so natural, after so great a loss of money at dice, or of reputation by his play, as that the poet should have no great stomach to eat a supper? Besides, how well has the poet consulted his heroic character, in adding that he has sworn all the time? Bentl.

Ver. 132. The frippery.] 'When I fitted up an old play it was as a good housewife will mend old linen, when she has not better employment.' Life, p. 217, 8vo.

Ver. 133. Hapless Shakspeare, &c.] It is not to be doubted but Bays was a subscriber to Tibbald's Shakspeare. He was frequently liberal in this way; and, as he tells us, 'subscribed to Mr. Pope's Homer out of pure generosity and civility; but when Mr. Pope did so to his Non-juror, he concluded it could be nothing but a joke.' Letter to Mr. P. p. 24.

This Tibbald, or Theobald, published an edition of Shakspeare, of which he was so proud himself as to say, in one of Mist's Journals, June 8, 'That to expose any errors in it was impracticable.' And to another, April 27, 'That whatever care might for the future be taken by any other editor, he would still give about five hundred emendations, that shall escape them all.'

blotted a line.' Ben Jonson honestly wished he had blotted a thousand ; and Shakspeare would certainly have wished the same, if he had lived to see the alterations in his works, which not the actors only (and especially the daring hero of this poem) have made on the stage, but the presumptuous critics of our days in their editions.

Ver. 135. The rest on outside merit, &c.] This library is divided into three parts ; the first consists of those authors from whom he stole, and whose works he mangled ; the second of such as fitted the shelves, or were gilded for show, or adorned with pictures : the third class our author calls solid learning, old bodies of divinity, old commentaries, old English printers, or, old English translations ; all very voluminous, and fit to erect altars to Dulness.

Ver. 141. Ogilby the great:] 'John Ogilby was one, who, from a late initiation into literature, made such a progress as might well style him the prodigy of his time ! sending into the world so many large volumes ! His translations of Homer and Virgil done to the life, and with such excellent sculptures : and (what added great grace to his works) he printed them all on special good paper, and in a very good letter.' Winstanley, Lives of Poets.

Ver. 142. There, stamp'd with arms, Newcastle shines complete:] 'The dutchess of Newcastle was one who busied herself in the ravishing delights of poetry ; leaving to posterity in print three ample volumes of her studious endeavours.' Winstanley, ibid. Langbane reckons up eight folios of her grace's, which were usually adorned with gilded covers, and had her coat of arms upon them.

Ver. 146. Worthy Settle, Banks, and Broome.] The poet has mentioned these three authors in particular, as they are parallel to our hero in his three capacities ; 1. Settle was his brother laureate ; only indeed upon half-pay, for the city instead of the court; but equally famous for unintelligible flights in his poems on public occasions, such as shows, birth-days, &c. 2. Banks was his rival in tragedy though more successful in one of his tragedies, the Earl of Essex, which is yet alive: Anna Boleyn, the Queen of Scots, and Cyrus the Great, are dead and gone. These he dressed in a sort of beggar's velvet, or a happy mixture of the thick fustian and thin prosaic; exactly imitated in Perolla and Isidora, Cæsar in Egypt, and the Heroic Daughter 3. Broome was a serving man of Ben Jonson, who once picked up a comedy from his letters, or from some cast scenes of his master, not entirely contemptible.

Ver. 147. More solid learning.] Some have objected, that books of this sort suit not so well the library of our Bays, which they imagined consisted of novels, plays, and obscene books; but they are to consider that he furnished his shelves only for ornament, and read these books no more than the dry bodies of divinity, which, no doubt, were purchased by his father when he designed him for the gown. See the note on ver. 200.

Ver. 149. Caxton] A printer in the time of Edw. IV. Richard III. and Hen. VII.; Wynkyn de Word, his successor, in that of Hen. VII. and VIII. The former translated into prose Virgil's Æneis, as a history; of which he speaks, in his proeme, in a very singular manner, as of a book hardly known. Tibbald quotes a rare passage from him in Mist's Journal of March 16, 1728, concerning a strange and marvellous beast, called Sagittayre, which he would have Shakspeare to mean rather than Teucer, the archer celebrated by Homer.

Ver. 153. Nich de Lyra, or Harpsfield, a very voluminous commentator, whose works, in five vast folios, were printed in 1472.

Ver. 154. Philemon Holland, doctor in physic. 'He translated so many books, that a man would think he had done nothing else; insomuch that he might be called translator general of his age. The books alone of his turning into English are sufficient to make a country gentleman a complete library.

REMARKS.

Ver. 167. E'er since sir Fopling's periwig.' The first visible cause of the passion of the town for our hero, was a fair flaxen full-bottomed periwig, which, he tells us, he wore in his first play of the Fool in Fashion. It attracted, in a particular manner, the friendship of Col. Brett, who wanted to purchase it. 'Whatever contempt,' says he, 'philosophers may have for a fine periwig, my friend, who was not to despise the world, but to live in it, knew very well, that so material an article of dress upon the head of a man of sense, if it became him, could never fail of drawing to him a more partial regard and benevolence, than could possibly be hoped for in an ill-made one. This, perhaps, may soften the grave censure which so youthful a purchase might otherwise have laid upon him. In a word, he made his attack upon this periwig, as your young fellows generally do upon a lady of pleasure, first by a few familiar praises of her person, and then a civil inquiry into the price of it ; and we finished our bargain that night over a bottle.' See Life, 8vo. p. 303. This remarkable periwig usually made its entrance upon the stage in a sedan, brought in by two chairmen, with infinite approbation of the audience.

Ver. 178, 179. Guard the sure barrier—Or quite unravel, &c.] For wit or reasoning are never greatly hurtful to dulness, but when the first is founded in truth, and the other in usefulness.

Ver. 181. As, forced from wind-guns, &c.] The thought of these four verses is founded in a poem of our author's of a very early date (namely, written at fourteen years old, and soon after printed,) to the author of a poem called Successio.

Ver. 198. Gray-goose weapon.] Alluding to the old English weapon, the arrow of the long-bow, which was fletched with the feathers of the gray-goose.

Ver. 199. My Fletcher] A familiar manner of speaking, used by modern critics, of a favourite author. Bays might as justly speak this of Fletcher, as a French wit did of Tully, seeing his works in a library, Ah! mon cher Ciceron!

Or tread the path by venturous heroes trod,
 This box my thunder, this right hand my god?
 Or, chair'd at White's, amidst the doctors sit,

 And cackling save the monarchy of Tories?

REMARKS.

je le connois bien: c'est le meme que Marc Tulle. But he had a better title to call Fletcher his own, having made so free with him.

Ver. 200. Take up the Bible, once my better guide?] When, according to his father's intention, he had been a clergyman, or (as he thinks himself,) a bishop of the church of England. Hear his own words: 'At the time that the fate of King James, the prince of Orange, and myself, were on the anvil, Providence thought fit to postpone mine, till theirs were determined; but had my father carried me a month sooner to the university, who knows but that purer fountain might have washed my imperfections into a capacity of writing, instead of plays and annual odes, sermons, and pastoral letters!'—Apology for his Life, chap. iii.

Ver. 203. At White's amidst the doctors] These doctors had a modest and upright appearance, no air of overbearing; but, like true masters of art, were only habited in black and white: they were justly styled subtiles and graves, but not always irrefragables, being sometimes examined, and by a nice distinction, divided and laid open. Scribl.

This learned critic is to be understood allegorically. The doctors in this place mean no more than false dice, a cant phrase used among gamesters. So the meaning of these four sonorous lines is only this, 'Shall I play fair or foul?'

Ver. 208. Ridpath—Mist.] George Ridpath, author of a Whig paper, called the Flying-post; Nathaniel Mist of a famous Tory journal.

Ver. 211. Or rob Rome's ancient geese of all their glories.] Relates to the well-known story of the geese that saved the Capitol; of which Virgil, Æn. viii.

'Atque hic auratis volitans argenteus anser

 And see! thy very Gazetteers give o'er;

 Cibberian forehead, and Cibberian brain.

REMARKS.

A passage I have always suspected. Who sees not the antithesis of auratis and argenteus to be unworthy the Virgilian majesty? And what absurdity to say a goose sings? canebat. Virgil gives a contrary character of the voice of this silly bird, in Ecl. ix.

'—argutos inter strepere anser olores.'

Read it, therefore, adisse strepbat. And why auratis porticibus? does not the very verse preceding this inform us,

'Romuleoque recens horrebat regia culmo.'

Is this that in one line, and gold in another, consistent? I scruple not (repugnantibus omnibus manuscriptis) to correct it auritis. Horace uses the same epithet in the same sense,

'Auritas fidibus canoris
 Ducere quoreus.'

And to say that walls have ears is common even to a proverb. Scribl.

Ver. 212. And cackling save the monarchy of Tories? Not out of any preference or affection to the Tories. For what Hobbes so ingeniously confesses of himself, is true of all ministerial writers whatsoever; 'That he defends the supreme powers, as the geese by their cackling defended the Romans, who held the Capitol; for they favoured them no more than the Gauls, their enemies; but were as ready to have defended the Gauls if they had been possessed of the Capitol.' Epis. Dedic. to the Leviathan.

Ver. 215. Gazetteers.] A band of ministerial writers, bired at the prices mentioned in the note on book ii. ver. 316, who, on the very day their patron quitted his post, laid down their paper, and declared they would never more meddle in politics.

Ver. 218. Cibberian forehead.] So indeed all the MSS. read; but I make no scruple to pronounce them all wrong the laureate being elsewhere celebrated by our poet for his great modesty—modest Cibber—Read, therefore, at my peril, Cerberian forehead. This is perfectly classical, and, what is more, Homeric; the dog was the ancient, as the bitch is the modern symbol of impudence: (Κυνος ομματ

Ver. 225. O born in sin, &c.] This is a tender and passionate apostrophe to his own works, which he is going to sacrifice, agreeable to the nature of man in great affliction: and reflecting, like a parent, on the many miserable fates to which they would otherwise be subject.

Ver. 250. Now flames the Cid, &c.] In the first notes on the Dunciad it was said, that this author was particularly excellent at tragedy. 'This,' says he, 'is as unjust as to say I could not dance on a rope.' But certain it is, that he had attempted to dance on this rope, and fell most shamefully, having produced no less than four tragedies (the names of which the poet preserves in these few lines;) the three first of them were fairly printed, acted, and damned; the fourth suppressed in fear of the like treatment.

Ver. 286. Tibbald.] Lewis Tibbald (as pronounced) or Theobald (as written) was bred an attorney, and son to an attorney, says Mr. Jacob, of Sittenburn, in Kent. He was the author of some forgotten plays, translations, and other pieces. He was concerned in a paper called the Censor, and a translation of Ovid. 'There is a notorious idiot, one hight Wachum, who from an under-spur-leather to the law, is become an understrapper to the playhouse, who has lately burlesqued the Metamorphoses of Ovid by a vile translation, &c. This fellow is concerned in an impertinent paper called the Censor.'—Dennis, Rem. on Pope's Homer, p. 9, 10.

Ibid. Ozell.] 'Mr. John Ozell, if we credit Mr. Jacob, did go to school in Leicestershire, where somebody left him something to live on, when he shall retire from business. He was designed to be sent to Cambridge, in order for priesthood; but he chose rather to be placed in an office of accounts, in the city, being qualified for the same by his skill in arithmetic, and writing the necessary hands. He has obliged the world with many translations of French plays.'—Jacob, Lives of Dram. Poets, p. 128.

Mr. Jacob's character of Mr. Ozell seems vastly short of his merits, and he ought to have further justice done him, having since confuted all sarcasms on his learning and genius, by an advertisement of Sept. 20, 1729, in a paper called the Weekly Medley, &c. 'As to my learning, this envious wretch knew, and every body knows, that the whole bench of bishops, not long ago, were pleased to give me a purse of guineas, for discovering the erroneous translations of the Common-prayer in Portuguese, Spanish, French, Italian, &c. Under this pretence, the groom-porter had a room appropriated to gaming all the summer the court was at Kensington, which his majesty accidentally being acquainted with, with a just indignation prohibited. It is reported the same practice is yet continued wherever the court resides, and the hazard table there open to all the professed gamblers in town.

'When laureates make odes, do you ask of what sort?
 Do you ask if they're good, or are evil?
 You may judge—from the Devil they come to the court,
 And go from the court to the devil.'

Ver. 328.—Ogilby—God save king Log!] See Ogilby's Æsop's Fables, where, in the story of the Frogs and their King, this excellent hemistich is to be found.

Our author manifests here, and elsewhere, a prodigious tenderness for the bad writers. We see he selects the only good passage, perhaps, in all that ever Ogilby writ! which shows how candid and patient a reader he must have been. What can be more kind and affectionate than the words in the preface to his poems, where he labours to call upon all our humanity and forgiveness towards these unlucky men, by the most moderate representation of their case that has ever been given by any author?

But how much all indulgence is lost upon these people may appear from the just reflection made on their constant conduct and constant fate, in the following epigram:

Ye little wits, that glean'd awhile,
 When Pope vouchsafed a ray;
 Alas! deprived of his kind smile,
 How soon ye fade away!
 'To compass Phœbus' car about,
 Thus empty vapours rise,
 Each lends his cloud to put him out,
 That rear'd him to the skies.
 Alas! those skies are not your sphere;
 There he shall ever burn:
 Weep, weep, and fall! for earth ye were,
 And must to earth return.'

Two things there are, upon the supposition of which the very basis of all verbal criticism is founded and suppo:ted—

BOOK THE SECOND.

ARGUMENT.

The king being proclaimed, the solemnity is graced with public games and sports of various kinds; not instituted by the hero, as by Æneas in Virgil, but, for greater honour, by the goddess in person, (in like manner as the games of Pythia, Isthmia, &c. were anciently said to be ordained by the gods, and as Thetis herself appearing, according to Homer, Odyss. xxiv. proposed the prizes in honour of her son Achilles.) Hither flock the poets and critics, attended, as is but just, with their patrons and booksellers. The goddess is first pleased, for her disport, to propose games to the booksellers, and setteth up the phantom of a poet, which they contend to overtake. The races described, with their divers accidents. Next the game for a poetess. Then follow the exercises for the poets, of tickling, vociferating, diving. The first holds forth the arts and practices of dedicators, the second of disputants and fustian poets, the third of profound, dark, and dirty party-writers. Lastly, for the critics, the the first, that an author could never fail to use the best word on every occasion: the second, that a critic cannot choose but know which that is. This being granted, whenever any word doth not fully content us, we take upon us to conclude, first, that the author could never have used it; and, secondly, that he must have used that very one, which we conjecture, in its stead.

We cannot, therefore, enough admire the learned Scriblers, for his alteration of the text in the last two verses of the preceding book, which in all the former editions stood thus:

Hoarse thunder to its bottom shook the bog,
And the leud nation croak'd, 'God save king Log.'

He has, with great judgment, transposed these two epithets; putting hoarse to the nation, and loud to the thunder; and this being evidently the true reading, he vouchsafed not so much as to mention the former: for which assertion of the just right of a critic he merits the acknowledgment of all sound commentators.

goddess proposes, (with great propriety) an exercise, not of their parts, but their patience, in hearing the works of two voluminous authors, one in verse, and the other in prose, deliberately read, without sleeping. the various effects of which, with the several degrees and manners of their operation, are here set forth; till the whole number, not of critics only, but of spectators, actors, and all present, fall asleep; which naturally and necessarily ends the games.

Ver. 2. Henley's gilt tub,] The pulpit of a dissenter is usually called a tub; but that of Mr. Orator Henley was covered with velvet, and adorned with gold. He had also a fair altar, and over it this extraordinary inscription: 'The primitive eucharist.' See the history of this person, book iii.

Ver. 2. or Fleckno's Irish throne,] Richard Fleckno was an Irish priest, but had laid aside (as himself expressed it) the mechanic part of priesthood. He prioted some plays, poems, letters, and travels. I doubt not, our author took occasion to mention him in respect to the poem of Mr. Dryden, to which this bears some resemblance, though of a character more different from it than that of the Æneid from the Iliad, or the Lutrin of Boileau from the Defait de Bouts rimees of Sarazin.

It may be just worth mentioning, that the eminence from whence the ancient sophists entertained their auditors, was called by the pompous name of a throne. Themistius, Orat. i.

strated, that his brothers, at Bedlam, mentioned Book i. were not brazen, but blocks; yet our author let it pass unaltered, as a trifle that no way altered the relationship.

We should think, gentle reader, that we but ill performed our part, if we corrected not as well our own errors now, as formerly those of the printer; since what moved us to this work, was solely the love of truth, not in the least any vain glory, or desire to contend with great authors. And further, our mistakes, we conceive, will the rather be pardoned, as scarce possible to be avoided in writing of such persons and works as do ever shun the light. However, that we may not any how soften or extenuate the same, we give them thee in the very words of our antagonists; not defending, but retracting them from our heart, and craving excuse of the parties offended: for surely in this work, it hath been above all things our desire to provoke no man. Scribl.

Ver. 15. Rome in her Capitol saw Querno sit.] Camillo Querno was of Apulia, who hearing the great encouragement which Leo X. gave to poets, travelled to Rome with a harp in his hand, and sung to it twenty thousand verses of a poem called Alexins. He was introduced as a buffoon to Leo, and promoted to the honour of the laurel; a jest which the court of Rome and the pope himself entered into so far, as to cause him to ride on an elephant to the Capitol, and to hold a solemn festival on his coronation; at which it is recorded the poet himself was so transported as to weep for sibility of Dulness making a wit (which could be done no other way than by chance.) The fiction is the more reconciled to probability by the known story of Apelles, who, being at a loss to express the foam of Alexander's horse, dashed his pencil in despair at the picture, and happened to do it by that fortunate stroke.

Ver. 50. And call'd the phantom More.] Cull, in his Key to the Dunciad, affirmed this to be James Moore Smith, Esq. and it is probable (considering what is said of him in the testimonials) that some might fancy our author obliged to represent this gentleman as a plagiarist, or to pass for one himself. His case, indeed, was like that of a man I have heard of, who, as he was sitting in company, perceived his next neighbour had stolen his handkerchief: 'Sir,' said the thief, finding himself detected, 'do not expose me, I did it for mere want; be so good but to take it privately out of my pocket again, and say nothing.' The honest man did so, but the other cried out, 'See, gentlemen, what a thief we have among us! look, he is stealing my handkerchief!'

- Some time before, he had borrowed of Dr. Arbuthnot a paper called a Historico-physical account of the South Sea; and of Mr. Pope the memoirs of a Parish Clerk, which for two years he kept, and read to the Rev. Dr. Young, F. Billers, Esq. and many others, as his own. Being applied to for them, he pretended they were lost; but there happening to be another copy of the latter, it came out in Swift's and Pope's Miscellanies. Upon this, it seems, he was so far mistaken as to confess his proceeding by an endeavour to hide it: unguardedly prioting (in the Daily Journal of April 3, 1723.) 'That the contempt which he and others had for those pieces, (which only himself had shown, and handed about as his own,) occasioned their being lost, and for that cause only not returned.' A fact, of which as none but he could be conscious, none but he could be the publisher of it. The plagiarisms of this person gave occasion to the following epigram:

'Moore always smiles whenever he recites;
He smiles (you think) approving what he writes.
And yet in this no vanity is shown;
A modest man may like what's not his own.'

This young gentleman's whole misfortune was too inordinate a passion to be thought a wit. Here is a very strong instance attested by Mr. Savage, son of the late Earl Rivers; who having shown some verses of his in manuscript to Mr. Moore, wherein Mr. Pope was called first of the tuneful train, Mr. Moore the next morning sent to Mr. Savage to desire him to give those verses another turn, to wit, 'That Pope might now be the first, because Moore had left him unrivalled, in turning his style to comedy.' This was during the rehearsal of the Rival Modes, his first and only work ; the town condemned it in the action, but he printed it in 1726-7, with this modest motto :

'Hic cæstus, artemque repono.'

The smaller pieces which we have heard attributed to this author are, An Epigram on the Bridge at Blenheim, by Dr. Evans : Cosmelia, by Mr. Pit, Mr. Jones, &c. The Mock Marriage of a mad Divine, with a Cl. for a Parson, by Dr. W. The Saw-pit, a Simile, by a Friend. Certain Physical Works on Sir James Baker ; and some unowned Letters, Advertisements, and Epigrams against our author in the Daily Journal.

Notwithstanding what is here collected of the person imagined by Curll to be meant in this place, we cannot be of that opinion ; since our poet had certainly no need of vindicating half a dozen verses to himself, which every reader had done for him ; since the name itself is not spelled Moore, but More ; and, lastly, since the learned Scriblerus has so well proved the contrary.

Ver. 50. The phantom More.] It appears from hence, that this is not the name of a real person, but fictitious. More from μωρος ; stultus, μωρία, stultitia, to represent the folly of a plagiary. Thus Erasmus : Admonuit me Mori cognomen tibi, quod tam ad Morie vocabulum accedit quam es ipse a re alienus. Dedication of Morie Encomium to sir Thomas More ; the farewell of which may be our author's to his plagiary, Vale, More ! et moriam tuam gnariter defende. Adieu, More ! and be sure strongly to defend thy own folly. Scribl.

Ver. 53. But lofty Lintot.] We enter here upon the episode of the booksellers ; persons, whose names being more known and famous in the learned world than those of the authors in this poem, do therefore need less explanation. The action of Mr. Lintot here imitates that of Dares in Virgil, rising just in this manner to lay hold of a bull. This eminent bookseller printed the Rival Modes before mentioned.

Fear held them mute. Alone, untaught to fear,
 Stood dauntless Curll : ' Behold that rival here !
 The race by vigour, not by vaunts is won :
 So take the hindmost, Hell !' he said, and run. 60
 Swift as a bard the bailiff leaves behind,
 He left huge Lintot, and out-stripp'd the wind.

REMARKS.

Ver. 53. Stood dauntless Curll:] We come now to a character of much respect, that of Mr. Edmund Curll. As a plain repetition of great actions is the best praise of them, we shall only say of this eminent man, that he carried the trade many lengths beyond what it ever before arrived at; and that he was the envy and admiration of all his profession. He possessed himself of a command over all authors whatever: he caused them to write what he pleased; they could not call their very names their own. He was not only famous among these; he was taken notice of by the state, the church, and the law, and received particular marks of distinction from each.

It will be owned that he is here introduced with all possible dignity. He speaks like the intrepid Diomede; he runs like the swift-footed Achilles: if he falls, 'tis like the beloved Nisus; and (what Homer makes to be the chief of all praises) he is favoured of the gods: he says but three words, and his prayer is heard; a goddess conveys it to the seat of Jupiter: though he loses the prize, he gains the victory; the great mother herself comforts him, she inspires him with expedients, she honours him with an immortal present (such as Achilles receives from Thetis, and Æneas from Venus,) at once instructive and prophetic: after this he is unrivalled, and triumphant.

The tribute our author here pays him is a grateful return for several unmerited obligations; many weighty animadversions on the public affairs, and many excellent and diverting pieces on private persons, has he given to his name. If ever he owed two verses to any other, he owed Mr. Curll some thousands. He was every day extending his fame, and enlarging his writings: witness innumerable instances; but it shall suffice only to mention the Court Poems, which he meant to publish as the work of the true writer, a lady of quality; but being threatened first, and afterwards punished for it by Mr. Pope, he generously transferred it from her to him, and ever since printed it in his name. The single time that ever he spoke to Mr. C. was on that affair, and to that happy incident he owed all the favour since received from him: so true is the saying of Dr. Sydenham, 'that any one shall be, at some time or other, the better or the worse, for having but seen or spoken to a good or bad man.

As when a dab-chick waddles through the copse
 On feet and wings, and flies, and wades, and hops:
 So labouring on, with shoulder, hands, and head,
 Wide as a wind-mill all his figure spread,
 With arms expanded Bernard rows his state,
 And left-legg'd Jacob seems to emulate.
 Full in the middle way there stood a lake
 Which Curll's Corinna chanced that morn to make;
 (Such was her wont, at early dawn to drop 7
 Her evening cates before his neighbour's shop)
 Here fortun'd Curll to slide; loud shout the band,
 And Bernard! Bernard! rings through all the Strand.
 Obscene with filth the miscreant lies bewray'd,
 Fall'n in the plash his wickedness had laid:
 Then first (if poets aught of truth declare)
 The caitiff vaticide conceived a prayer:
 'Hear, Jove! whose name my bards and I adore,
 As much at least as any gods or more; 80
 And him and his if more devotion warms,
 Down with the Bible, up with the pope's arms.'
 A place there is, betwixt earth, air, and seas,
 Where, from ambrosia, Jove retires for ease.
 There in his seat two spacious vents appear,
 On this he sits, to that he leans his ear,
 And hears the various vows of fond mankind;
 Some beg an eastern, some a western wind;

REMARKS.

Ver. 70. Curll's Corinna.] This name, it seems, was taken by one Mrs. Thomas, who procured some private letters of Mr. Pope, while almost a boy, to Mr. Cromwell, and sold them without the consent of either of those gentlemen, to Curll, who printed them in 12mo, 1727. He discovered her to be the publisher, in his Key, p. 11. We only take this opportunity of mentioning the manner in which those letters got abroad, which the author was ashamed of as very trivial things, full not only of levities, but of wrong judgments of men and books, and only excusable from the youth and inexperience of the writer.

Ver. 82. Down with the Bible, up with the pope's arms.] The Bible, Curll's sign; the Cross Keys, Lintot's.

All vain petitions mounting to the sky,
 With reams abundant this abode supply ; 90
 Amused he reads, and then returns the bills
 Sign'd with that ichor which from gods distills.

In office here fair Cloacina stands,
 And ministers to Jove with purest hands.
 Forth from the heap she pick'd her votary's prayer,
 And placed it next him, a distinction rare !
 Oft had the goddess heard her servant's call,
 From her black grottos near the Temple-wall,
 Listening delighted to the jest unclean
 Of link-boys vile, and waterman obscene ; 100
 Where, as he fish'd her nether realms for wit,
 She oft had favour'd him, and favours yet.
 Renew'd by ordure's sympathetic force,
 As oil'd with magic juices for the course,
 Vigorous he rises ; from the effluvia strong,
 Imbibes new life, and scours and stinks along :
 Re-passes Lintot, vindicates the race,
 Nor heeds the brown dishonours of his face.

And now the victor stretch'd his eager hand
 Where the tall nothing stood or seem'd to stand : 110
 A shapeless shade, it melted from his sight,
 Like forms in clouds, or visions of the night,
 To seize his papers, Curll, was next thy care ;
 His papers light, fly diverse, toss'd in air :
 Songs, sonnets, epigrams, the winds uplift,
 And whisk them back to Evans, Young, and Swift.
 The embroider'd suit at least he deem'd his prey,
 That suit an unpaid tailor snatch'd away.

Ver. 116. Evans, Young, and Swift.] Some of those persons, whose writings, epigrams, or jests he had owned. See note on ver. 50.

Ver. 118. An unpaid tailor] This line has been loudly complained of in Mist, June 8, Dedicated to Sawney, and others, as a most inhuman satire on the poverty of poets

Heaven rings with laughter: of the laughter vain

Three wicked imps, of her own Grub-street choir,
She deck'd like Congreve, Addison and Prior;
Mears, Warner, Wilkins, run! delusive thought!

Curll stretches after Gay, but Gay is gone,
He grasps an empty Joseph for a John:

REMARKS.

out it is thought our author will be acquitted by a jury of sailors. To me this instance seems unluckily chosen; if it be a satire on any body, it must be on a bad pay-master since the person to whom they have here applied it, was a man of fortune. Not but poets may well be jealous of so great a prerogative as non-payment; which Mr. Dennis so far asserts, as boldly to pronounce, that, 'if Homer himself was not in debt, it was because nobody would trust him.'—Pref. to Rem. on the Rape of the Lock, p. 15.

Ver. 124. Like Congreve, Addison, and Prior;] These authors being such whose names will reach posterity, we shall not give any account of them, but proceed to those of whom it is necessary.—Besaleel Morris was author of some satires on the translators of Homer, with many other things printed in newspapers—'Bond writ a satire against Mr. P.—Capt. Breval was author of the Confederates, an ingenious dramatic performance, to expose Mr. P., Mr. Gay, Dr. Arbuthnot, and some ladies of quality,' says Curll, Key, p. 11.

Ver. 125. Mears, Warner, Wilkins] Booksellers and Printers of much anonymous stuff.

Ver. 126. Breval, Bond, Besaleel,] I foresee it will be objected from this line, that we were in an error in our assertion on ver. 50 of this book, that More was a fictitious name, since those persons are equally represented by the poet as phantoms. So at first sight it may be seen; but be not deceived, reader; these also are not real persons. 'Tis true, Curll declares Breval a captain, author of a piece called The Confederates; but the same Curll first said it was written by Joseph Gay. Is his second assertion to be credited any more than his first? He likewise affirms Bond to be one who writ a satire on our poet: but where is such a satire to be found? where was such a writer ever heard of? As for Besaleel, it carries forgery in the very name; nor is it, as the others are, a surname. Thou mayest depend upon it no such authors ever lived: all phantoms. Scribl.

 So shall each hostile name become our own,
 And we too boast our Garth and Addison.' 140

REMARKS.

before several pamphlets, which made them pass with many for Mr. Gay's.—The ambiguity of the word Joseph, which likewise signifies a loose upper coat, gives much pleasantry to the idea.

Ver. 132. And turn this whole illusion on the town:] It was a common practice of this bookseller to publish vile pieces of obscure hands under the names of eminent authors.

Ver. 138. Cook shall be Prior:] The man here specified writ a thing called The Battle of the Poets, in which Phillips and Welsted were the heroes, and Swift and Pope utterly routed. He also published some malevolent things in the British, London, and Daily Journals; and at the same time wrote letters to Mr. Pope, protesting his innocence. His chief work was a translation of Hesiod, in which Theobald writ notes and half notes, which he carefully owned.

Ver. 138. And Concanen, Swift:] In the first edition of this poem there were only asterisks in this place, but the names were since inserted, merely to fill up the verse, and give ease to the ear of the reader.

Ver. 140. And we too boast our Garth and Addison.] Nothing is more remarkable than our author's love of praising good writers. He has in this very poem celebrated Mr. Locke, Sir Isaac Newton, Dr. Barrow, Dr. Atterbury, Mr. Dryden, Mr. Congreve, Dr. Garth, Mr. Addison; in a word, almost every man of his time that deserved it; even Cibber himself, (presuming him to be the author of the Careless Husband.) It was very difficult to have that pleasure in a poem on this subject, yet he has found means to insert their panegyric, and has made even Dulness out of her own mouth pronounce it. It must have been particularly agreeable to him to celebrate Dr. Garth; both as his constant friend, and as he was his predecessor in this kind of satire. The Dispensary attacked the whole body of apothecaries, & much more useful one undoubtedly than that of the bad poets; if in truth this can be a body, of which no two members ever agreed. It also did, what Mr. Theobald says is unpardonable, draw in parts of private character, and introduce persons independent of his subject. Much more would Boileau have incurred his censure, who left all subjects whatever, on all occasions, to fall upon the bad poets (which, it is to be feared, would have been more immediately his concern.) But certainly next to commending good writers, the greatest service to learning is to expose the bad, who can only that way be made of any use to it. This truth is very well set forth in these lines, addressed to our author:

'The craven rook, and pert jackdaw
(Though neither birds of moral kind,
Yet serve if hang'd, or stuff'd with straw,
To show us which way blows the wind.

'Thus dirty knaves, or chattering fools,
Strung up by dozens in thy lay,
Teach more by half than Dennis' rules,
And point instruction every way.

'With Egypt's art thy pen may strive:
One potent drop let this hut shed,
And every rogue that stunk alive,
Becomes a precious mummy dead.

Ver. 142. Rueful length of face.] 'The decrepit person or figure of a man are no reflections upon his genius. An honest mind will love and esteem a man of worth, though he be deformed or poor. Yet the author of the Dunciad hath libell'd a person for his rueful length of face!' Mist's Journal, June 8. This genius and man of worth, whom an honest mind should love, is Mr. Curll. True it is, he stood in the pillory, an incident which will lengthen the face of any man, though it were ever so comely, therefore is no reflection on the natural beauty of Mr. Curll. But as to reflections on any man's face or figure, Mr. Dennis saith excellently; 'Natural deformity comes not by our fault; it is often occasioned by calamities and diseases, which a man can no more help than a monster can his deformity. There is no one misfortune, and no one disease, but what all the rest of mankind are subject to.—But the deformity of this author is visible, present, lasting, unalterable, and peculiar to himself. 'Tis the mark of God and nature upon him, to give us warning that we should hold no society with him, as a creature not of our original, nor of our species : and they who have refused to take this warning which God and nature has given them, and have, in spite of it, by a senseless presumption ventured to be familiar with him, have severely suffered, &c. 'Tis certain his original is not from Adam, but from the devil,' &c.—Dennis, Character of Mr. P. octavo, 1716.

Admirably it is observed by Mr. Dennis against Mr. Law, p. 33. 'That the language of Billingsgate can never be the language of charity, nor consequently of christianity.' I should else be tempted to use the language of a critic ; for what is more provoking to a commentator, than to behold his author thus portrayed ? Yet I consider it really hurts not him ! whereas to call some others dull, might do them prejudice with a world too apt to believe it. Therefore, though Mr. D. may call another a little ass, or a young toad, far be it from us to call him a toothless lion, or an old serpent. Indeed, had I written these notes (as was once my intent) in the learned language, I might have given him the appellations balatro, calceatum caput, scurra in triviis, being phrases in good esteem and frequent usage among the best learned : but in our mother-tongue, were I to tax any gentleman of the Dunciad, surely it would be in words not to the vulgar intelligible ; whereby christian charity, decency, and good accord among authors, might be preserved.

Scribl.

The good Scriblerus here, as on all occasions, eminently shows his humanity. But it was far otherwise with the gentlemen of the Dunciad, whose scurrilities were always personal, and of that nature which provoked every honest man but Mr. Pope ; yet never to be lamented, since they occasioned the following amiable verses :

'While malice, Pope, denies thy'page
Its own celestial fire ;
While critics, and while hards in rage,
Admiring, won't admire :
While wayward pens thy worth assail,
And envions tongues decry ;
These times, though many a friend bewail,
These times bewail not I.
But when the world's loud praise is thine,
And spleen no more shall blame,
When with thy Homer thou shalt shine
In one established fame :

 And the fresh vomit run for ever green !'

He was sentenced to be whipped through several towns in the west of England, upon which he petitioned king James II. to be hanged. When that prince died in exile, he wrote an invective against his memory, occasioned by some humane elegies on his death. He lived to the time of queen Anne.

Ver. 149. There Ridpath, Roper,] Authors of the Flying-post and Post-boy, two scandalous papers on different sides, for which they equally and alternately deserved to be cudgelled, and were so.

Ver. 151. Himself among the storied chiefs he spies,] The history of Curll's being tossed in a blanket, and whipped by the scholars of Westminster, is well known. Of his purging and vomiting, see A full and true Account of a horrid Revenge on the Body of Edmund Curll, &c. in Swift's and Pope's Miscellanies.

REMARKS.

Ver. 157. See in the circle next, Eliza placed,] In this name is exposed, in the most contemptuous manner, the profligate licentiousness of those shameless scribblers (for the most part of that sex which ought least to be capable of such malice or impudence) who, in libellous memoirs and novels, reveal the faults or misfortunes of both sexes, to the ruin of public fame, or disturbance of private happiness. Our good poet (by the whole cast of his work being obliged not to take off the irony) where he could not show his indignation, hath shown his contempt, as much as possible; having here drawn as vile a picture as could be represented in the colours of epic poesy. Scribl.

Ibid. Eliza Haywood; this woman was authoress of those most scandalous books called the Court of Carimania and the New Utopia. For the two babes of love, see Curll, Key, p. 22. But whatever reflection he is pleased to throw upon this lady, surely it was what from him she little deserved, who had celebrated Curll's undertakings for reformation of manners, and declared herself 'to be so perfectly acquainted with the sweetness of his disposition, and that tenderness with which he considered the errors of his fellow creatures, that, though she should find the little inadvertencies of her own life recorded in his papers, she was certain it would be done in such a manner as she could not but approve.' ## REMARKS.

Utopia, &c.] This man published advertisements for a year together, pretending to sell Mr. Pope's subscription books of Homer's Iliad at half the price ; of which book he had none, but cut to the size of them (which was quarto) the common books in folio, without copper-plates, on a worse paper, and never above half the value.

Upon this advertisement the Gazetteer harangued thus, July 6, 1739 ; 'How melancholy must it be to a writer to be so unhappy as to see his works hawked for sale in a manner so fatal to his fame ! How, with honour to yourself, and justice to your subscribers, can this be done ? What an ingratitude to be charged on the only honest poet that lived in 1738 ! and than whom virtue has not had a shriller trumpeter for many ages ! That you were once generally admired and esteemed, can be denied by none ; but that you and your works are now despised, is verified by this fact ;' which being utterly false, did not much indeed humble the author, but drew this just chastisement on the bookseller.

Ver. 183. Through half the heavens he pours the exalted urn ;] In a manuscript Dunciad (where are some marginal corrections of some gentlemen some time deceased) I have found another reading of these lines : thus,

Osborne, through perfect modesty o'ercome,
Crown'd with the jordan, walks contented home.

But now for authors nobler palms remain; 191

Room for my lord! three jockeys in his train;
Six huntsmen with a shout precede his chair:
He grins, and looks broad nonsense with a stare.

His honour's meaning Dulness thus express'd,

He wins his patron who can tickle best.'

He chinks his purse, and takes his seat of state:

With ready quills the dedicators wait;

Now at his head the dexterous task commence,

And, instant, fancy feels the imputed sense; 200

Now gentle touches wanton o'er his face,

He struts Adonis, and affects grimace:

REMARKS.

'And lifts his urn, through half the heavens to flow;

His rapid waters in their passage glow.'

This I cannot but think the right: for, first, though the difference between burn and glow may seem not very material to others, to me I confess the latter has an elegance, a je ne scay quoy, which is much easier to be conceived than explained. Secondly, every reader of our poet must have observed how frequently he uses this word, glow, in other parts of his works: to instance only in his Homer:

(1.) Iliad ix. ver. 726.—With one resentment glows.

(2.) Iliad xi. ver. 626.—There the battle glows.

(3.) Ibid. ver. 985.—The closing flesh that instant ceased to glow.

(4.) Iliad xii. ver. 45.—Encompass'd Hector glows.

(5.) Ibid. ver. 475.—His beating breast with generous ardour glows.

(6.) Iliad xviii. ver. 591.—Another part glow'd with refulgent arms.

(7.) Ibid. ver. 654.—And curl'd on silver props in order glow.

I am afraid of growing too luxuriant in examples, or I could stretch this catalogue to a great extent; but these are enough to prove his fondness for this beautiful word, which, therefore, let all future editions replace here.

I am aware, after all, that burn is the proper word to convey an idea of what was said to be Mr. Curl's condition at this time; but from that very reason I infer the direct contrary. For surely every lover of our author will conclude he had more humanity than to insult a man on such a misfortune or calamity, which could never befall him purely

Rolli the feather to his ear conveys,

by his own fault, but from an unhappy communication with another. This note is half Mr. Theobald, half Scribl.

Ver. 203. Paolo Antonio Rolli,] An Italian poet and writer of many operas in that language, which, partly by the help of his genius, prevailed in England near twenty years. He taught Italian to some fine gentlemen, who affected to direct the operas.

Ver. 205. Bentley his mouth, &c.] Not spoken of the famous Dr. Richard Bentley, but of one Tho. Bentley, a small critic, who aped his uncle in a little Horace. The great one was intended to be dedicated to the lord Halifax, but (on a change of the ministry) was given to the earl of Oxford: for which reason the little one was dedicated to his son the lord Harley.

Ver. 207. Welsted.] Leonard Welsted, author of the Triumvirate, or a Letter in Verse from Palamon to Celia at Bath, which was meant for a satire on Mr. P. and some of his friends about the year 1718. He writ other things which we cannot remember. Smedley, in his Metamorphosis of Scriblers, mentions one, the Hymn of a Gentleman to his Creator: and there was another, in praise either of a Cellar or a Garret. L. W. characterized in the Περί Βαθρῶν, or the Art of Sinking, as a didapper, and after as an eel, is said to be this person, by Dennis, Daily Journal of May 11, 1728. He was also characterized under another animal, a mole, by the author of the ensuing simile, which was handed about at the same time:

'Dear Welsted, mark, in dirty hole
 That painful animal, a mole:
 Above ground never born to grow;
 What mighty stir it keeps below!
 To make a roole-hill all his strife!
 It digs pokes, undermines for life,
 How proud a little dirt to spread;
 Conscious of nothing o'er its head!
 Till, labouring on, for want of eyes,
 It blunders into light and dies.'

You have him again in book iii. ver. 169.

Unlucky Welsted ! thy unfeeling master,
The more thou ticklest, gripes his fist the faster. 210

While thus each hand promotes the pleasing pain,
And quick sensations skip from vein to vein ;
A youth unknown to Phœbus, in despair,
Puts his last refuge all in Heaven and prayer.
What force have pious vows ! the queen of love
Her sister sends, her votarress, from above ;
As, taught by Venus, Paris learn'd the art
To touch Achilles' only tender part ;
Secure, through her, the noble prize to carry,
He marches off, his grace's secretary. 220

'Now turn to different sports,' the goddess cries,
'And learn, my sons, the wondrous power of noise.
To move, to raise, to ravish every heart,
With Shakspeare's nature, or with Jonson's art,
Let others aim : 'Tis yours to shake the soul
With thunder rumbling from the mustard-bowl,
With horns and trumpets now to madness swell,
Now sink in sorrows with the tolling bell :
Such happy arts attention can command,
When fancy flags, and sense is at a stand. 230

Improve we these. Three cat-calls be the bribe
Of him, whose chattering shames the monkey tribe :
And his this drum, whose hoarse heroic bass
Drowns the loud clarion of the braying ass."

Now thousand tongues are heard in one loud din,
The monkey-mimics rush discordant in :
'Twas chattering, grinning, mouthing, jabbering all,
And noise and Norton, brangling and Breval,

REMARKS.

Ver. 226. With thunder rumbling from the mustard bowl.] The old way of making thunder and mustard were the same : but since, it is more advantageously performed by troughs of wood with stops in them. Whether Mr. Dennis was the inventor of that improvement, I know not ; but it is certain, that being once at a tragedy of a new author, he fell into a great passion at hearing some, and cried, "'Sdeath' that is my thunder."

Lennis and dissonance, and captious art,
 And snip-snap short, and interruption smart ;    240
 And demonstration thin, and theses thick,
 And major, minor, and conclusion quick.
 ' Hold,' cried the queen, ' a cat-call each shall win ;
 Equal your merits ! equal is your din !
 But that this well-disputed game may end,
 Sound forth, my brayers, and the welkin rend.'
     As when the long-ear'd milky mothers wait
 At some sick miser's triple-bolted gate,
 For their defrauded, absent foals they make
 A moan so loud, that all the guild awake ;    250
 Sore sighs sir Gilbert, starting at the bray,
 From dreams of millions, and three groats to pay :
 So swells each wind-pipe : ass intones to ass,
 Harmonic twang ! of leather, horn, and brass ;
 Such as from labouring lungs the enthusiast blows,
 High sounds, attemper'd to the vocal nose ;
 Or such as bellow from the deep divine ;
 There, Webster ! peal'd thy voice, and Whitfield ! thine.
 But far o'er all sonorous Blackmore's strain ;
 Walls, steeples, skies, bray back to him again.    260
 In Tottenham fields, the brethren, with amaze,
 Prick all their ears up, and forget to graze !
 Long Chancery-lane retentive rolls the sound,
 And courts to courts return it round and round ;

This thought the only means of advancing religion was by the new-birth of spiritual madness ; that by the old death of fire and faggot ; and therefore they agreed in this, though in no other earthly thing, to abuse all the sober clergy. From the small success of these two extraordinary persons, we may learn how little hurtful bigotry and enthusiasm are, while the civil magistrate prudently forbears to lend his power to the one, in order to the employing it against the other.

offices of chancery are kept. The long detention of clients in that court, and the difficulty of getting out, is humourously allegorized in these lines.

Ver. 268. Who sings so loudly, and who sings so long.] A just character of sir Richard Blackmore, knight, who (as Mr. Dryden expresseth it) and whose indefatigable muse produced no less than six epic poems; Prince and King Arthur, twenty books; Eliza, ten; Alfred, twelve; the Redeemer, six; besides Job, in folio; the whole book of Psalms; the Creation, seven books; Nature of Man, three books; and many more. It is in this sense he is styled afterwards the everlasting Blackmore. Notwithstanding all which, Mr. Gildon seems assured, 'that this admirable author did not think himself upon the same foot with Homer.'—Comp. Art of Poetry, vol. i. p. 108.

'Writ to the rumbling of his coach's wheels;'

But how different is the judgment of the author of Characters of the Times? p. 25, who says, 'Sir R. Blackmore is unfortunate in happening to mistake his proper talents; and that he has not for many years been so much as named, or even thought of among writers.' Even Mr. Dennis differs greatly from his friend Mr. Gildon: 'Blackmore's action,' saith he, 'has neither unity, nor integrity, nor morality, nor universality; and consequently he can have no fable, and no heroic poem: his narration is neither probable, delightful, nor wonderful; his characters have none of the necessary qualifications; the things contained in his narration are neither in their own nature delightful, nor numerous enough, nor rightly disposed, nor surprising, nor pathetic.' Nay, he proceeds so far as to say sir Richard has no genius; first laying down, that 'genius is caused by a furious joy and pride of soul, on the conception of an extraordinary hint. 'Many men,' says he, 'have their hints, without those motions of fury and pride of soul, because they want fire enough to agitate their spirits; and these we call cold writers. Others who have a great deal of fire, but have not excellent organs, feel the fore-mentioned motions, without the extraordinary hints; and these we call fastian writers.' But he declares, 'that sir Richard had neither the hints nor the motions.'—Remarks on Pr. Arth. octavo, 1696. Preface.

This gentleman in his first works abused the character of Mr. Dryden; and in his last, of Mr. Pope, accusing him in very high and sober terms of profaneness and immorality

REMARKS.

(Essay on Polite Writing, vol. ii. p. 270) on a mere report from Edm. Curl, that he was author of a travestie on the first Psalm. Mr. Dennis took up the same report, but with the addition of what sir Richard had neglected, an argument to prove it; which being very curious, we shall here transcribe. 'It was he who burlesqued the Psalms of David. It is apparent to me that psalm was burlesqued by a popish rhymester. Let rhyming persons who have been brought up protestants be otherwise what they will, let them be rakes, let them be scoundrels, let them be atheists, yet education has made an invincible impression on them in behalf of the sacred writings. But a popish rhymester has been brought up with a contempt for those sacred writings; now show me another popish rhymester but he.' This manner of argumentation is usual with Mr. Dennis; he has employed the same against sir Richard himself, in a like charge of impiety and irreligion. 'All Mr. Blackmore's celestial machines, as they cannot be defended so much as by common received opinion, so are they directly contrary to the doctrine of the church of England; for the visible descent of an angel must be a miracle. Now it is the doctrine of the church of England that miracles had ceased a long time before prince Arthur came into the world. Now if the doctrine of the church of England be true, as we are obliged to believe, then are all the celestial machines in Prince Arthur unsufferable, as wanting not only human, but divine probability. But if the machines are sufferable, that is, if they have so much as divine probability, then it follows of necessity that the doctrine of the church is false. So I leave it to every impartial clergyman to consider,' &c. Preface to the Remarks on Prince Arthur.

the labourers' dinner : our author by one very proper both to the persons and the scene of his poem, which we may remember commenced in the evening of the lord-mayor's day. The first book passed in that night ; the next morning the games begin in the Strand, thence along Fleet-street (places inhabited by booksellers,) then they proceed by Bridewell toward Fleet-ditch, and lastly through Ludgate to the city, and the temple of the goddess.

Ver. 280. The Weekly Journals] Papers of news and scandal intermixed, on different sides and parties, and frequently shifting from one side to the other, called the London Journal, British Journal, Daily Journal, &c., the concealed writers of which for some time were Oldmixon, Roome, Arnall, Concanen, and others ; persons never seen by our author.

Ver. 283. In naked majesty Oldmixon stands,] Mr. John Oldmixon, next to Mr. Dennis, the most ancient critic of our nation ; an unjust censurer of Mr. Addison in his prose Essay on Criticism, whom also in his imitation of Bouhours (called the Arts of Logic and Rhetoric) he misrepresents in plain matter of fact ; for in p. 45, he cites the Spectator as abusing Dr. Swift by name, where there is not the least hint of it ; and in p. 304, is so injurious as to suggest that Mr. Addison himself writ that Tatler, No. 43, which says of his own simile, that, 'Tis as great as ever entered into the mind of man.'

In poetry he was not so happy as laborious, and therefore characterized by the Tatler, No. 62, by the name of 'Omicron the Unborn Poet.' Curll, Key, p. 13. 'He writ dramatic works, and a volume of poetry, consisting of heroic epistles, &c. some whereof are very well done,' said the great judge, Mr. Jacob, in his Lives of Poets, vol. ii. p. 303.

In his Essay on Criticism, and the arts of Logic and Rhetoric, he frequently reflects on our author. But the top of his character was a perverter of history, in that scandalous one of the Stuarts, in folio, and his Critical History of England, two volumes octavo. Being employed by bishop Kenoet, in publishing the historians in his collection, he falsified Daniel's Chronicle in numberless places. Yet this very man, in the preface to the first of these books, advanced a particular fact to charge three eminent persons of falsify ing the lord Clarendon's History ; which fact has been disproved by Dr. Atterbury, late bishop of Rochester, then the only survivor of them ; and the particular part he pretended to be falsified, produced since, after almost ninety years, in that noble author's original manuscript. He was all his life a virulent party-writer for hire, and received his reward in a small place, which he enjoyed to his death.

Ver. 291. Next Smedley dived ;] In the surreptitious editions, this whole episode was applied to an initial letter E—, by whom, if they meant the laureat, nothing was more absurd, no part agreeing with his character. The allegory evidently demands a person dipped in scandal, and deeply immersed in dirty work ; whereas Mr. Eusden's writings rarely offended but by their length and multitude, and accordingly are taxed of nothing else in book i. ver. 102. But the person here mentioned, an Irishman, was author and publisher of many scurrilous pieces, a weekly Whitehall Journal, in the year 1722, in the name of Sir James Baker ; and particularly whole volumes of Billingsgate against Dr. Swift and Mr. Pope, called Gulliveriana and Alexandriana, printed in octavo, 1728.

Ver. 295. Then * * essay'd ;] A gentleman of genius and spirit, who was secretly dipped in some papers of this kind, on whom our poet bestows a panegyric instead of a satire, as deserving to be better employed than in party quarrels and personal invectives.

bred to the law. Smedley (one of his brethren in enmity to Swift) in his Metamorphosis of Scriblers, p. 7, accuses him of 'having boasted of what he had not written, but others had revised and done for him.' He was author of several dull and dead scurrilities in the British and London Journals, and in a paper called the Speculatist. In a pamphlet, called a Supplement to the Profound, he dealt very unfairly with our poet, not only frequently imputing to him Mr. Broome's verses (for which he might indeed seem in some degree accountable, having corrected what that gentleman did) but those of the Duke of Buckingham and others: to this rare piece somebody humorously caused him to take for his motto, De profundis clamavi. He was since a scribbler in the Daily Courant, where he poured forth much Billingsgate against the lord Bolingbroke, and others: after which this man was surprisingly promoted to administer justice and law in Jamaica.

Ver. 306, 307. With each a sickly brother at his back: Sons of a day, &c.] These were daily papers, a number of which, to lessen the expence, were printed one on the back of another.

Ver. 314. Gazetteers!] We ought not to suppose that a modern critic here taxeth the poet with an anachronism, affirming these gazetteers not to have lived within the time of his poem, and challenging us to produce any such paper of that date. But we may with equal assurance assert these gazetteers not to have lived since, and challenge all the learned world to produce one such paper at this day. Surely therefore, where the point is so obscure, our author ought not to be censured too rashly. Scribl.

Furious he dives, precipitately dull.

Notwithstanding this affected ignorance of the good Scriblers, the Daily Gazetteer was a title given very properly to certain papers, each of which lasted but a day. Into this, as a common sink, was received all the trash which had been before dispersed in several journals, and circulated at the public expense of the nation. The authors were the same obscure men ; though sometimes relieved by occasional essays from statesmen, courtiers, bishops, deans, and doctors. The meaner sort were rewarded with money ; others with places or benefices, from a hundred to a thousand a year. It appears from the Report of the Secret Committee for inquiring into the Conduct of R. earl of O—, 'That no less than fifty thousand seventy-seven pounds eighteen shillings were paid to authors and printers of newspapers, such as Free Britons, Daily Courants, Corn Cutter's Journals, Gazetteers, and other political papers, between Feb. 10, 1731, and Feb. 10, 1741.' Which shows the benevolence of one minister to have expended, for the current dulness of ten years in Britain, double the sum which gained Louis XIV. so much honour, in annual pensions to learned men all over Europe. In which, and in a much longer time, not a pension at court, nor preferment in the church or universities, of any consideration, was bestowed on any man distinguished for his learning separately from party-merit, or pamphlet-writing.

It is worth a reflection, that of all the panegyrics bestowed by these writers on this great minister, not one is at this day extant or remembered, not even so much credit done to his personal character by all they have written, as by one short occasional compliment of our author.

'Seen him I have ; but in his happier hour
Of social pleasure, ill exchanged for power !
Seen him, uncumber'd by the venal tribe,
Smile without art, and win without a bribe.'

Ver. 315. Arnall.] William Arnall, bred an attorney, was a perfect genius in this sort of work. He began under twenty with furious party papers : then succeeded Concanen in the British Journal. At the first publication of the Dunciad, he prevailed on the author not to give him his due place in it, by a letter professing his detestation of such practices as his predecessor's. But since, by the most ur-exampl'd insolence, and personal abuse of several great men, the poet's particular friends, he most amply deserved a niche in the temple of infamy; witness a paper called the Free Briton, a dedication entitled, To the Genuine Blunderer, 1732, and many others. He writ for hire, and valued himself upon it; not indeed without cause, it appearing, by the aforesaid Report, that he received ' for Free Britons and other writings, in the space of four years, no less than ten thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven pounds six shillings and eight pence, out of the Treasury. But frequently, through his fury or folly, he exceeded all the bounds of his commissinn, and obliged his honourable patron to disavow his scurrilities.

Ver. 323. The plunging prelate, &c.] It having been invidiously insinuated that by this title was meant a truly great prelate, as respectable for his defence of the present balance of power in the civil constitution, as for his opposition to the scheme of no power at all, in the religious; I owe so much to the memory of my deceased friend as to declare, that when, a little before his death, I informed him of this insinuation, he called it vile and malicious, as any candid man, he said, might understand, by his having paid a willing compliment to this very prelate in another part of the poem.

Ver. 349. Ver. 355. Around him wide, &c.] It is to be hoped, that the satire in these lines will be understood in the confined sense in which the author meant it, of such only of the clergy, who, though solemnly engaged in the service of religion, dedicate themselves for venal and corrupt ends to that of ministers or factions ; and though educated under an entire ignorance of the world, aspire to interfere in the government of it, and consequently, to disturb and disorder it ; in which they fall short of their predecessors only by being invested with much less of that power and authority, which they employed indifferently (as is hinted at in the lines above) either in supporting arbitrary power, or in ex

'He is a very ingenious gentleman, and hath written some excellent epilogues to plays, and one small piece on Love, which is very pretty.'—Jacob, Lives of Poets, vol. ii. p. 289. But this gentleman since made himself much more eminent, and personally well known to be the greatest statesman of all parties, as well as to all the courts of law in this nation.

Ver. 399. Toland and Tindal.] Two persons not so happy as to be obscure, who writ against the religion of their country. Toland, the author of the atheist's liturgy, called Pantheisticon, was a spy, in pay to lord Oxford. Tindal was author of the Rights of the Christian Church, and Christianity as old as the Creation. He also wrote an abusive pamphlet against earl S—, which was suppressed while yet in MS. by an eminent person, then out of the ministry, to whom he showed it, expecting his approbation. This doctor afterwards published the same piece, mutatis mutandis, against that very person.

Ver. 400. Christ's no kingdom.] This is said by Curll, Key to Dunc. to allude to a sermon of a reverend bishop.

Ver. 411. Centlivre.] Mrs. Susanna Centlivre, wife to Mr. Centlivre, yeoman of the mooth to his majesty. She writ many plays, and a song, (says Mr. Jacob, vol. i. p. 32.) before she was seven years old. She also writ a ballad against Mr. Pope's Homer, before he began it.

Ver. 413. Boyer the state, and Law the stage gave o'er,] A. Boyer, a voluminous compiler of annals, political collections, &c.—William Law, A. The same Mr. Law is author of a book entitled, An Appeal to all that doubt of or disbelieve the truth of the Gospel; in which he has detailed a system of the rankest Spinozism, for the most exalted theology; and amongst other things as rare, has informed us of this, that sir Isaac Newton stole the principles of his philosophy from one Jacob Behmen, a German cobbler.

Ver. 414. Morgan,] A writer against religion, distinguished no otherwise from the rabble of his tribe, than by the pompousness of his title; for having stolen his morality from Tindal, and his philosophy from Spinoza, he calls himself, by the courtesy of England, a moral philosopher.

Ibid. Mandevil.] This writer who prided himself in the reputation of an immoral philosopher, was author of a famous book called the Fable of the Bees; written to prove that moral virtue is the invention of knaves, and Christian virtue the imposition of fools; and that vice is necessary, and alone sufficient to render society flourishing and happy.

Ver. 415. Norton,] Norton De Foe, offspring of the famous Daniel, fortes creantur fortibus. ## ARGUMENT.

After the other persons are disposed in their proper places of rest, the goddess transports the king to her temple, and there lays him to slumber, with his head on her lap; a position of marvellous virtue, which causeth all the visions of wild enthusiasts, projectors, politicians, inamoratos, castle-builders, chemists, and poets. He is immediately carried on the wings of fancy, and led by a mad poetical Sibyl to the Elysian shade; where, on the banks of Lethe, the souls of the dull are dipped by Bavius, before their entrance into this world. There he is met by the ghost of Settle, and by him made acquainted with the wonders of the place, and with those which he himself is destined to perform. He takes him to a mount of vision, from whence he shows him the past triumphs of the empire of Dulness, then the present, and lastly the future: how small a part of the world was ever conquered by science, how soon those conquests were stopped, and those very nations again reduced to her dominion. Then distinguishing the island of Great Britain, shows by what aids, by what persons, and by what degrees it shall be brought to her empire. Some of the persons he causes to pass in review before his eyes, describing each by his proper figure, character, and qualifications. On a sudden the scene shifts, and a vast number of miracles and prodigies appear, utterly surprising and unknown to the king himself, till they are explained to be the wonders of his own reign now commencing. On this subject Settle breaks into a congratulation, yet not unmixed with concern, that his own times were but the types of these. He prophesies how first the nation shall be overrun with farces, operas, and shows; the throne of Dulness shall be advanced over the theatres, and set up even at court: then how her sons shall preside in the seats of arts and sciences; giving a glimpse, or Pisgah sight, of the future fullness of her glory, the accomplishment whereof is the subject of the fourth and last book.

REMARKS.

Ver. 5, 6, &c.] Hereby is intimated that the following vision is no more than the chimera of the dreamer's brain, and not a real or intended satire on the present age, doubtless more learned, more enlightened, and more abounding with great geniuses in divinity, politics, and whatever arts and sciences, than all the preceding. For fear of any such mistake of our poet's honest meaning, he hath again, at the end of the vision, repeated this monition, saying that it all passed through the ivory gate, which (according to the ancients) denoteth falsity.

Scribl.

How much the good Scriblerus was mistaken, may be seen from the fourth book, which, it is plain from hence, he had never seen.

Bentl.

And poet's vision of eternal fame.

And now, on fancy's easy wing convey'd,
The king descending, views the Elysian shade.

In lofty madness meditating song;
Her tresses staring from poetic dreams,
And never wash'd, but in Castalia's streams.
Taylor, their better Charon, lends an oar, 19

Benlowes, propitious still to blockheads, bows;
And Shadwell nods the poppy on his brows.

REMARKS.

Ver. 15. [A slip-shod Sibyl.] This allegory is extremely just, no conformation of the mind so much subjecting it to real madness, as that which produces real dulness. Hence we find the religious (as well as the poetical) enthusiasts of all ages were ever, in their natural state, most heavy and lumpish; but on the least application of heat, they ran like lead, which of all metals falls quickest into fusion. Whereas fire in a genius is truly Promethean; it hurts not its constituent parts, but only fits it (as it does well-tempered steel) for the necessary impressions of art. But the common people have been taught (I do not know on what foundation) to regard lunacy as a mark of wit, just as the Turks and our modern Methodists do of holiness. But if the cause of madness assigned by a great philosopher be true, it will unavoidably fall upon the dunces. He supposes it to be the dwelling over-long on one object or idea. Now as this attention is occasioned either by grief or study, it will be fixed by dulness: which hath not quickness enough to comprehend what it seeks, nor force and vigour enough to divert the imagination from the object it laments.

Ver. 19. Taylor.] John Taylor, the water poet, an honest man, who owns he learned not so much as the accident: a rare example of modesty in a poet!

'I must confess I do want eloquence,
And never scarce did learn my negligence:
For having got from possum to posset,
I there was gravell'd, could no farther get.'

He wrote fourscore books in the reign of James I. and Charles I. and afterwards (like Edward Ward) kept an ale-house in Long-acre. He died in 1654.

 Of solid proof, impenetrably dull:
 Instant, when dipp'd, away they wing their flight,
 Where Brown and Meers unbar the gates of light,
 Demand new bodies, and in calf's array,
 Rush to the world, impatient for the day. 30
 Millions and millions on these banks he views,
 Thick as the stars of night, or morning dews,
 As thick as bees o'er vernal blossoms fly,
 As thick as eggs at Ward in pillory.

REMARKS.

be seen from many dedications of Quarles and others to him. Some of these anagramed his name Benlows into Benevolus: to verify which, he spent his whole estate upon them.

Ver. 22. And Shadwell nods the poppy, &c.] Shadwell took opium for many years; and died of too large a dose, in the year 1692.

Ver. 24. Old Bavius sits.] Bavius was an ancient poet, celebrated by Virgil for the like causes as Bays by our author, though not in so Christian-like a manner: for heathenishly it is declared by Virgil of Bavius, that he ought to be hated and detested for his evil works; qui Bavius non odit: whereas we have often had occasion to observe our poet's great good nature and mercifulness through the whole course of this poem. Scrill.

Ver. 28. Brown and Meers] Booksellers, printers for any body. The allegory of the souls of the dull coming forth in the form of books, dressed in calf's leather, and being let abroad in vast numbers by booksellers, is sufficiently intelligible.

Ver. 34. Ward in pillory.] John Ward, of Hackney, esq. member of parliament, being convicted of forgery, was first expelled the house, and then sentenced to the pillory on the 17th of February, 1727. Mr. Curll (having likewise stood there) looks upon the mention of such a gentleman in a satire, as a great act of barbarity, Key to Dunc. 3d edit. p. 16. And another author reasons thus upon it: Durgen. 8vo p. 11, 12. 'How unworthy is it of Christian charity to animate the rabble to abuse a worthy man in such a situation! What could move the poet thus to mention a brave sufferer, a gallant prisoner, exposed to the view of all mankind? It was laying aside his senses, it was committing a crime for which the law is deficient not to punish him! nay, a crime

Wondering he gazed ; when, lo ! a sage appears,
 By his broad shoulders known, and length of ears,
 Known by the band and suit which Settle wore
 (His only suit) for twice three years before :
 All as the vest, appear'd the wearer's frame,
 Old in new state, another, yet the same. 40
 Bland and familiar as in life, begun
 Thus the great father to the greater son :
 Oh born to see what none can see awake !
 Behold the wonders of the oblivious lake !

REMARKS.

which man can scarce forgive, or time efface ! nothing surely could have induced him to it but being bribed by a great lady, &c. (to whom this brave, honest, worthy gentleman was guilty of no offence but forgery, proved in open court.) But it is evident this verse could not be meant of him ; it being notorious that no eggs were thrown at that gentleman. Perhaps, therefore, it might be intended of Mr. Edward Ward, the poet, when he stood there.

Ver. 36. And length of ears.] This is a sophisticated reading. I think I may venture to affirm all the copyists are mistaken here: I believe I may say the same of the critics; Dennis, Oldmixon, Welsted, have passed it in silence. I have also stumbled at it, and wondered how an error so manifest could escape such accurate persons. I dare assert, it proceeded originally from the inadvertency of some transcriber, whose head ran on the pillory, mentioned two lines before; it is therefore amazing that Mr. Curll himself should overlook it! Yet that scholiast takes not the least notice hereof. That the learned Mist also read it thus, is plain from his ranging this passage among those in which our author was blamed for personal satire on a man's face (whereof doubtless he might take the ear to be a part;) so likewise Concanen, Ralph, the Flying Post, and all the herd of commentators—Tota armenta sequuntur.

A very little sagacity (which all these gentlemen, therefore wanted) will restore to us the true sense of the poet thus:

'By his broad shoulders known, and length of years.'

See how easy a change of one single letter! That Mr. Settle was old, is most certain; but he was (happily) a stranger to the pillory. This note is partly Mr. Theobald's, partly Scribl.

Ver. 37. Settle.] Elkanah Settle was once a writer in vogue as well as Cibber, both for dramatic poetry and politics. Mr. Dennis tells us, that 'he was a formidable rival to Mr. Dryden, and that in the university of Cambridge there

Thou, yet unborn, hast touch'd this sacred shore ;
 The hand of Bavius drench'd thee o'er and o'er.
 But blind to former, as to future fate,
 What mortal knows his pre-existent state ?
 Who knows how long thy transmigrating soul
 Might from Bæotian to Bæotian roll ?      50
 How many Dutchmen she vouchsafed to thrid ?
 How many stages through old monks she rid ?
 And all who since, in wild benighted days,
 Mix'd the owl's ivy with the poet's bays.
 As man's meanders to the vital spring
 Roll all their tides, then back their circles bring ;
 Or whirligigs, twirl'd round by skilful swain,
 Suck the thread in, then yield it out again :
 All nonsense thus, of old or modern date,
 Shall, in thee centre, from thee circulate.      60
 For this, our queen unfolds to vision true
 Thy mental eye, for thou hast much to view :

REMARKS.

were those who gave him the preference.' Mr. Welsted goes yet farther in his behalf! 'Poor Settle was formerly the mighty rival of Dryden; nay, for many years, bore his reputation above him.' Pref. to his Poems, 8vo. p. 31. And Mr. Milbourne cried out, 'How little was Dryden able, even when his blood run high, to defend himself against Mr. Settle!' Notes on Dryd. Virg. p. 175. These are comfortable opinions; and no wonder some authors indulge them.

He was author or publisher of many noted pamphlets, in the time of king Charles II. He answered all Dryden's political poems; and being cried up on one side, succeeded not a little in his tragedy of the Empress of Morocco, the first that was ever printed with cuts. 'Upon this he grew insolent, the wits writ against his play, he replied, and the town judged he had the better. In short, Settle was then thought a very formidable rival to Mr. Dryden; and not only the town, but the university of Cambridge was divided which to prefer; and in both places the younger sort inclined to Elkanah.' Dennis, Pref. to Rem. on Hom.

Ver. 50. Might from Bæotian, &c.] Bæotia lay under the ridicule of the wits formerly, as Ireland does now; though it produced one of the greatest poets and one of the greatest generals of Greece:

'Bæotum crasso jurares æbre natum.'—Hor.

Old scenes of glory, times long cast behind,
 Shall, first recall'd, rush forward to thy mind:
 Then stretch thy sight o'er all her rising reign,
 And let the past and future fire thy brain.

Ascend this hill, whose cloudy point commands
 Her boundless empire over seas and lands:
 See, round the poles, where keener spangles shine,
 Where spices smoke, beneath the burning line, 70
 (Earth's wide extremes,) her sable flag display'd,
 And all the nations cover'd in her shade!

Far eastward cast thine eye, from whence the sun
 And orient science their bright course begun:
 One godlike monarch all that pride confounds,
 He, whose long wall the wandering Tartar bounds:
 Heavens! what a pile! whole ages perish there,
 And one bright blaze turns learning into air.
 Thence to the south extend thy gladden'd eyes;
 There rival flames with equal glory rise, 80
 From shelves to shelves see greedy Vulcan roll,
 And lick up all their physic of the soul.

How little, mark! that portion of the ball,
 Where, faint at best, the beams of science fall:
 Soon as they dawn, from hyperborcan skies
 Embodied dark, what clouds of Vandals rise!
 Lo! where Mæotis sleeps, and hardly flows
 The freezing Tanaïs through a waste of snows,
 The North by myriads pours her mighty sons,
 Great nurse of Goths, of Alans, and of Huns! 90
 See Alaric's stern port! the martial frame
 Of Genseric; and Attila's dread name!

REMARKS.

Ver. 75. Chi Ho-am-ti, emperor of China, the same who built the great wall between China and Tartary, destroy'd all the books and learned men of that empire.

Ver. 81, 82. The caliph, Omar I. having conquered Egypt, caused his general to burn the Ptolemæan library, on the gates of which was this inscription,

The physic of the soul.

See, the bold Ostrogoths on Latium fall;
 See, the fierce Visigoths on Spain and Gaul!
 See, where the morning gilds the palmy shore
 (The soil that arts and infant letters bore)
 His conquering tribes the Arabian prophet draws,
 And saving ignorance enthrones by laws:
 See Christians, Jews, one heavy sabbath keep,
 And all the western world believe and sleep. 100
 Lo! Rome herself, proud mistress now no more
 Of arts, but thundering against heathen lore:
 Her gray-hair'd synods damning books unread,
 And Bacon trembling for his brazen head.
 Padua, with sighs, beholds her Livy burn,
 And e'en the Antipodes Virgilius mourn.
 See, the Cirque falls, the unpillar'd temple nods,
 Streets paved with heroes, Tyber choked with gods:

REMARKS.

Ver. 96. (The soil that arts and infant letters bore.) Phœnicia, Syria, &c. where letters are said to have been invented. In these countries Mahomet began his conquests.

Ver. 102. Thundering against heathen lore:] A strong instance of this pious rage is placed to pope Gregory's account. John of Salisbury gives a very odd encomium of this pope, at the same time that he mentions one of the strangest effects of this excess of zeal in him: 'Doctor sanctissimus ille Gregorius, qui mellico prædicationis imbre totam rigavit et inebriavit ecclesiam; non modo mathesin jussit ab aulâ, sed, ut traditur a majoribus, incendio dedit probatâ lectionis scripta, Palatinus quæcunque tenebat Apollo?' And in another place: 'Fertur beatus Gregorius bibliothecam combussisse gentilem; quo divinæ paginæ gratior esset locus, et major auctoritas, et diligentia studiosior.' Desiderius, archbishop of Vienna, was sharply reproved by him for teaching grammar and literature, and explaining the poets: because (says this pope) 'In uno se ore cum Jovis laudibus Christi laudes non capiunt: Et quam grave nefandumque sit episcopis canere quod nec laico religioso conveniat, ipse considera.' He is said among the rest to have burned Livy; 'Quia in superstitionibus et sacris Romanorum perpetuo versatur.' The same pope is accused by Vossius, and others, of having caused the noble monuments of the old Roman magnificence to be destroyed, lest those who came to Rome should give more attention to triumphal arches, &c. than to holy things. Bayle, Dict.

 Or Phidias broken, and Apelles burn'd.

Behold yon isle, by palmers, pilgrims trod,
 Men bearded, bald, cowl'd, uncowl'd, shod, unshod,
 Peel'd, patch'd, and piebald, linsey-wolsey brothers,
 Grave mummers! sleeveless some, and shirtless others
 That once was Britain—Happy! had she seen
 No fiercer sons, had Easter never been.
 In peace, great goddess, ever be adored;
 How keen the war, if Dulness draw the sword!      120
 Thus visit not thy own! on this bless'd age
 O spread thy influence, but restrain thy rage.

And see, my son! the hour is on its way,
 That lifts our goddess to imperial sway;
 This favourite isle, long sever'd from her reign,
 Dove-like she gathers to her wings again.
 Now look through fate! behold the scene she draws!
 What aids, what armies, to assert her cause!

REMARKS.

Ver. 109. Till Peter's keys some christen'd Jove adorn.] After the government of Rome devolved to the Popes, their zeal was for some time exerted in demolishing the heathen temples and statues, so that the Goths scarce destroyed more monuments of antiquity out of rage, than these out of devotion. At length they spared some of the temples, by converting them into images of saints. In much later times, it was thought necessary to change the statues of Apollo and Pallas, on the tomb of Sannazarius, into David and Judith; the lyre easily became a harp, and the Gorgon's head turned to that of Holofernes.

Ver. 117, 118. Happy! had Easter never been.] Wars in England anciently, about the right time of celebrating Easter.

Ver. 126. Dove-like, she gathers] This is fulfilled in the fourth book.

Ver. 128. What aids, what armies, to assert her cause! i. e. Of poets, antiquaries, critics, divines, freethinkers. But as this revolution is only here set on foot by the first of these classes, the poets, they only are here particularly celebrated, and they only properly fall under the care and review of this colleague of Dulness, the laureate.  A hundred sons, and every son a god :
 Not with less glory mighty Dulness crown'd
 Shall take through Grub-street her triumphant round ,
 And, her Parnassus glancing o'er at once,
 Behold a hundred sons, and each a dunce.
 Mark first that youth who takes the foremost place,
 And thrusts his person full into your face. 140
 With all thy father's virtues bless'd, be born !
 And a new Cibber shall the stage adorn.

 And modest as the maid that sips alone ;

 Thee shall each alehouse, thee each gillhouse mourn,
 And answering gin-shops sourer sighs return.

REMARKS.

Finish the great work, are reserved for the fourth book, where the goddess herself appears in full glory.

Ver. 140. Jacob, the scourge of grammar, mark with awe ;] 'This gentleman is son of a considerable master of Romsey in Southamptonshire, and bred to the law under a very eminent attorney, who, between his more laborious studies, has diverted himself with poetry. He is a great admirer of poets and their works, which has occasioned him to try his genius that way. He has writ in Prose the Lives of the poets, Essays, and a great many law books, The Accomplish'd Conveyancer, Modern Justice, &c.' Giles Jacob of himself, Lives of Poets, vol. i. He very grossly and unprovoked, abused in that book the author's friend, Mr. Gay. Ver. 149, 150.

Jacob, the scourge of grammar, mark with awe
 Nor less revere him, blunderbuss of law.]

There may seem some error in these verses, Mr. Jacob having proved our author to have a respect for him, by this

Lo, P—p—le's brow, tremendous to the town,
 Horneck's fierce eye, and Roome's funereal frown.
 Lo sneering Goode, half malice and half whim,
 A fiend in glee, ridiculously grim.

undeniable argument: 'He had once a regard for my judgment; otherwise he never would have subscribed two guineas to me, for one small hook in octavo.' Jacob's Letter to Dennis, printed in Dennis's Remarks on the Dunciad, p. 49. Therefore I should think the appellation of blunderbuss to Mr. Jacob, like that of thunderbolt to Scipio, was meant in his honour.

Mr. Dennis argues the same way: 'My writings having made great impression on the minds of all sensible men, Mr. P. repented, and to give proof of his repentance, subscribed to my two volumes of Select Works, and afterwards to my two volumes of Letters.' Ibid. p. 80. We should hence believe, the name of Mr. Dennis hath also crept into this poem by some mistake. But from hence, gentle reader! thou mayest beware, when thou givest thy money to such authors, not to flatter thyself that thy motives are good nature or charity.

Ver. 152. Horneck and Roome.] These two were virulent party-writers, worthily coupled together, and one would think prophetically, since, after the publishing of this piece, the former dying, the latter succeeded him in honour and employment. The first was Philip Horneck, author of a Billingsgate paper, called the High German Doctor. Edward Roome was son of an undertaker for funerals in Fleetstreet, and writ some of the papers called Pasquin, where, by malicious inuendos, he endeavoured to represent our author guilty of malevolent practices with a great man then under prosecution of parliament. Of this man was made the following epigram:

'You ask why Roome diverts you with his jokes ?

Yet if he writes, is dull as other folks !

You wonder at it—This, sir, is the case,

The jest is lost unless he prints his face.'

P—le was the author of some vile plays and pamphlets. He published abuses on our author in a paper called the Prompter.

Ver. 153. Goode,] An ill-natured critic, who writ a satire on our author, called the Mock Æsop, and many anonymous libels in newspapers for hire.

Ver. 156. Whose tuneful whistling makes the waters

Each songster, riddler, every nameless name,
 All crowd, who foremost shall be damn'd to fame
 Some strain in rhyme ; the muses, on their racks,
 Scream like the winding of ten thousand jacks ; 160
 Some, free from rhyme or reason, rule or check, pass:] There were several successions of these sorts of minor poets at Tunbridge, Bath, &c. singing the praise of the annuals flourishing for that season ; whose names, indeed, would be nameless, and therefore the poet slurs them over with others in general.

Ver. 165. Ralph.] James Ralph, a name inserted after the first editions, not known to our author till he writ a swearing piece, called Sawney, very abusive of Dr. Swift, Mr. Gay, and himself. These lines allude to a thing of his, entitled Night, a Poem. This low writer attended his own works with panegyrics in the Journals, and once in particular praised himself highly above Mr. Addison, in wretched remarks upon that author's account of English Poets, printed in a London Journal, Sept. 1728. He was wholly illiterate, and knew no language, not even French. Being advised to read the rules of dramatic poetry before he began a play, he smiled and replied, 'Shakspeare writ without rules.' He ended at last in the common sink of all such writers, a political newspaper, to which he was recommended by his friend Arnall, and received a small pittance for pay.

Ver. 168. Morris] Besaleel. See Book ii.

Ver. 169. Flow, Welsted, &c.] Of this author see the Remark on Book ii. v. 209. But (to be impartial) add to it the following different character of him :

'Mr. Welsted had, in his youth, raised so great expectations of his future genius, that there was a kind of struggle between the most eminent of the two universities, which should have the honour of his education. To compound this he (civilly) became a member of both, and after having passed some time at the one, he removed to the other. From

So sweetly mawkish, and so smoothly dull ;
 Heady, not strong ; o'erflowing, though not full.

Ah Dennis ! Gildon, ah ! what ill-starr'd rage
 Divides a friendship long confirm'd by age ?

REMARKS.

thence he returned to town, where he became the darling expectation of all the polite writers, whose encouragement he acknowledged in his occasional poems, in a manner that will make no small part of the fame of his protectors. It also appears from his works, that he was happy in the patronage of the most illustrious characters of the present age.—Encouraged by such a combination in his favour, he—published a book of poems, some in the Ovidian, some in the Horatian manner; in both which the most exquisite judges pronounce he even rivalled his masters.—His love-verses have rescued that way of writing from contempt.—In his translations, he has given us the very soul and spirit of his author. His Ode—his Epistle—his Verses—his Love-tale—all, are the most perfect things in all poetry.' Wellsted of himself, Char. of the Times, 8vo. 1738, page 23, 24 It should not be forgot for his honour, that he received at one time the sum of five hundred pounds for secret service, among the other excellent authors hired to write anonymously for the ministry. See Report of the Secret Committee, &c. in 1742.

Ver. 173. Ah, Dennis! Gildon, ah!] These men became the public scorn by a mere mistake of their talents. They would needs turn critics of their own country writers (just as Aristotle and Longinus did of theirs,) and discourse upon the beauties and defects of composition:

'How parts relate to parts, and they to whole;
 The body's harmony, the beaming soul.'

Whereas had they followed the example of those microscopes of wit, Kuster, Burman, and their followers, in verba criticism on the learned languages, their acuteness and industry might have raised them a name equal to the most famous of the scholiasts. We cannot, therefore, but lament the late apostacy of the prebendary of Rochester, who beginning in so good a train has now turned short to write comments on the Fire-side, and dreams upon Shakspeare; where we find the spirit of Oldenixon, Gildon, and Dennis, all revived in his belaboured observations.

Scribl.

Here Scriblerus, in this affair of the Fire-side, I want thy usual candour. It is true, Mr. Upton did write notes upon it, but with all the honour and good faith in the world. He took it to be a panegyric on his patron. This it is to have to do with wits; a commerce unworthy a scholiast of so solid learning.

Aris.

Ver. 173. Ah, Dennis, &c.] The reader who has seen

Blockheads with reason wicked wits abhor,
 But fool with fool is barbarous civil war.
 Embrace, embrace, my sons ! be foes no more !
 Nor glad vile poets with true critics' gore.
 Behold yon pair, in strict embraces join'd ;
 How like in manners and how like in mind ! 18C

through the course of these notes, what a constant attendance Mr. Dennis paid to our author and all his works, may perhaps wonder he should be mentioned but twice, and so slightly touched, in this poem. But in truth he looked upon him with some esteem, for having (more generously than all the rest) set his name to such writings. He was also a very old man at this time. By his own account of himself, in Mr. Jacob's lives, he must have been above threescore, and happily lived many years after. So that he was senior to Mr. D'Urfey, who hitherto, of all our poets, enjoyed the longest bodily life.

Ver. 179. Behold yon pair, &c.] One of these was author of a weekly paper called The Grumbler, as the other was concerned in another called Pasquin, in which Mr. Pope was abused with the duke of Buckingham, and bishop of Rochester. They also joined in a piece against his first undertaking to translate the Iliad, entitled Homerides, by sir Iliad Doggrel, printed 1715.

Of the other works of these gentlemen the world has heard no more, than it would of Mr. Pope's, had their united laudable endeavours discouraged him from pursuing his studies. How few good works had ever appeared (since men of true merit are always the least presuming) had there been always such champions to stifle them in their conception ! And were it not better for the public, that a million of monsters should come into the world, which are sure to die as soon as born, than that the serpents should strangle one Hercules in his cradle ?

The union of these two authors gave occasion to this epigram :

'Burnet and Ducket, friends in spite,
 Came hissing out in verse ;
 Both were so forward, each would write—
 So dull, each hung an a—.
 Thus Amphibœna (I have read)
 At either end assails ;
 None knows which leads or which is led,
 For both heads are but tails.'

After many editions of this poem, the author thought fit to omit the names of these two persons, whose injury to him was of so old a date.

Equal in wit, and equally poate,
 Shall this a Pasquin, that a Grumbler write:
 Like are their merits, like rewards they share,
 That shines a consul, this commissioner.'
 'But who is he, in closet close y-pent,
 Of sober face, with learned dust besprent?
 'Right well mine eyes arede the myster wight,

 To future ages may the dulness last,
 As thou preservest the dulness of the past! 190
 'There, dim in clouds, the poring scholiasts mark,
 Wits who, like owls, see only in the dark,
 A lumber-house of books in every head,
 For ever reading, never to be read:
 But, where each science lifts its modern type,
 History her pot, divinity her pipe,
 While proud philosophy repines to show,
 Dishonest sight! his breeches rent below;
 Imbrown'd with native bronze, lo! Henley stands,
 Tuning his voice, and balancing his hands. 200

REMARKS.

Ver. 184. That shines a consul, this commissioner. Such places were given at this time to such sort of writers.

Ver. 187. Myster wight.] Unconth mortal.

Ver. 188. Wormius hight.] Let not this name, purely fictitious, be conceiv'd to mean the learned Olaus Wormius, much less (as it was unwarrantably foisted into the surreptitious editions) our own antiquary, Mr. Thomas Hearne, who had no way aggrieved our poet, but on the contrary published many curious tracts which he hath to his great contentment perused.

Ver. 192. Wits who, like owls, &c.] These few lines exactly describe the right verbal critic: the darker his author is, the better he is pleased; like the famous quack doctor, who put up in his bills, he delighted in matters of difficulty. Somebody said well of these men, that their heads were libraries out of order.

Ver. 199. Lo! Henley stands, &c.] J. Henley, the orator; he preached on the Sundays upon theological matters and on the Wednesdays upon all other sciences. Each auditor paid one shilling. He declaimed some years against the greatest persons, and occasionally did our author that honour. Welsted, in Oratory Transactions, No 1, publish ed by Henley himself, gives the following account of him: 'He was born at Melton Mowbray, in Leicestershire. From his own parish school he went to St. John's College, in Cambridge. He began there to be uneasy; for it shocked him to find he was commanded to believe against his own judgment in points of religion, philosophy, &c. for his genius leading him freely to dispute all propositions, and call all points to account, he was impatient under those fetters of the free-born mind. Being admitted to priest's orders, he found the examination very short and superficial, and that it was not necessary to conform to the Christian religion, in order either to deaconship or priesthood. He came to town, and after having for some years been a writer for booksellers, he had an ambition to be so for ministers of state. The only reason he did not rise in the church, we are told, 'was the envy of others, and a disrelish entertained of him, because he was not qualified to be a complete spaniel.' However he offered the service of his pen to two great men, of opinions and interests directly opposite; by both of whom being rejected, he set up a new project, and styled himself the Restorer of ancient Eloquence. He thought 'it as lawful to take a licence from the king and parliament in one place as another; at Hicke's Hall, as at Doctors' Commons; so set up his oratory in Newport-market, Butcher-row. There,' says his friend, 'he had the assurance to form a plan, which no mortal ever thought of; he had success against all opposition; challenged his adversaries to fair disputations, and none would dispute with him; writ, read, and studied twelve hours a day; composed three dissertations a week on all subjects; undertook to teach in one year what schools and universities teach in five; was not terrified by menaces, insults, or satires, but still proceeded, matured his bold scheme, and put the church, and all that, in danger.'--Welsted, Narrative in Orat. Transact. No. 1.

After having stood some prosecutions, he turned his rhetoric to buffoonery upon all public and private occurrences. All this passed in the same room, where sometimes he broke jests, and sometimes that bread which he called the primitive eucharist. This wonderful person struck medals, which he dispersed as tickets to his subscribers; the device a star rising to the meridian, with this motto, AD SVMMA; and below, INVENIAM VIAM AVT FACIAM. This man had a hundred pounds a year given him for the secret service of a weekly paper of unintelligible nonsense, called the Hyp-Dactor.

Still break the benches, Henley ! with thy stram,
 While Sherlock, Hare, and Gibson, preach in vain.
 Oh great restorer of the good old stage,
 Preacher at once, and zany of thy age !
 Oh worthy thou of Egypt's wise abodes,
 A decent priest, where monkeys were the gods !
 But fate with butchers placed thy priestly stall,
 Meek modern faith to murder, hack, and maul ; 210
 And bade thee live, to crown Britannia's praise,
 In Toland's, Tindal's, and in Woolston's days.

Ver. 213. Yet oh, my sons, &c.] The caution against blasphemy here given by a departed son of Dulness to his yet existing brethren, is, as the poet rightly intimates, not out of tenderness to the ears of others, but their own. And so we see that when that danger is removed, on the open establishment of the goddess in the fourth book, she encourages her sons, and they beg assistance to pollute the source of light itself, with the same virulence they had before done the purest emanations from it.

Indeed, the zeal for this sort of gibberish, (mathematical principles) is greatly abated of late; and though it is now upwards of twenty years that the Dagon of modern philosophers, sir Isaac Newton, has lain with his face upon the ground before the ark of God, Scripture philosophy; for so long Moses's Principia have been published; and the Treatise of Power Essential and Mechanical, in which sir Isaac Newton's philosophy is treated with the utmost contempt, has been published a dozen years; yet is there not one of the whole society who hath had the courage to attempt to raise him up. All the extravagances in the sixteen lines following, were introduced on the stage, and frequented by persons of the first quality in England, to the twentieth and thirtieth time.

Ver. 237. Hell rises, heaven descends, and dance on earth :] This monstrous absurdity was actually represented in Tibbald's Rape of Proserpine.

Ver. 261. Immortal Rich!] Mr. J. Rich, master of the theatre-royal in Covent-garden, was the first that excelled this way.

Ver. 266. I see my Cibber there!] The history of the foregoing absurdities is verified by himself, in these words, (Life, chap. xv.) 'Then sprung forth that succession of monstrous medleys that have so long infested the stage, which arose upon one another alternately at both houses, outvieing each other in expense.' He then proceeds to excuse his own part in them, as follows:—'If I am asked why I assented? I have no better excuse for my error than to confess I did it against my conscience, and had not virtue to starve. Had Henry IV. of France a better for giving his religion? I was still in my heart, as much as could be, on the side of truth and sense; but with this difference, that I had their leave to quit them when they could not support me. But let the question go which way it will, Harry IVth has always been allowed a great name.' This must be confessed a full answer: only the question still seems to be, 1. How the doing a thing against one's conscience is an excuse for it? and, 2dly, It will be hard to prove how he got the leave of truth and sense to quit their service, unless he can produce a certificate that he ever was in it.

Ver. 266, 267. Booth and Cibber were joint managers of the theatre in Drury-lane.

Ver. 268. On grinning dragons thou shalt mount the wind.] In his letter to Mr. P. Mr. C. solemnly declares this not to be literally true. We hope, therefore, the reader will understand it allegorically only.

Ver. 305. Polypheme.] He translated the Italian opera of Polifemo; but unfortunately lost the whole jest of the story. The Cyclop asks Ulysses his name, who tells him his name is Nomao: after his eye is put out, he roars and calls the brother Cyclops to his aid: they inquire who has hurt him? he answers Nomao: whereupon they all go away again. Our ingenious translator made Ulysses answer, I take no name; whereby all that followed became unintelligible. Hence it appears that Mr. Cibber (who values himself on subscribing to the English translation of Homer's Iliad) had not that merit with respect to the Odyssey, or he might have been better instructed in the Greek punnology.

Ver. 325. On poets' tombs see Benson's titles writ!] W—m Benson (surveyor of the buildings to his majesty K. George I.) gave in a report to the lords, that their House and Painted-chamber adjoining were in immediate danger of falling. Whereupon the lords met in a committee to appoint some other place to sit in, while the house should be taken down. But it being proposed to cause some other builders first to inspect it, they found it in very good condition. The lords, upon this, were going upon an address to the king against Benson, for such a misrepresentation; but the earl of Sunderland, then secretary, gave them an assurance that his majesty would remove him, which was done accordingly. In favour of this man, the famous sir Christopher Wren, who had been architect to the crown for above fifty years, who had built most of the churches in London, laid the first stone of St. Paul's, and lived to finish it, had been displaced from his employment at the age of near ninety years.

Ver. 326. Virgil, lest it should seem flattery, but he is much mistaken if posterity does not afford him a greater esteem than he at present enjoys.' He endeavoured to create some misunderstanding between our author and Mr. Addison, whom also soon after he abused as much. His constant cry was, that Mr. P. was an enemy to the government; and in particular he was the avowed author of a report very industriously spread, that he had a hand in a party-paper called the Examiner: a falsehood well known to these yet living, who had the direction and publication of it.

Ver. 328. While Jones' and Boyle's united labours fall:] At the time when this poem was written, the banqueting-house of Whitehall, the church and piazza of Covent-garden, and the palace and chapel of Somerset-house, the works of the famous Inigo Jones, had been for many years so neglected, as to be in danger of ruin. The portico of Covent-garden church had been just then restored and beautified, at the expense of the earl of Burlington; who, at the same time, by his publication of the designs of that great master and Palladio, as well as by many noble buildings of his own, revived the true taste of architecture in this kingdom.

Ver. 330. Gay dies unpension'd, &c.] See Mr. Gay's fable of the Hare and many Friends. This gentleman was early in the friendship of our author, which continued to his death. He wrote several works of humour with great success, the Shepherd's Week, Trivia, the What d'ye call it, Fables, and lastly the celebrated Beggar's Opera; a piece of satire which hit all tastes and degrees of men, from those of the highest quality to the very rabble: that verse of Horace, could never be so justly applied as to this. The vast success of it was unprecedented, and almost incredible: what is related of the wonderful effects of the ancient music or tragedy hardly came up to it: Sophocles and Euripides were less followed and famous. It was acted in London sixty-three days, uninterrupted; and renewed the next season with equal applauses. It spread into all the great towns of England, was played in many places to the thirtieth and fortieth time, and at Bath and Bristol fifty, &c. It made its progress into Wales, Scotland, and Ireland where it was performed twenty-four days together; it was last acted in Minorca. The fame of it was not confined to the author only; the ladies carried about with them the favourite songs of it in fans; and houses were furnished with it in screens. The person who acted Polly, till then obscure, became at once the favourite of the town: her pictures were engraved, and sold in great numbers, her life written, books of letters and verses to her published; and pamphlets made even of her sayings and jests.

'Primores populi erripuit, populumque tributim,'

Furthermore, it drove out of England, for that season, the Italian opera, which had carried all before it for ten years. That idol of the nobility and people, which the great critic Mr. Dennis by the labours and eulogies of a whole life could not overthrow, was demolished by a single stroke of this gentleman's pen. This happened in the year 1728. Yet so great was his modesty, that he constantly prefixed to all the editions of it this motto: Nos hæc novimus esse nihil.

Ver. 332. And Pope's, ten years to comment and translate.] The author here plainly laments, that he was so long employed in translating and commenting. He began the Iliad in 1713, and finished it in 1719. The edition of Shakespeare (which he undertook merely because nobody else would) took up near two years more in the drudgery of comparing impressions, rectifying the scenery, &c. and the translation of the Odyssey employed him from that time to 1725.

Ver. 333. Proceed, great days! &c.] It may, perhaps, seem incredible, that so great a revolution in learning as is here prophesied, should be brought about by such weak instruments as have been [hitherto] described in our poem: but do not thou, gentle reader, rest too secure in thy contempt of these instruments. Remember what the Dutch stories somewhere relate, that a great part of their provinces was once overflowed, by a small opening made in one of their dykes by a single water rat.

However, that such is not seriously the judgment of our poet, but that he conceiveth better hopes from the diligence of our schools, from the regularity of our universities, the discernment of our great men, the accomplishments of our nobility, the encouragement of our patrons, and the genius of our writers of all kinds (notwithstanding some few exceptions in each,) may plainly be seen from his conclusion; where, causing all this vision to pass through the ivory gate, he expressly, in the language of poesy, declares all such imaginations to be wild, ungrounded, and fictitious. Scrībll.

BOOK THE FOURTH.

ARGUMENT.

The poet being, in this book, to declare the completion of the prophecies mentioned at the end of the former makes a new invocation ; as the greater poets are wont, when some high and worthy matter is to be sung. He shows the goddess coming in her majesty, to destroy order and science, and to substitute the kingdom of the Dull upon earth. How she leads captive the sciences, and silences the muses ; and what they be who succeed in their steal. All her children, by a wonderful attraction, are drawn about her ; and bear along with them divers others, who promote her empire by connivance, weak resistance, or discouragement of arts ; such as half-wits, tasteless admirers, vain pretenders, the flatterers of dunces, or the patrons of them. All these crowd round her ; one of them, offering to approach her, is driven back by a rival, but she commends and encourages both. The first who speak in form are the geniuses of the schools, who assure her of their care to advance her cause by confining youth to words, and keeping them out of the way of real knowledge. Their address, and her gracious answer ; with her charge to them and the universities. The universities appear by their proper deputies, and assure her that the same method is observed in the progress of education. The speech of Aristarchus on this subject. They are driven off by a band of young gentlemen returned from travel with their tutors ; one of whom delivers to the goddess, in a polite oration, an account of the whole conduct and fruits of their travels ; presenting to her at the same time a young nobleman perfectly accomplished. She receives him graciously, and endues him with the happy quality of want of shame. She sees loitering about her a number of indolent persons abandoning all business and duty, and dying with laziness: to these approaches the antiquary Annius, entreating her to make them virtuosos, and assign them over to him; but Mummius, another antiquary, complaining of his fraudulent proceeding, she finds a method to reconcile their difference. Then enter a troop of people fantastically adorned, offering her strange and exotic presents: amongst them, one stands forth and demands justice on another, who had deprived him of one of the greatest curiosities in nature; but he justifies himself so well, that the goddess gives them both her approbation. She recommends to them to find proper employment for the indolents before mentioned, in the study of butterflies, shells, birds' nests, moss, &c., but with particular caution, not to proceed beyond trifles, to any useful or extensive views of nature, or of the Author of nature. Against the last of these apprehensions, she is secured by a hearty address from the minute philosophers and free-thinkers, one of whom speaks in the name of the rest. The youth thus instructed and principled, are delivered to her in a body, by the hands of Silenus; and then admitted to taste the cup of the Magus, her high priest, which causes a total oblivion of all obligations, divine, civil, moral or rational. To these, her adepts, she sends priests, attendants, and comforters, of various kinds; confers on them orders and degrees; and then dismissing them with a speech, confirming to each his privileges, and telling what she expects from each, concludes with a yawn of extraordinary virtue: the progress and effects whereof on all orders of men, and the consummation of all in the restoration of night and chaos, conclude the poem.

BOOK IV.

YET, yet a moment, one dim ray of light
Indulge, dread Chaos, and eternal Night!

Of darkness visible so much be lent,
 As half to show, half veil the deep intent.
 Ye powers! whose mysteries restored I sing,
 To whom Time bears me on his rapid wing,
 Suspend a while your force inertly strong,
 Then take at once the poet and the song.

Now flamed the dog-star's unpropitious ray,
 Smote every brain, and wither'd every bay : 10
 Sick was the sun, the owl forsook his bower,
 The moon-struck prophet felt the madding hour :
 Then rose the seed of Chaos and of Night,
 To blot out order, and extinguish light,
 Of dull and venal a new world to mould,
 And bring Saturnian days of lead and gold.

REMARKS.

This book may properly be distinguished from the former, by the name of the Greater Dunciad, not so indeed in size, but in subject; and so far contrary to the distinction anciently made of the Greater and Lesser Iliad. But much are they mistaken who imagine this work in any wise inferior to the former, or of any other hand than of our poet; of which I am much more certain than that the Iliad itself was the work of Solomon, or the Batrachomyomachia of Homer, as Barnes hath affirmed. Bentl.

Ver. 1, &c.] This is an invocation of much piety. The poet, willing to approve himself a genuine son, beginneth by showing (what is ever agreeable to Dulness) his high respect for antiquity and a great family, how dead or dark soever: next declareth his passion for explaining mysteries; and lastly his impatience to be re-united to her. Scribl.

Ver. 2. Uread Chaos, and eternal Night!] Invoked, as the restoration of their empire is the action of the poem.

Ver. 14. To blot out order, and extinguish light.] The two great ends of her mission: the one in quality of daughter of Chaos, the other as daughter of Night. Order here is to be understood extensively, both as civil and moral; the distinction between high and low in society, and true and false in individuals: light as intellectual only, wit, science, arts.

Ver. 15. Of dull and venal.] The allegory continued; dull referring to the extinction of light or science: venal to the destruction of order, and the truth of things.

Ibid. A new world.] In allusion to the Epicurean opinion, that from the dissolution of the natural world into Night and Chaos, a new one should arise; this the poet alluding to, in the production of a new moral world, makes it partake of its original principles.

She mounts the throne: her head a cloud conceal'd,
 In broad effulgence all below reveal'd:
 ('Tis thus aspiring Dulness ever shines:)
 Soft on her lap her laureate son reclines. 20
 Beneath her footstool, science groans in chains,
 And wit dreads exile, penalties, and pains.

REMARKS.

Ver. 16. Lead and gold.] i. e. dull and venal.

Ver. 20. Her laureate son reclines.] With great judgment it is imagined by the poet, that such a colleague as Dulness had elected, should sleep on the throne, and have very little share in the action of the poem. Accordingly he hath done little or nothing from the day of his anointing; having passed through the second book without taking part in any thing that was transacted about him; and through the third in profound sleep. Nor ought this, well considered, to seem strange in our days, when so many king-consorts have done the like. Scribl.

This verse our excellent laureate took so to heart, that he appealed to all mankind, 'if he was not as seldom asleep as any fool!' But it is hoped the poet hath not injured him, but rather verified his prophecy (p. 243 of his own Life, 8vo. ch. ix.) where he says, 'the reader will be as much pleased to find me a dunce in my old age, as he was to prove me a brisk blockhead in my youth.' Wherever there was any room for briskness, or alacrity of any sort, even in sinking, he hath had it allowed; but here, where there is nothing for him to do but to take his natural rest, he must permit his historian to be silent. It is from their actions only that princes have their character, and poets from their works; and if in these he be as much asleep as any fool, the poet must leave him and them to sleep to all eternity. Bentl.

Ibid. Her laureate.] 'When I find my name in the satirical works of this poet, I never look upon it as any malice meant to me, but profit to himself. For he considers that my face is more known than most in the nation; and therefore a lick at the laureate will be a sure bait ad captandum vulgus, to catch little readers.' Life of Colley Cibber, ch. ii.

Now if it be certain, that the works of our poet have owed their success to this ingenious expedient, we hence derive an unanswerable argument, that this fourth Dunciad, as well as the former three, hath had the author's last hand, and was by him intended for the press; or else to what purpose hath he crowned it, as we see, by this finishing stroke, the profitable lick at the laureate? Bentl.

Ver. 21, 22. Beneath her footstool, &c.] We are next presented with the picture of those whom the goddess leads into captivity. Science is only depressed and confined so as to be rendered useless; but wit or genius, as a more dangerous and active enemy, punished, or driven away: Dulness being often reconciled in some degree with learning, but never upon any terms with wit. And accordingly it will be seen that she admits something like each science, as casuistry, sophistry, &c. but nothing like wit; opera alone supplying its place.

Ver. 30. Gives her Page the word.] There was a judge of this name, always ready to hang any man that came before him, of which he was suffered to give a hundred miserable examples, during a long life, even to his dotage.— Though the candid Scriblerus imagined Page here to mean no more than a page or mute, and to allude to the custom of strangling state criminals in Turkey by mutes or pages. A practice more decent than that of our Page, who before he hanged any one, loaded him with reproachful language.

Scribl.

Ver. 39. But sober History.] History attends on tragedy, satire on comedy, as their substitutes in the discharge of their distinct functions; the one in high life, recording the crimes and punishments of the great; the other in low, exposing the vices or follies of the common people. But it

There sunk Thalia, nerveless, cold, and dead,
 Had not her sister Satire held her head :
 Nor couldst thou, Chesterfield ! a tear refuse ;
 Thou weptst, and with thee wept each gentle muse ;
 When lo ! a harlot form soft sliding by,
 With mincing step, small voice, and languid eye :

may be asked, how came history and satire to be admitted with impunity to administer comfort to the Muses, even in the presence of the goddess, and in the midst of all her triumphs ? 'A question,' says Scriblerus, 'which we thus resolve: History was brought up in her infancy by Dulness herself; but being afterwards espoused into a noble house, she forgot (as is usual) the humility of her birth, and the cares of her early friends. This occasioned a long estrangement between her and Dulness. At length, in process of time, they met together in a monk's cell, were reconciled, and became better friends than ever. After this they had a second quarrel, but it held not long, and are now again on reasonable terms, and so are likely to continue.' This accounts for the connivance shown to history on this occasion. But the boldness of satire springs from a very different cause; for the reader ought to know, that she alone of all the sisters is unconquerable, never to be silenced, when truly inspired and animated (as should seem) from above, for this very purpose, to oppose the kingdom of Dulness to her last breath.

Ver. 43. Nor couldst thou, &c.] 'This noble person in the year 1737, when the act aforesaid was brought into the house of Lords, opposed it in an excellent speech,' says Mr. Cibber, 'with a lively spirit, and uncommon eloquence.' This speech had the honour to be answered by the said Mr. Cibber, with a lively spirit also, and in a manner very uncommon, in the eighth chapter of his Life and Manners. And here, gentle reader, would I gladly insert the other speech, whereby thou mightest judge between them; but I must defer it on account of some differences not yet adjusted between the noble author and myself, concerning the true reading of certain passages. Bentl.

Ver. 45. When lo! a harlot form] The attitude given to this phantom represents the nature and genius of the Italian opera; its affected airs, effeminate sounds, and the practice of patching up these operas with favourite songs, incoherently put together. These things were supported by the subscriptions of the nobility. This circumstance, that opera should prepare for the opening of the grand sessions, was prophesied of in Book iii. ver. 305.

Foreign her air, her robe's discordant pride
 In patch-work fluttering, and her head aside ;
 By singing peers upheld on either hand,
 She tripp'd and laugh'd, too pretty much to stand, 50
 Cast on the prostrate Nine a scornful look,
 Then thus in quaint recitativo spoke :

' O Cara ! Cara ! silence all that train :
 Joy to great Chaos ! let division reign :
 Chromatic tortures soon shall drive them hence,
 Break all their nerves and fritter all their sense ;
 One trill shall harmonize joy, grief, and rage,
 Wake the dull church, and lull the ranting stage ;
 To the same notes thy sons shall hum, or snore,
 And all thy yawning daughters cry, encore. 60
 Another Phœbus, thy own Phœbus, reigns,
 Joys in my jigs, and dances in my chains.
 But soon, ah soon ! rebellion will commence,
 If music meanly borrows aid from sense :
 Strong in new arms, lo ! giant Handel stands,
 Like bold Briareus, with a hundred hands :
 To stir, to rouse, to shake the soul he comes,
 And Jove's own thunders follow Mars's drums.
 Arrest him, empress, or you sleep no more—' 70
 She heard, and drove him to the Hiibernian shore.

And now had Fame's posterior trumpet blown,
 And all the nations summon'd to the throne.

REMARKS.

'Already Opera prepares the way,
 The sure forerunner of her gentle sway.'

Ver. 54. Let division reign :] Alluding to the false taste of playing tricks in music with numberless divisions, to the neglect of that harmony which conforms to the sense, and applies to the passions. Mr. Handel had introduced a great number of hands, and more variety of instruments into the orchestra, and employed even drums and canon to make a fuller chorus ; which proved so much too many for the fine gentlemen of his age, that he was obliged to remove his music into Ireland. After which they were reduced, for want of composers, to practice the patch-work above-mentioned

The young, the old, who feel her inward sway,
 One instinct seizes, and transports away.
 None need a guide, by sure attraction led,
 And strong impulsive gravity of head :
 None want a place, for all their centre found
 Hung to the goddess, and coher'd around.
 Not closer, orb in orb, conglob'd are seen
 The buzzing bees about their dusky queen. 80
 The gathering number, as it moves along,
 Involves a vast involuntary throng,
 Who, gently drawn, and struggling less and less,
 Roll in her vortex, and her pow'r confess :
 Not those alone who passive own her laws,
 But who, weak rebels, more advance her cause.
 Whate'er of Duncce in college or in town
 Sneers at another, in toupee or gown ;
 Whate'er of mongrel no one class admits,
 A wit with dunces, and a dunce with wits. 90
 Nor absent they, no members of her state,
 Who pay her homage in her sons, the great ;
 Who, false to Phœbus, bow the knee to Bual,
 Or impious, preach his word without a call ;
 Patrons, who sneak from living worth to dead,
 Withhold the pension, and set up the head ;
 Or vest dull flattery in the sacred gown,
 Or give from fool to fool the laurel crown :
 And (last and worst) with all the cant of wit,
 Without the soul, the muse's hypocrite. 100

REMARKS.

Ver. 76 to 101. It ought to be observed that here are three classes in this assembly. The first, of men absolutely and avowedly dull, who naturally adhere to the goddess, and are imaged in the simile of the bees about their queen. The second involuntarily drawn to her, though not caring to own her influence; from ver. 81 to 90. The third, of such as, though not members of her state, yet advance her service by flattering Dulness, cultivating mistaken talents, patronising vile scribblers, discouraging living merit, or setting up for wits, and men of taste in arts they understand not; from ver. 91 to 101.

There march'd the bard and blockhead side by side,
 Who rhym'd for hire, and patroniz'd for pride.
 Narcissus, prais'd with all a parson's power,
 Look'd a white lily sunk beneath a shower.
 There mov'd Montalto with superior air ;
 His stretch'd-out arm display'd a volume fair ;
 Courtiers and patriots in two ranks divide,
 Through both he pass'd, and bow'd from side to side ;
 But as in graceful act, with awful eye,
 Compos'd he stood, bold Benson thrust him by : 110
 On two unequal crutches propt he came,
 Milton's on this, on that one Johnston's name
 The decent knight retir'd with sober rage,
 Withdrew his hand, and clos'd the pompous page ;
 But (happy for him as the times went then)
 Appear'd Apollo's mayor and aldermen,
 On whom three hundred gold-capt youths await,
 To lug the ponderous volume off in state.
 When Dulness, smiling—' Thus revive the wits !
 But murder first, and mince them all to bits ; 120

REMARKS.

Ver. 108. --bow'd from side to side:] As being of no one party.

Ver. 110. Bold Benson.] This man endeavoured to raise himself to fame by erecting monuments, striking coins, setting up heads, and procuring translations of Milton; and afterwards by as great a passion for Arthur Johnston, a Scotch physician's Version of the Psalms, of which he printed many fine editions. See more of him, Book iii. ver. 325.

Ver. 113. The decent knight.] An eminent person who was about to publish a very pompous edition of a great author at his own expense.

Ver. 115, &c.] These four lines were printed in a separate leaf by Mr. Pope in the last edition, which he himself gave, of the Dunciad, with directions to the printer, to put this leaf into its place as soon as Sir T. H.'s Shakspeare should be published.

Ver. 119. 'Thus revive,' &c.] The goddess applauds the practice of tacking the obscure names of persons not eminent in any branch of learning, to those of the most distinguished writers; either by printing editions of their works

As erst Medea (cruel, so to save !)

 Let standard authors thus, like trophies borne,
 Appear more glorious as more hack'd and torn
 And you, my critics ! in the chequer'd shade,

 Leave not a foot of verse, a foot of stone,
 A page, a grave, that they can call their own ;
 But spread, my sons, your glory thin or thick,
 On passive paper, or on solid brick ;                   130
 So by each bard an alderman shall sit,
 A heavy lord shall hang at every wit,
 And while on Fame's triumphant car they ride,
 Some slave of mine be pinion'd to their side.'

 Each eager to present the first address.

Ver. 132. A heavy lord shall hang at every wit,] How unnatural an image, and how ill supported ! saith Aristarchus. Had it been,

A heavy wit shall hang at every lord, something might have been said, in an age so distinguished for well-judging patrons. For lord, then, read load ; that is, of debts here, and of commentaries hereafter. To this purpose, conspicuous is the case of the poor author of Hudibras, whose body, long since weighed down to the grave by a load of debts, has lately had a more unmerciful load of commeu

When lo! a spectre rose, whose index-hand
 Held forth the virtue of the dreadful wand; 140

 Eton and Winton shake through all their sons.
 All flesh is humbled, Westminster's bold race

Aristarchus thinks the common reading right: and that the author himself had been struggling, and but just shaken off his load, when he wrote the following epigram:

My lord complains, that Pope, stark mad with gardens,
 Has lopp'd three trees, the value of three farthings:
 But he's my neighbour, cries the peer polite,
 And if he'll visit me, I'll wave my right.
 What! on compulsion? and against my will,
 A lord's acquaintance? Let him file his bill.
 Ver. 137, 138.

Dunce scorn'd dunce behold the next advance,
 But fop shows fop superior complaisance.]

This is not to be ascribed so much to the different manners of a court and college, as to the different effects which a pretence to learning and a pretence to wit, have on black-heads. For as judgment consists in finding out the differences in things, and wit in finding out their likenesses, so the dunce is all discord and dissension, and constantly busied in reproving, examining, confuting, &c. while the fop flourishes in peace, with songs and hymns of praise, addresses, characters, epithalamiums, &c.

Ver. 176. Some gentle James, &c.] Wilson tells us that this king, James the first, took upon himself to teach the Latin tongue to Car, earl of Somerset; and that Gondomar, the Spanish ambassador, would speak false Latin to him on purpose to give him the pleasure of correcting it, whereby he wrought himself into his good graces.

This great prince was the first who assumed the title of Sacred Majesty, which his loyal clergy transferred from

Though I have the greatest deference to the penetration of this eminent scholiast, and must own that nothing can be more natural than his interpretation, or juster than that rule of criticism, which directs us to keep the literal sense, when no apparent absurdity accompanies it (and sure there is no absurdity in supposing a logician on horseback,) yet still I must needs think the hackneys here celebrated were not real horses, nor even Centaurs, which, for the sake of the learned Chiron, I should rather be inclined to think, if I were forced to find them four legs, but dowaright plain men, though logicians; and only thus metamorphosed by a rule of rhetoric, of which Cardinal Perron gives us an example, where he calls Clavins, Un esprit pesant, lourd, sans subtilité, ni gentillesse, un gros cheval d'Allemagne.

Here I profess to go opposite to the whole stream of commentators. I think the poet only aimed, though awkwardly, at an elegant Græcism in this representation; for in that language the word ἵππος (horse) was often prefixed to others, to denote greatness of strength; as ἵππολαμπάρον, ἵππογλωσσον, ἵππομαρμαρόρον, and particularly ΠΗΛΙΟΓΝΩΜΩΝ, a great connoisseur, which comes nearest to the case in hand.

pinion of Maffei inclineth the sagacious annotator on Dr. King's advice to Horace.]

Ver. 210. Aristarchus.] A famous commentator and corrector of Homer, whose name has been frequently used to signify a complete critic. The compliment paid by our author to this eminent professor, in applying to him so great a name, was the reason that he hath omitted to comment on this part which contains his own praises. We shall, therefore, supply that loss to our best ability. Scribl.

Ver. 214. Critics like me—] Alluding to two famous editions of Horace and Milton; whose richest veins of poetry he had prodigally reduced to the poorest and most beggarly prose.—Verily the learned scholiast is grievously mistaken. Aristarchus is not boasting here of the wonders of his art in annihilating the sublime; but of the usefulness of it, in reducing the turgid to its proper class; the words 'make it prose again,' plainly showing that prose it was, though ashamed of its original, and therefore to prose it should return. Indeed, much it is to be lamented that Dulness doth not confine her critics to this useful task; and commission them to dismount what Aristophanes calls ῥηματὶ ἐπιπροβαμωνα, all prose on horse-back. Scribl.

Ver. 216. Author of something yet more great than letter;] Alluding to those grammarians, such as Palamedes and Simonides, who invented single letters. But Aristarchus, who had found out a double one, was therefore worthy of double honour. Scribl.

Ver. 217, 218. While towering o'er your alphabet, like Saul—Stands our digamma,] Alludes to the boasted restoration of the Æolic digamma, in his long projected edition of Homer. He calls it something more than letter, from the enormous figure it would make among the other letters being one gamma, set upon the shoulders of another.

REMARKS.

Ver. 220. Of Me or Te.] It was a serious dispute, about which the learned were much divided, and some treatises written: had it been about meum and tuum it could not be more contested, than whether at the end of the first Ode of Horace, to read, Me doctarum hederæ præmia frontium, or Te doctarum hederæ—By this the learned scholiast would seem to insinuate that the dispute was not about meum and tuum, which is a mistake: for as a venerable sage observeth, words are the counters of wise men, but the money of fools; so that we see their property was indeed concerned.

Scribl.

Ver. 222. Or give up Cicero to C or K.] Grammatical disputes about the manner of pronouncing Cicero's name in Greek. It is a dispute whether in Latin the name of Hermagoras should end in as or a. Quintilian quotes Cicero as writing it, Hermagora, which Bentley rejects, and says, Quintilian must be mistaken, Cicero could not write it so, and that in this case he would not believe Cicero himself. These are his very words: Ego vero Ciceronem ita scripsisse ne Cicroni quidem affirmanti crediderim.—Epist. ad Mill. in fin. Frag. Menand. et Phil.

Ver. 223, 224. Freind—Alsop.] Dr. Robert Freind, master of Westminster-school, and canon of Christ-church—Dr. Anthony Alsop, a happy imitator of the Horatian style.

Ver. 226. Manilius or Solinus.] Some critics having had it in their choice to comment either on Virgil or Manilius, Pliny or Solinus, have chosen the worse author, the more freely to display their critical capacity.

Ver. 228, &c. Suidas, Gellius, Stobæus.] The first a dictionary-writer, a collector of impertinent facts and barbarous words; the second a minute critic; the third an author, who gave his common place book to the public, where we happen to find much mince-meat of old books.

What Gellius or Stobæus hash'd before,
 Or chew'd by blind old scholiasts o'er and o'er,
 The critic eye, that microscope of wit,
 Sees hairs and pores, examines bit by bit:
 How parts relate to parts, or they to whole,
 The body's harmony, the beaming soul,
 Are things which Kuster, Burnham, Wasse shall see
 When man's whole frame is obvious to a flea.

' Ah think not, mistress ! more true dulness lies
 In folly's cap, than wisdom's grave disguise. 240
 Like buoys, that never sink into the flood,
 On learning's surface we but lie and nod:
 Thine is the genuine head of many a house,
 And much divinity without a Neus.
 Nor could a Barrow work on every block,
 Nor has one Atterbury spoil'd the flock.
 See ! still thy own, the heavy canon roll,
 And metaphysic smokes involve the pole ;
 For these we dim the eyes, and stuff the head
 With all such reading as was never read : 250
 For thee explain a thing till all men doubt it,
 And write about it, goddess, and about it :
 So spins the silk-worm small its slender store,
 And labours till it clouds itself all o'er.
 What though we let some better sort of fool
 Thrud every science, run through every school ?
 Never by tumbler through the hoops was shown
 Such skill in passing all, and touching none.
 He may indeed (if sober all this time)
 Plague with dispute, or persecute with rhyme. 260
 We only furnish what he cannot use,
 Or wed to what he must divorce, a muse ;

REMARKS.

Ver. 245, 246. Barrow, Atterbury.] Isaac Barrow, master of Trinity, Francis Atterbury, dean of Christ church, both great geniuses and eloquent preachers; one more conversant in the sublime geometry, the other in classical learning; but who equally made it their care to advance the polite arts in their several societies.

Full in the midst of Euclid dip at once,
 And petrify a genius to a dunce :
 Or, set on metaphysic ground to prance,
 Show all his paces, not a step advance.
 With the same cement, ever sure to bind,
 We bring to one dead level every mind ;
 Then take him to develope, if you can,
 And hew the block off, and get out the man.     270
 But wherefore waste I words ? I see advance

 But stern as Ajax' spectre strode away.
     In flow'd at once a gay embroider'd race,
 And tit'tring push'd the pedants off the place :
 Some would have spoken, but the voice was drown'd
 By the French-horn or by the opening hound.
 The first came forward with an easy mien,
 As if he saw St. James's and the queen.     280
 When thus th' attendant orator begun :
 Receive, great empress ! thy accomplish'd son ;

REMARKS.

Ver. 272. Laced governor,] Why laced ? Because gold and silver are necessary trimming to denote the dress of a person of rank, and the governor must be supposed so in foreign countries, to be admitted into courts and other places of fair reception. But how comes Aristarchus to know at sight that this governor came from France ? Know ? Why, by the laced coat.     Scribl.

Ibid. Whore, pupil, and laced governor,] Some critics have objected to the order here, being of opinion that the governor should have the precedence before the whore, if not before the pupil. But were he so placed, it might be thought to insinuate that the governor led the pupil to the whore ; and were the pupil placed first, he might be supposed to lead the governor to her. But our impartial poet, as he is drawing their picture, represents them in the order in which they are generally seen ; namely, the pupil between the whore and the governor ; but placeth the whore first, as she usually governs both the other.

Ver. 280. As if he saw St. James's.] Reflecting or the disrespectful and indecent behaviour of several forward young persons in the presence, so offensive to all serious men, and to none more than the good Scriberus.

rying a great fortune: but this again, for the vulgarity of it, he rejects, as something uncommon seemed to be prayed for: and after many strange conceits, not at all to the honour of the fair sex, he at length rests in this, that it was, that her son might pass for a wit: in which opinion he fortifies himself by ver. 316, where the orator, speaking of his pupil, says that he

Intrigued with glory, and with spirit whored, which seems to insinuate that her prayer was heard. Here the good scholiast, as, indeed, every where else, lays open the very soul of modern criticism, while he makes his own ignorance of a poetical expression hold open the door to much erudition and learned conjecture: the blessing of a rake signifying no more than that he might be a rake; the effects of a thing for the thing itself, a common figure. The careful mother only wished her son might be a rake, as well knowing that its attendant blessings would follow of course.

Ver. 307. But chief, &c.] These two lines, in their force of imagery and colouring, emulate and equal the pencil of Rubens.

Ver. 308. And Cupids ride the lion of the deeps;] The winged lion, the arms of Venice. This republic, heretofore the most considerable in Europe, for her naval force and the extent of her commerce; now illustrious for her carnivals.

REMARKS.

Ver. 324. With nothing but a solo in his head ;] With nothing but a solo ? Why, if it be a solo, how should there be any thing else ? Palpable tautology ! Read boldly an opera, which is enough of conscience for such a head as has lost all its Latin. Bentl.

Ver. 326. Jansen, Fleetwood, Cibber.] Three very eminent persons, all managers of plays: who, though not governors by profession, had, each in his way, concerned themselves in the education of youth; and regulated their wits, their morals, or their finances, at that period of their age which is the most important, their entrance into the polite world. Of the last of these, and his talents for this end, see Book i. ver. 199, &c.

Ver. 331. Her too receive, &c.] This confirms what the learned Scriblerus advanced in his note on ver. 272, that the governor, as well as the pupil, had a particular interest in this lady.

Ver. 341. Thee too, my Paridel!] The poet seems to speak of this young gentleman with great affection. The name is taken from Spenser, who gives it to a wandering courtly 'squire, that travelled about for the same reason for which many young 'squires are now fond of travelling, and especially to Paris.

 But pour them thickest on the noble head.

 And keep his Lares, though his house be sold ;

To headless Phœbe his fair bride postpone,
 Honour a Syrian prince above his own ;

Lord of an Otho, if I vouch it true ;

Bless'd in one Niger, till he knows of two.' 370

REMARKS.

Ver. 347. Annius,] The name taken from Annius the monk of Viterbo, famous for many impositions and forgeries of ancient manuscripts and inscriptions, which he was prompted to by mere vanity: but our Annius had a more substantial motive.

Ver. 363. Attys and Cecrops.] The first king of Athens, of whom it is hard to suppose any coins are extant; but not so improbable as what follows, that there should be any of Mahomet, who forbade all images; and the story of whose pigeon was a monkish fable. Nevertheless, one of these Annuses made a counterfeit medal of that impostor, now in the collection of a learned nobleman.

Mummius o'erheard him; Mummius, fool-renown'd
 Who like his Cheops stinks above the ground,
 Fierce as a startled adder, swell'd and said,
 Rattling an ancient sistrum at his head:
 'Speak'st thou of Syrian princes? Traitor base!
 Mine, goddess! mine is all the horned race.
 True, he had wit, to make their value rise:
 From foolish Greeks to steal them, was as wise;
 More glorious yet, from barbarous hands to keep,
 When Sallee rovers chased him on the deep. 380
 Then taught by Hermes, and divinely bold,
 Down his own throat he risk'd the Grecian gold.
 Received each demi-god, with pious care,
 Deep in his entrails—I revered them there;
 I bought them, shrouded in that living shrine,
 And, at their second birth, they issue mine'

REMARKS.

Ver. 371. Mummius.] This name is not merely an allusion to the Mummius he was so fond of, but probably referred to the Roman general of that name, who burned Corinth, and committed the curious statues to the captain of a ship, assuring him, 'that if they were lost or broken, he should procure others to be made in their stead;' by which it should seem (whatever may be pretended) that Mummius was no virtuoso.

Ibid. Fool-renown'd.] A compound epithet in the Greek manner, renowned by fools, or renowned for making fools.

Ver. 372. Cheops.] A king of Egypt whose body was certainly to be known, as being buried alone in his pyramid, and is therefore more genuine than any of the Cleopatras. This royal mummy, being stolen by a wild Arab, was purchased by the consul of Alexandria, and transmitted to the museum of Mummius; for proof of which he brings a passage in Sandy's Travels, where that accurate and learned voyager assures us that he saw the sepulchre empty, which agrees exactly, saith he, with the time of the theft above-mentioned. But he omits to observe that Herodotus tells the same thing of it in his time.

Ver. 375. Speak'st thou of Syrian princes? &c.] The strange story following, which may be taken for a fiction of the poet, is justified by a true relation in Spon's Voyages. Vaillant (who wrote the History of the Syrian kings as it is to be found on medals) coming from the Levant, where he had been collecting various coins, and being pursued by a

 To prove me, goddess! clear of all design,
 Bid me with Pollio sup, as well as dine:
 There all the learn'd shall at the labour stand,
 And Douglas lend his soft, obstetric hand.'

The goddess, smiling, seem'd to give consent;
 So back to Pollio, hand in hand they went.

corsair of Sallee, swallowed down twenty gold medals. A sudden borasque freed him from the rover, and he got to land with them in his belly. On his road to Avignon he met two physicians, of whom he demanded assistance. One advised purgations, the other vomits. In this uncertainty he took neither, but pursued his way to Lyons, where he found his ancient friend the famous physician and antiquary Dufour, to whom he related his adventure. Dufour, without staying to inquire about the uneasy symptoms of the burthen he carried, first asked him, whether the medals were of the higher empire? He assured him they were. Du'four was ravished with the hope of possessing so rare a treasure; he bargained with him on the spot for the most curious of them, and was to recover them at his own expense.

Ver. 387. Witness great Ammon!] Jupiter Ammon is call'd to witness, as the father of Alexander, to whom those kings succeeded in the division of the Macedonian empire, and whose horns they wore on their medals.

Ver. 394. Douglas.] A physician of great learning and no less taste; above all, curious in what related to Horace, of whom he collected every edition, translation, and comment, to the number of several hundred volumes.

Soft on the paper ruff its leaves I spread,
 Bright with the gilded button tipp'd his head ;
 Then throned in glass and named it Caroline :
 Each maid cried, Charming ! and each youth, Divine.
 Did nature's pencil ever blend such rays, 416
 Such varied light in one promiscuous blaze ?
 Now prostrate ! dead ! behold that Caroline :
 No maid cries, Charming ! and no youth, Divine !
 And lo the wretch ! whose vile, whose insect lust
 Laid this gay daughter of the spring in dust.
 Oh punish him, or to the Elysian shades
 Dismiss my soul, where no carnation fades !'

He ceased, and wept. With innocence of men,
 The accused stood forth, and thus address'd the queen:
 'Of all the enamell'd race, whose silvery wing 421
 Waves to the tepid zephyrs of the spring,
 Or swims along the fluid atmosphere,
 Once brightest shined this child of heat and air.
 I saw, and started from its vernal bower
 The rising game, and chased from flower to flower.
 It fled, I follow'd ; now in hope, now pain ;
 It stopp'd, I stopp'd ; it moved, I moved again.
 At last it fix'd, 'twas on what plant it pleased,
 And where it fix'd, the beauteous bird I seized ; 430
 Rose or carnation was below my care ;
 I meddle, goddess ! only in my sphere.
 I tell the naked fact without disguise,
 And to excuse it, need but show the prize ;
 Whose spoils this paper offers to your eye,
 Fair e'en in death ! this peerless butterfly.'

REMARKS.

Ver. 409. And named it Caroline:] It is a compliment which the florists usually pay to princes and great persons, to give their names to the most curious flowers of their raising: some have been very jealous of vindicating this honour, but none more than that ambitious gardener at Hammersmith, who caused his favourite to be painted on his sign, with this inscription: This is my Queen Caroline.

'My sons!' she answer'd, 'both have done your parts :

Live happy both, and long promote our arts.

But hear a mother, when she recommends

To your fraternal care our sleeping friends. 440

The common soul, of Heaven's more frugal make,

Serves but to keep fools pert and knaves awake ;

A drowsy watchman, that just gives a knock,

And breaks our rest to tell us what's a clock.

Yet by some object every brain is stir'd ;

The dull may waken to a humming-bird ;

The most recluse, discreetly open'd, find

Congenial matter in the cockle kind ;

The mind in metaphysics at a loss,

May wander in a wilderness of moss ; 450

The head that turns at superlunar things,

Poised with a tail, may steer on Wilkins' wings.

'O! would the sons of men once think their eyes,

And reason given them but to study flies !

See nature in some partial narrow shape,

And let the author of the whole escape ;

Learn but to trifle ; or, who most observe,

To wonder at their Maker, not to serve.'

'Be that my task,' replies a gloomy clerk,

Sworn foe to mystery, yet divinely dark ; 460

Whose pious hope aspires to see the day

as it seems evident, that facts of a thousand years old, for instance, are now as probable as they were five hundred years ago ; it is plain, that if in fifty more they quite disappear, it must be owing, not to their arguments, but to the extraordinary power of our goddess ; for whose help, therefore, they have reason to pray.

atheism was well intended. But how must the reader smile at our author's officious zeal, when he is told, that at the time this was written, you might as soon have found a wolf in England as an atheist? The truth is, the whole species was exterminated. There is a trifling difference, indeed, concerning the author of the achievement. Some, as Dr. Ashenurst, gave it to Bentley's Boylean Lectures. And he so well convinced that great man of the truth, that wherever afterwards he found atheist, he always read it A theist. But, in spite of a claim so well made out, others gave the honour of this exploit to a later Boylean lecturer. A judicious apologist for Dr. Clarke against Mr. Whiston, says, with no less elegance than positiveness of expression, It is a most certain truth, that the Demonstration of the Being and Attributes of God, has extirpated and banished atheism out of the Christian world,' p. 18. It is much to be lamented, that the clearest truths have still their dark side. Here we see it becomes a doubt which of the two Hercules' was the monster-queller. But what of that? Since the thing is done, and the proof of it so certain, there is no occasion for so nice a canvassing of circumstances. Scribl.

Ver. 501. First slave to words, &c.] A recapitulation of the whole course of modern education described in this book, which confines youth to the study of words only in schools; subjects them to the authority of systems in the universities; and deludes them with the names of party distinctions in the world; all equally concurring to narrow the understanding, and establish slavery and error in literature, philosophy, and politics. The whole finished in modern free-thinking: the completion of whatever is vain, wroag and destructive to the happiness of mankind; as it establishes self-love for the sole principle of action.

Ver. 518. —forgets his former friends.] Surely there little needed the force of charms or magic to set aside a useless friendship. For of all the accommodations of fashionable life, as there are none more reputable, so there are none of so little charge as friendship. of our country, the interest, the glory, and service of the prince, supply its place.' De la Republique, chap. x.

Of this duty another celebrated French author speaks indeed a little more disrespectfully; which for that reason we shall not translate, but give in his own words: 'L'amour de la patrie, le grand motif des premiers heros, n'est plus regardé que comme une chimère; l'idée du service du roi étendue jusqu'à l'oubli de tout autre principe, tient lieu de ce qu'on appelloit autrefois grandeur d'ame et fidélité.'—Boulinvilliers Hist. des Anciens Parlements de France, &c.

Ver. 523. Still keep the human shape.] The effects of the Magua's cup, by which is allegorized a total corruption of heart, are just contrary to that of Circe, which only represents the sudden plunging into pleasures. Hers, therefore, took away the shape, and left the human mind; his takes away the mind, and leaves the human shape.

Ver. 529. But she, good goddess, &c.] The only comfort people can receive, must be owing in some shape or other to Dulness; which makes some stupid, others impudent, gives self-conceit to some, upon the flatteries of their dependants, presents the false colours of interest to others, and busies, or amuses the rest with idle pleasures or sensuality, till they become easy under any infamy. Each of which species is here shadowed under allegorical persons.

REMARKS.

Ver. 553. The board with specious miracles he loads, &c.] Scriblerus seems at a loss in this place. Speciosa miracula (says he) according to Horace, were the monstrous fables of the Cyclops, Læstrygons, Scylla, &c. What relation have these to the transformation of hares into larks, or of pigeons into toads? I shall tell thee. The Læstrygons spitted men upon spears as we do larks upon skewers; and the fair pigeon turned to a toad, is similar to the fair virgin Scylla ending in a filthy beast. But here is the difficulty, why pigeons in so shocking a shape should be brought to a table. Hares, indeed, might be cut into larks, at a second dressing, out of frugality: yet that seems no probable motive, when we consider the extravagance before mentioned, of dissolving whole oxen and boars into a small vial of jelly; nay, it is expressly said, that all flesh is nothing in his sight. I have searched in Appicus, Pliny, and the feast of Trimalchio, in vain; I can only resolve it into some mysterious superstitious rite, as it is said to be done by a priest, and soon after called a sacrifice, attended (as all ancient sacrifices were) with libation and song. Scribl.

Ill would that scholiast discharge his duty, who should neglect to honour those whom Dulness has distinguished; or suffer them to lie forgotten, when their rare modesty would have left them nameless. Let us not, therefore, overlook the services which have been done her cause, by one M. Thomas Edwards, a gentleman, as he is pleased to call himself, of Lincoln's-inn; but in reality, a gentleman only of the Dunciad; or, to speak him better, in the plain language of our honest ancestors to such mushrooms, a gentleman of the last edition: who, nobly eluding the solicitude of his careful father, very early retained himself in the cause.

REMARKS.

Dulness against Shakspeare, and with the wit and learning of his ancestor Tom Thimble in the Rehearsal, and with the air of good nature and politeness of Caliban in the Tempest, hath now happily finished the Dunce's progress, in personal abuse. For a libeller is nothing but a Grub-street critic run to seed.

Lamentable is the Dulness of these gentlemen of the Dunciad. This Fungoso and his friends, who are all gentlemen, have exclaimed much against us for reflecting his birth, in the words, 'a gentleman of the last edition,' which we hereby declare concern not his birth, but his adoption only; and mean no more than that he is become a gentleman of the last edition of the Dunciad. Since gentlemen, then, are so captious, we think it proper to declare, that Mr. Thomas Thimble, who is here said to be Mr. Thomas Edward's ancestor, is only related to him by the Muse's side. Scribl.

This tribe of men, which Scriblerus has here so well exemplified, our poet hath elsewhere admirably characterized in that happy line,

A brain of feathers, and a heart of lead.

For the satire extends much farther than to the person who occasioned it, and takes in the whole species of those on whom a good education (to fit them for some useful and learned profession) has been bestowed in vain. That worthless band

Of ever-listless loiterers, that attend
 No cause, no trust, no duty, and no friend;

who, with an understanding too dissipated and futile for the offices of civil life; and a heart too lumpish, narrow, and contracted for those of social, become fit for nothing; and so turn wits and critics, where sense and civility are neither required nor expected.

Ver. 571. Some, deep free-masons, join the silent race.] The poet all along expresses a very particular concern for this silent race. He has here provided, that in case they will not waken or open (as was before proposed) to a humming-bird or a cockle, yet at worst they may be made free-masons; where taciturnity is the only essential qualification, as it was the chief of the disciples of Pythagoras

Nor pass'd the meanest unregarded : one
 Rose a Gregorian, one a Gormogon :
 The last, not least in honour or applause,
 Isis and Cam made Doctors of her laws.
 Then blessing all, 'Go, children of my care,
 To practice now from theory repair. 580
 All my commands are easy, short, and full :
 My sons ! be proud, be selfish, and be dull.
 Guard my prerogative, assert my throne ;
 This nod confirms each privilege your own.
 The cap and switch be sacred to his grace ;
 With staff and pumps the marquis leads the race ;
 From stage to stage the licensed earl may run,
 Pair'd with his fellow-charioteer the sun.
 The learned baron butterflies design,
 Or draw to silk Arachne's subtle line ; 590

REMARKS.

Ver. 576. A Gregorian, one a Gormogon:] A sort of lay-brothers, slips from the roots of the free-masons.

Ver. 584. Each privilege your own, &c.] This speech of Dulness to her sons at parting, may possibly fall short of the reader's expectation ; who may imagine the goddess might give them a charge of more consequence, and, from such a theory as is before delivered, incite them to the practice of something more extraordinary, than to personate running footmen, jockeys, stage-coachmen, &c.

But if it be well-considered, that whatever inclination they might have to do mischief, her sons are generally rendered harmless by their inability ; and that it is the common effect of Dulness (even in her greatest efforts) to defeat her own design ; the poet, I am persuaded, will be justified, and it will be allowed that these worthy persons, in their several ranks, do as much as can be expected from them.

Ver. 585. The cap and switch, &c.] The goddess's political balance of favour, in the distribution of her rewards, deserves our notice. It consists of joining with those honours claimed by birth and high place, others more adapted to the genius and talents of the candidates. And thus her great forerunner, John of Leyden, king of Munster, entered on his government by making his ancient friend and companion, Knipperdolling, general of his horse, and hangman. And had but fortune seconded his great schemes of reformation, it is said he would have established his whole household on the same reasonable footing. Scribl.

Ver. 590. Arachne's subtle line:] This is one of the most ingenious employments assigned, and therefore recom

The judge to dance his brother serjeant call,
 The senator at cricket urge the ball ;
 The bishop stow (pontific luxury !)
 A hundred souls of turkeys in a pie ;
 The sturdy 'squire to Gallic masters stoop,
 And drown his lands and manors in a soup.
 Others import yet nobler arts from France,
 Teach kings to fiddle, and make senates dance.
 Perhaps more high some daring son may soar,
 Proud to my list to add one monarch more. 600
 And, nobly conscious, princes are but things

REMARKS.

mended only to peers of learning. Of weaving stockings or the webs of spiders, see the Phil. Trans.

Ver. 591. The judge to dance his brother serjeant call ;] Alluding perhaps to that ancient and solemn dance, entitled, A call of sergeants.

Ver. 598. Teach kings to fiddle.] An ancient amusement of sovereign princes (viz.) Achilles, Alexander, Nero ; though described by Themistocles, who was a republican.—Make senates dance, either after their prince, or to Poinoise, or Siberia.

Ver. 606. What mortal can resist the yawn of gods ?] This verse is truly Homeric ; as is the conclusion of the action, where the great mother composes all, in the same manner as Minerva at the period of the Odyssey. It may indeed, seem a very singular epitasis of a poem, to end as this does, with a great yawn ; but we must consider it as the yawn of a god, and of powerful effects. It is not out of nature ; most long and grave councils concluding in this very manner : nor without authority, the incomparable Spenser having ended one of the most considerable of his works with a roar ; but then it is the roar of a lion ; the effects thereof are described as the catastrophe of the poem.

Ver. 607. Churches and chapels, &c.] The progress of the yawn is judicious, natural, and worthy to be noted

Then catch'd the schools; the Hall scarce kept awake;
 The convocation gaped, but could not speak: 610
 Lost was the nation's sense, nor could be found,
 While the long solemn unison went round:
 Wide, and more wide, it spread o'er all the realm,
 E'en Palinurus nodded at the helm;
 The vapour mild o'er each committee crept;
 Unfinish'd treaties in each office slept;
 And chiefless armies dozed out the campaign!
 And navies yawn'd for orders on the main.
 O muse! relate (for you can tell alone,
 Wits have short memories, and dunces none) 620

REMARKS.

First it seizeth the churches and chapels, then catcheth the schools, where, though the boys be unwilling to sleep, the masters are not. Next Westminster-hall, much more hard, indeed, to subdue, and not totally got to silence even by the goddess. Then the convocation, which though extremely desirous to speak, yet cannot. Even the house of commons, justly called the sense of the nation, is lost (that is to say suspended) during the yawn; (far be it from our author to suggest it could be lost any longer!) but it spreadeth at large over all the rest of the kingdom to such a degree, that Palinuros himself (though as incapable of sleeping as Jupiter) yet noddeth for a moment; the effect of which, though ever so momentary, could not but cause some relaxation for the time, in all public affairs. Scribl.

Ver. 610. The convocation gaped, but could not speak;] Implying a great desire so to do, as the learned schoolist on the place rightly observes. Therefore, beware, reader, lest thou take this gape for a yawn, which is attended with no desire but to go to rest, by no means the disposition of the convocation; whose melancholy case in short is this: she was, as is reported, infected with the general influence of the goddess; and while she was yawning carelessly at her ease, a wanton courtier took her at advantage, and in the very nick clapped a gag into her chops. Well, therefore, may we know her meaning by her gaping; and this distressful posture our poet here describes, just as she stands at this day, a sad example of the effects of Dulness and Malice, unchecked and despised. Bentl.

Ver. 615, 618. These verses were written many years ago, and may be found in the state poems of that time. So that Scriblerus is mistaken, or whoever else have imagined this poem of a fresher date.

Ver. 620. Wits have short memories,]) This seems to Relate who first, who last resign'd to rest,

 Whose heads she partly, whose completely bless'd:
 What charms could faction, what ambition lull,
 The venal quiet, and entrance the dull;
 Till drown'd was sense, and shame, and right, and wrong—

O sing, and hush the nations with thy song!

* * * * *

In vain, in vain, the all-composing hour
 Resistless falls! the muse obeys the power
 She comes! she comes! the sable throne behold
 Of night primeval, and of Chaos old! 630

REMARKS.

be the reason why the poets, when they give us a catalogue, constantly call for help on the muses, who, as the daughters of memory, are obliged not to forget any thing. So Homer, Iliad B. II.

Πληθύν δ' ουκ αν εγω μυθησομαι ουδ' ονομηνω,
 Ει μη 'Ολυμπιαδες Μουσαι, Διος αιγιοχοιο
 Θυγατρις, μησαιαδ'—

And Virgil, Æn. VII.

Et meministis enim, divæ, et memore potestis:
 Ad nos vix tenuis famæ perlabitur aura.

But our poet had yet another reason for putting this task upon the muse, that, all besides being asleep, she only could relate what passed.

Scribl.

Ver. 624. The venal quiet, and, &c.] It were a problem worthy the solution of Mr. Ralph and his patron, who had lights that we know nothing of, which required the greatest effort of our goddess's power—to entrance the dull, or to quiet the venal. For though the venal may be more unruly than the dull, yet, on the other hand, it demands a much greater expense of her virtue to entrance than barely to quiet.

Scribl.

Ver. 629. She comes! she comes! &c.] Here the muse, like Jove's eagle, after a sudden stoop at ignoble game, soareth again to the skies. As prophecy hath ever been one of the chief provinces of poesy, our poet here foretels from what we feel, what we are to fear; and, in the style of other prophets, hath used the future tense for the preterit; since what he says shall be, is already to be seen in the writings of some even of our most adored authors, in divinity, philosophy, physics, metaphysics, &c. who are too good, in deed, to be named in such company.

Before her, fancy's gilded clouds decay,
 And all its varying rainbows die away.
 Wit shoots in vain his momentary fires,
 The meteor drops, and in a flash expires,
 As one by one, at dread Medea's strain,
 The sickening stars fade off the ethereal plain;
 As Argus' eyes, by Hermes' wand oppress'd,
 Closed one by one to everlasting rest;
 Thus at her felt approach, and secret might,
 Art after art goes out, and all is night: 640
 See skulking truth to her old cavern fled,
 Mountains of casuistry heap'd o'er her head!
 Philosophy, that lean'd on Heaven before,
 Shrinks to her second cause, and is no more.
 Physic of metaphysic begs defence,
 And metaphysic calls for aid on sense!
 See mystery to mathematics fly!
 In vain! they gaze, turn giddy, rave, and die.
 Religion, blushing, veils her sacred fires,
 And unawares morality expires 650

REMARKS.

[Ibid. The sable throne behold.] The sable thrones of Night and Chaos, here represented as advancing to extinguish the light of the sciences, in the first place blot out the colours of fancy, and damp the fire of wit, before they proceed to their work.

Ver. 641. Truth to her old cavern fled,] Alluding to the saying of Democritus, that 'Truth lay at the bottom of a deep well, from whence he had drawn her;' though Butler says, 'He first put her in, before he drew her out.'

Ver. 649. Religion, blushing, veils her sacred fires,] Blushing as well at the memory of the past overflow of Dulness, when the barbarous learning of so many ages was wholly employed in corrupting the simplicity, and defiling the purity of religion, as at the view of these her false supports in the present; of which it would be endless to recount the particulars. However, amidst the extinction of all other lights, she is said only to withdraw hers! as hers alone in its own nature is unextinguishable and eternal.

Ver. 650. And unawares morality expires.] It appears from hence that our poet was of very different sentiments from the author of the Characteristics, who has written a formal treatise on virtue, to prove it not only real, but durable without the support of religion. The word Unaware alludes to the confidence of those men who suppose that morality would flourish best without it, and consequently to the surprise such would be in (if any such there are) who, indeed, love virtue, and yet do all they can to root out the religion of their country.

FRIENDSHIP'S OFFERING.

A CHRISTMAS, NEW-YEAR, AND BIRTH-DAY GIFT.

A new volume of this work is published every autumn, each one of which, both in letter-press and engravings, is entirely new and complete in itself. For the convenience of those who may wish to possess uniform sets of the work, a uniformity of style in the binding has been carefully observed, which will always be found to be in splendid arabesque morocco, gilt edges. It is also embellished with nine beautiful mezzotint engravings, by Sartain. 1 vol. 12mo.

CHRISTMAS ROSES,

AND NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

This work is designed for a handsome presentation book for the young, and is acknowledged by all to be the most elegant Juvenile Gift Book that has ever been published in this country. It is elegantly bound in English muslin, richly gilt sides and edges, and embellished with six splendid mezzotint engravings, and colored illuminations.—Small 4to.

HEROES OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

LIVES OF THE HEROES OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION :—Comprising the lives of Washington and his Generals and Officers who were most distinguished in the War of the Independence of the United States. Also, embracing the Declaration of Independence and signers' names; the Constitution of the United States and amendments; together with the Inaugural, first Annual, and Farewell Addresses of Washington. Complete in one volume, 12mo., illustrated; bound in handsome muslin and morocco.

This work contains the lives of Washington and nearly twenty of his officers and associates in the great struggle which resulted in the peace, union and strength which we now so eminently enjoy. It will be found a very valuable acquisition to the public or private library, as the perusal of no one volume in the English language will give the reader such a general idea of the leading incidents of the revolution as this.

LIFE OF WASHINGTON.

THE LIFE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE AMERICAN ARMY, THROUGH THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR, AND THE FIRST PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES: BY AARON BANCROFT, D. D.

“General Washington was from his youth devoted to his country; his character therefore cannot be portrayed without bringing into view many important public transactions. It has been the endeavor of the author to display the character of the man who is the subject of the work, by exhibiting in a connected view his actions and his writings; and he has, as far as possible, made this exhibition in the person of General Washington.”

In giving the lives of the conspicuous men of any period, it is believed the best history of that period is given; and in this instance, in giving the life of Washington, it is believed to combine with it a very graphic account of the prominent events and struggles of the American Revolution.

The whole is contained in one neat volume, 12mo., illustrated and handsomely bound in cloth.

THE AMARANTH:

OR, TOKEN OF REMEMBRANCE.

This work is issued annually, with entirely new matter, and is elegantly bound in morocco, richly gilt sides and edges, and is embellished with six beautiful steel engravings, by the first artists.—1 vol. 12mo.

COWPER'S POEMS.

THE COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS OF WILLIAM COWPER, TOGETHER WITH HIS POSTHUMOUS POETRY, AND A SKETCH OF HIS LIFE, BY DOCTOR JOHNSON.—Fine Portrait.

This is acknowledged to be the most complete edition of Cowper published in this country; and is bound in 1 vol. 12mo, muslin, plain edges; do. gilt and elegant Saxony, gilt sides and edges.

---

ADVICE TO YOUNG LADIES.

ADVICE TO YOUNG LADIES, ON THEIR DUTIES AND CONDUCT IN LIFE: BY T. S. ARTHUR, AUTHOR OF "ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN," "THE MAIDEN," "WIFE," AND "MOTHER," &c. &c.

In his introduction, the author says: "Right modes of thinking are the basis of all correct action. This is just as true of one sex as the other. Although man has the power of abstract thought, and the faculty of reasoning, in a higher degree than woman, yet woman is none the less a rational being, and must, in all the various relations in life, come under the guidance of right reason." 1 vol. large 18mo., bound in gilt and plain bindings.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

LIFE AND CAMPAIGNS OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE : Giving an account of all his engagements, from the siege of Toulon to the battle of Waterloo ; also embracing accounts of the daring exploits of his Marshals ; together with his public and private life, from the commencement of his career to his final imprisonment and death on the rock of St. Helena. Translated from the French of M. A. Arnault and C. L. F. Pauckoucke. New edition, in one volume, illustrated.

This is unquestionably the most authentic, impartial, and complete life of this great General now before the American public. The translator says in his preface : " In ushering these memoirs of the life of Napoleon Bonaparte into the world, we have not confined ourselves to the splendid work of M. A. Arnault ; but, in order to furnish a faithful narrative, public, political, and private, have availed ourselves of every species of information afforded by different authorities, from the commencement of the career of the departed hero, to the closing scene of his last hours at St. Helena.

BURNS' POETICAL WORKS.

THE POETICAL WORKS OF ROBERT BURNS, INCLUDING SEVERAL PIECES NOT INSERTED IN DR. CURRIE'S EDITION ; EXHIBITED UNDER A NEW PLAN OF ARRANGEMENT, AND PRECEDED BY A LIFE OF THE AUTHOR, AND COMPLETE GLOSSARY.

In comparing this edition with others, it will be found to possess several advantages. It contains, besides a number of other pieces not inserted in Dr. Currie's edition, The Jolly Beggars, a cantata replete with humorous description and discrimination of character ; as also his celebrated Holy Willie's Prayer, a piece of satire unequalled for exquisite severity and felicitous delineation.

In the editions hitherto published, no regard is paid to method or classification. In this, the poems are disposed according to their respective subjects, and divided into books.

This edition is all comprised in one very neat 12mo. volume, with a beautiful portrait, and may be had in the various elegant and plain styles of binding described above.

PILGRIM'S PROGRESS.

THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS FROM THIS WORLD TO THAT WHICH IS TO COME: DELIVERED UNDER THE SIMILITUDE OF A DREAM, — BY JOHN BUNYAN. ALSO, CONTAINING ORIGINAL NOTES, AND A LIFE OF THE AUTHOR, BY THE REV. THOMAS SCOTT, CHAPLAIN TO THE LOCK HOSPITAL.

Bunyan says of this work, that when formed into a book, and shown to his friends,

“Some said, John, print it; others said, Not so;
Some said, It might do good; others said, No.”

The public will not hesitate in determining which opinion was the result of the deeper penetration; but will wonder that a long apology for such a publication should have been deemed necessary, when it is stated, that perhaps this work has had a more universal and lasting sale than any other in the English language, save that of the Bible.

The work is complete in 1 vol. 12mo., embellished with fine engravings, and is done up in plain and rich bindings, suited to the tastes and means of all classes.

MILTON AND YOUNG.

CONTAINING PARADISE LOST, IN TWELVE PARTS, BY JOHN MILTON;—AND NIGHT THOUGHTS ON LIFE, DEATH AND IMMORTALITY; TO WHICH IS ADDED, THE FORCE OF RELIGION, BY EDWARD YOUNG, D. D.

This volume is printed in very neat style, with line around the page, and contains a fine portrait of Milton; and is bound in the varieties spoken of above in connection with Cowper's Poems.
